ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The booklist which makes up Realms of Gold has grown out of the work and activities of The Bookshop for Boys and Girls, Boston, which was opened in 1916 with its special interest then as now in books for young people. The Bookshop was made possible by Mrs. Mary Morton Kehew, then President of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, of which The Bookshop is a department. Without her whole-hearted faith in the venture the work would not have taken such strong root.

In the work of The Bookshop and particularly in this booklist we wish to acknowledge the great help we have found in the Children's Catalog of the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, the A. L. A. Children's Catalog, the A. L. A. Booklist, and the A. L. A. Catalog 1926. It is impossible to conceive of what a day in The Bookshop would be without these books to turn to for their complete and reliable information.

We wish to thank the publishers from whose books we have taken extracts and illustrations for their permission to do so and for the great addition these have made to our booklist. We also thank Miss Alice M. Jordan of the Boston Public Library and Miss Anne Eaton of the Lincoln School of Teachers' College, Columbia, for reading critically sections of this manuscript.

Our intention at the outset was to include material on present-day illustrators and much interesting and valuable material was collected from the illustrators themselves for this purpose. To avoid making an unwieldy volume this has not been included but it is our intention to print it in pamphlet form and we shall hope to have this available in 1929.

PREFACE

A "JUVENILE BOOKSTORE" is not a Twentieth Century or even a United States project. John Newbery, of London, although only about half of his publications in his business career, between 1740 and 1767, were little books for children, had "Juvenile Library" in the place of honor over his door, while "Bookseller and Stationer" was on each side and "School Supplies" above. He might have added "Patent Medicines," which were a part of his stock in trade that he left by his will to his son Francis, who after a dozen years gave up the bookselling business, which passed into the hands of his cousin and namesake, whose wife afterward carried on the business. By 1800 it was owned by John Harris, who kept on at the old stand for about thirty years, when the firm name became Griffith & Farran, who published books until 1910.

Not long after Harris's name appeared on the sign there were at least three other Juvenile Libraries in London, and the owners of two of them followed Newbery's example in advertising their wares in their story books. At the end of the first edition of Goody Two-Shoes (1766) is a list of forty-two "Books usually read by the scholars of Mrs. Two-Shoes, sold at Mr. Newbery's, at the Bible and Sun in St. Paul's Churchyard"; and in the story itself, the "Travelling Tutoress" sang to one of her pupils "'The Cuzz's Chorus,' which may be found in The Little Pretty Plaything, published by Mr. Newbery."

Tabard & Co., at the Juvenile and School Library, No. 157 New Bond Street, pursued the same course in Visits to the Juvenile Library, 1805, with illustrations said to be by William Blake, but probably only engraved, not designed, by him. Five spoiled children are encouraged to love reading by a visit to the Library, of which a view is given in one of the four copperplate "embellishments." "'What, are all these books written for children?' they were ready to exclaim," and went away with several volumes apiece, ingeniously advertised by name.

In the same year William Godwin, novelist, biographer, historian, and political writer, but better known now as the husband of Mary Wollstonecraft and the father of Mary Shelley, had hard work to provide for his composite family, which included his first wife's daughter and his own, besides his second wife's two Clairmont children and his and her baby. Mrs. Godwin, being or believing herself a woman of some business ability, opened at 41 Skinner Street, Holborn, a Juvenile and School Library, for publishing and selling books in her own name. In order that her husband might not be known to be doing work beneath the dignity of a grave historian he wrote several little historical books for the Library under the name of Baldwin, his foreman, and Theophilus Marcliffe. Charles and Mary Lamb, who were friends of the Godwins, wrote for the Skinner Street house their Tales from Shakespeare and Poetry for Children. Charles retold The Adventures of Ulysses in prose and put into verse Prince Dorus and The King and Queen of Hearts, which were illustrated by Mulready, and wrote one or two of the stories in Mary's Mrs. Leicester's School. In this book the Juvenile Library is advertised as ingeniously as St. Paul's Churchyard is brought before the public in Goody Two-Shoes. Emily Barton's words are: "Pa said, 'Emily shall take home some little books. Shall we order the coachman to the corner of St. Paul's Churchyard, or shall we go to the Juvenile Library in Skinner Street?' Mamma said she would go to Skinner Street, for she wanted to look at the new buildings there. Papa brought me seven new books, and the lady in the shop persuaded him to take more, but mamma said that was quite enough at present."

Mrs. Godwin's Juvenile Library was in Skinner Street till 1823, when the family was entangled in a lawsuit and obliged to move. The latest imprint that I have seen is of 1824: "Printed for M. J. Godwin & Co. At the French and English Juvenile and School Library, 195 (St. Clement's) Strand."

Title pages show that John Sharpe had a Juvenile Library in the London Museum, Piccadilly, in 1818, and that H. R. Thomas published and sold books in another in Hanover Street, Hanover Square, in 1826. A small edition of Watts's "Divine Songs, in easy language, for the use of children," was published by G. Ross in Edinburgh without date, and sold for twopence. On the cover is printed inside an oval, "From Ross's Juvenile Library."

In Philadelphia, in 1802, Benjamin Johnson sold books for children at 31 High Street, and Jacob Johnson later at 171, which was called the Juvenile Library, as a cover dated 1819 shows, although the title page bears the imprint, "Johnson and Warner, 1810."

Four books in my collection have on the pasteboard covers, "Published and sold by H. Conrad and E. Parsons, corner of Fourth and Ches[t]nut Streets, [1835]"; but two have on the title pages the imprint of John Sharpe, London Museum, 1818, one had Tabard & Co.'s "at the Juvenile and School Library, 157 New Bond Street, March 1st, 1805," and the fourth was printed in London, 1823, for three other firms, without the Juvenile Library name. The four books are in excellent condition, "as new," and were evidently bought at a trade sale in London and brought over in sheets.

Morgan & Keaser had a Juvenile Bookstore at 14 Chestnut Street, and published books "embellished with neat coloured engravings," undated but with costumes of about 1820.

William Wood, an English member of the Society of Friends, had a Juvenile Bookstore at 357 Pearl Street, New York, from 1806 till about 1822, when his son William became his partner and the firm began the business of publishing medical books, which it has continued ever since.

Mahlon Day had a Juvenile Bookstore at 374 and 376 Pearl Street, though he dropped the "Juvenile" after 1835.

These are all the juvenile bookstores of which I have found record on title pages, but there were others that might have borne the name, established by Darton in London, King in New York, Munroe & Francis in Boston, and Sidney Babcock of New Haven and Charleston, some of whose toy and paste-board-covered books were written by "Thomas Teller" (George Tuttle). Pease & Co., Fisk & Little, and William B. Sprague sold colored picture books in Albany between 1830 and 1850.

*Much have I travell'd in the realms of gold,
And many goodly states and kingdoms seen;
Round many western islands have I been
Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
Oft of one wide expanse had I been told
That deep-brow'd Homer ruled as his demesne;
Yet did I never breathe its pure serene
Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:
Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He star'd at the Pacific—and all his men
Look'd at each other with a wild surmise—
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.*

FIVE CENTURIES OF CHILDREN'S BOOKS

THE beginnings of these "Realms of Gold" can be traced back for at least five centuries. That this Twentieth Century is a golden age for children will not be disputed. Such a book list as this is an instance of but one way in which they have come into their own. The vein of gold was threadlike and hidden at first, but gradually it has widened, opened, and deepened until this present richness is exposed. Attempts are now made to understand the child, to recognize his individuality, and to provide him as large a measure of enjoyment as possible. In this chapter we aim to show when and how and through whose influence these ideas as to education in general and the growth of a children's literature in particular have come into being. It must be a short sketch merely to provide simple orientation in this delightful field, and for much of it we are directly indebted to the books which are listed at the end of the chapter.

In the history of the book, books for children appear very late. This is easily understood when we remember how expensive books were through the Middle Ages, when the making of the hand-lettered, illuminated book flourished on the Continent and in England. At a time when houses and lands were sometimes given in exchange for a single volume it is not strange that few books for children were made. The few that may be so considered were books of instruction in dialogue style as The Babees Book, or a Little Report of How Young People Should Behave (1475), and such Latin books as were available only to the children attending monastery schools. The only real story book of the Middle Ages was also in Latin—the Gesta Romanorum, but undoubtedly children as well as grown-ups enjoyed these stories, which were variants of the Arabian Tales, and many other stories now familiar because drawn freely upon by such writers as Chaucer, Boccaccio, and Shakespeare. However, they would perhaps be better considered in a sketch of story-telling, for undoubtedly it was in this way that they came to children.

Even after William Caxton had set up the first printing press in England in 1477, books did not immediately increase. Before 1500 only one hundred and forty-one books were printed in England. While Caxton was printing for their elders the stories of Troy, Sir Thomas Mallory's Noble Histories of King Arthur, Æsop's Fables, The History of Reynard the Fox—in fact, just the books which in the 1700's John Locke recommends for children—he was printing for boys and girls lesson books which seem strange indeed to us, and solemn treatises on conduct. According to one of these early lesson books—The Wyse Chyld of Three Yere Old—"man was made of the slyme of the earth, his blood of sea-water, his bones of stone, his breath of the wind, his eyes of the sun, while his soul was given of the Holy Ghost."

Even with the early lesson books there are signs that children were not expected to own or handle them freely, but toward the end of the 1500's the horn book was designed for the child's own. The reproduction shows the shape of the horn book which was a sheet of vellum (later paper) covered with transparent horn. The usual lettering was: a large crisscross (or Christ's Cross); then the alphabet in large and small letters; the vowels; the combination of vowels and consonants given in tabular form; the exorcism "In the name of the Father, the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Amen"; the Lord's Prayer; and the Roman Numerals.

About 1770, perhaps even earlier, a variation of the horn book, called a battledore, appeared. This was three leaves of cardboard which folded together. It contained the alphabet, numerals, and easy reading lessons, but never any religious teaching. Occasionally a short fable or didactic story appears. The battledore was invented by Benjamin Collins of Salisbury, became very popular, and was used as late as 1840.

The first edition of the famous New England Primer was issued by Benjamin Harris of Boston in 1691. It contained first the alphabet in couplets and triplets from then the Lord's Prayer, the Creed and the Catechism, some of Watts's hymns, John Cotton's "Spiritual Milk for American Babes," and ended with the famous dialogue between Christ, a Youth, and the Devil.

His Lord to see;

The Puritan influence cast its stern and gloomy shadow over what little literature there was for children through the 1600's and the first half of the 1700's. While such books as Godly Children Their Parent's Joy, Young People Warned, The Voice of God in the Late Terrible Throat Distemper, etc., were current in England and America, it is pleasant to think that it was otherwise in France. English children found some relief in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's

Progress (1678), though it was not intended for them, but French children had a real friend in Charles Perrault. He brought together a group of old stories current among the people for centuries and told by a nurse to him and to his son: "Sleeping Beauty," "Little Red Riding Hood," "Bluebeard," "Puss in Boots," "The Fairies," "Hop o' my Thumb," "Riquet of the Tuft," and "Little Thumbling." He gave this collection of stories the title Tales of My Mother Goose (Contes de Ma Mère L'Oye). They were not translated and printed in England until 1729.

Every now and then you come upon retellings of the legend that the Real Mother Goose was a certain Elizabeth Vergoose of Boston, and although you may be shown Mother Goose's grave in the Old Granary Burying Ground there is no foundation for this story. Perrault's fairy tales in 1699 had a frontispiece showing an old woman telling stories to an interested group of children. Upon a placard by her side was lettered the title "Contes de Ma Mère L'Oye." Some scholars even claim that the name goes back to the mother of Charlemagne, who is said to have had the title Queen Goose-foot (Reine Pedauque).

About this time there were circulated among the common people in England ballads in broadside form—Bevis, Adam Bell, Guy of Warwick, Friar Bacon, and Friar Bungay, the Robin Hood series, and many others. These ballads, although then considered sinfully frivolous, undoubtedly found their way into the hands of children and grown-ups of the upper classes. It was these ballads, too, which formed many of the chapbooks of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries, rude little books not intended for children at all, but it is interesting to note, as Mrs. Field points out,¹ the stories that have lasted longest are those that children enjoyed—"Jack the Giant Killer," "The Babes in the Wood," "Tom Thumb," etc.

From "The Christmas Carol," Illustrated by Arthur Rackham. (J. B. Lippincott & Co.)

By the end of the 1600's people had begun to think of children as being individuals like themselves and entitled to some life of their own as children, largely through the influence of John Locke's book, Some Thoughts Concerning Education, published in 1693. Locke urged the importance of physical education, put the rod into disrepute, invented games, and generally preached the theory of teaching children "as rational creatures" how to think, not what to think.

So we reach the Eighteenth Century but discover that still there are few books which children can properly call their own, and as regards themselves they must have been sad-eyed youngsters indeed, living very consciously within the sight and sound and smell of hell fire.

The middle of the 1700's marks the first milestone in the making of books to give joy to children, and it is that "ebullient bookseller" of St. Paul's Churchyard, John Newbery, who is in himself this milestone. He made gay little books bound in flowered gilt Dutch papers that were hand-colored by children themselves. With the writing and publishing of books for children he combined the sale of patent medicines, particularly the fever powders of his friend, Dr. James, and he was very ingenious in introducing his medicines into his stories. Oliver Goldsmith came to do much writing of little books for Newbery, although his name was not signed to them, and Newbery kept Goldsmith in funds by doling out to him a guinea or two at a time.

The two most famous books that have brought John Newbery's name down through the years are Mother Goose's Melody (about 1760), that jolly collection of nonsense verses which are for most children to-day the first introduction to literature, and Goody Two Shoes—The History of Margery Two Shoes (1765). The Preface to Mother Goose's Melody traced most of these verses to British nurses, but it seems likely that Goldsmith, too, had some part in them. The book became so popular that there followed many similar collections, just as there have appeared lately many imitations of When We Were Very Young; but Monroe and Francis, publishers in Boston, insisted that John Newbery's book was the original and authentic collection and republished it here about 1824. Goody Two Shoes is commonly ascribed to Oliver Goldsmith, too. Charles Welsh, who republished it in Boston in 1882, said that he found in the Introduction an exact picture of the "Deserted Village" in the parish of Mouldwell, where little Margery's father suffered the "wicked persecutions of Sir Timothy Gripe and an overgrown farmer called Graspall." The introduction is indeed a miniature essay on land reform. Many of Newbery's books were reprinted in America in the years 1749-1831, chiefly by Isaiah Thomas of Boston and Worcester. The advertisements were taken over, too, but edited to suit an American public. It is on account of his important place in the history of children's books that the Newbery medal was instituted in 1922, to be awarded each year to the finest book for children by an American author.

Now we have reached a time when books are really written for children, but the governing idea of them is to teach. The writers of this period are called "didactic." Isaac Watts is one of the earliest members of this group. Ann and Jane Taylor follow Watts after a span of years (Ann, 1782-1866; Jane, 1783-1824). In 1803, Darton and Harvey published their Original Poems for Infant Minds, in which they strove through poems like "Meddlesome Matty," "Heedless Eliza," "Lucy the Chatterbox" to emphasize by contrast the virtues children should cultivate. Then there was Mrs. Barbauld (1745-1825). She is best known for her Evenings at Home (three volumes), which she wrote with her brother, Dr. Aikin. Of this, Maria Edgeworth wrote to her aunt in May, 1794, "We are reading a new book for children, Evenings at Home, which we admire extremely." Mrs. Barbauld tried to introduce children to the beauties of nature and the wonder of creation. Miss Barry says:

"It is Mrs. Barbauld's use of the words 'wonder' and 'delight' which sets her apart from other writers of little books, for it shows something like the spirit of romantic poetry."¹

It was Mrs. Barbauld's influence that prompted Mrs. Trimmer to write her Easy Introduction to the Knowledge of Nature, and later, The History of the Robins, which is full of imaginative charm.

In Maria Edgeworth we have an important writer of this "didactic" group, but owing to her father's advanced theories of education and her own native genius she progresses above and beyond the others. Her children's books—The Parent's Assistant and Moral Tales—were the first to present stories with plots for children. They were the first, too, in which there was fine characterization of both grown-ups and children. Their fault is that they were written to teach, but children are eager to learn about life and the world and would to-day undoubtedly enjoy many of these stories—especially "The White Pigeon" and "The Basket Woman." Miss Barry's summing up of Miss Edgeworth's fault is delightfully understanding: "If she never understood the 'fairy way of writing,' it was because she had built a school upon the fairy circle of her village green. Her children were so happy in and about the village that they never discovered the enchanted wood; they planted trees instead of climbing them; they knew all about the roads to Market, but nobody showed them their way to fairyland."²

²*Ibid.*, p. 193.

Richard Edgeworth, as the central figure. She helped her father to write Practical Education (1798), in which he tried to embody his own theories of education and those of his friend, Thomas Day. Both were admirers of Rousseau, who went farther than Locke of the preceding century and said: "A child needs no other teacher than Experience, no school-room but the open country which is also his playground; all that the tutor need do is to enter into his interests and amusements as an equal, and watch over him while he educates himself." Rousseau admitted no books in the early years of a child's life, and none of that reasoning Locke considered so important.

As a flash of sheer genius Blake's Songs of Innocence happened in this same period (1787). Very soon after Songs of Innocence came three other books, different from any published before and different from those for years following—Tales from Shakespeare and Mrs. Leicester's School, by Charles and Mary Lamb, and The Adventures of Ulysses, by Charles Lamb alone. They differed from other books of their time because, like Songs of Innocence, they were written not to instruct or to point a moral, but as real literature for children. Tales from Shakespeare and The Adventures of Ulysses are important also as the first retelling of the classics for children.

After these books, more stiffly religious and Sunday-school stories written to pattern continue to come well into the 1800's, with Mrs. Sherwood and her Fairchild Family in England, and Elizabeth Wetherell (Susan Warner) and her Wide Wide World and Queechy in America; Mrs. Gatty and her Parables of Nature in England, and Samuel Goodrich (Peter Parley) and his well-known books in America.

The strong new notes struck by the Edgeworths, by William Blake, by Charles and Mary Lamb, and the French fairy-tale writers were to be the dominating influences of the Nineteenth Century. How the range of children's interests had widened. In very nearly every large grouping of the book list that makes up this book we have a representation from this period. Now came a recognition of the power of imagination and the importance of cultivating it in children. Fairy tales came to have a respectable place. Grimm was translated, and Andersen's Tales. The Arabian Nights, Æsop's Fables, and De la Motte Fouqué's Sintram and Undine were republished for children. So, too, were those earlier "classics not written for children but appropriated by them": Robinson Crusoe (1714), Gulliver's Travels (1726), and Baron Munchausen's Narrative of His Marvelous Travels and Campaigns in Russia, by Raspe (1785). Charles Kingsley retold the beautiful stories of the mighty men of Greece. Dickens, Scott, and Charlotte Yonge turned to history. Thackeray found time to write a delightful nonsense story. John Ruskin edited an edition of Dame Wiggins of Lee and wrote his fairy tale The King of the Golden River. George Macdonald, breaking away from the strong traditional bonds of Knox and of Calvin and standing for simplicity and freedom in religion, wrote for children the beautiful fairy allegories The Princess and the Goblin, The Princess and Curdie, At the Back of the North Wind, and that lovely Light Princess. Mrs. Juliana Horatio Ewing was living in army posts over the British Empire and writing stories finely realistic, such as Jackanapes, The Story of a Short Life, Jan of the Windmill, A Flatiron for a Farthing. At the same time Louisa Alcott in New England was writing her Little Women, Little Men, Jo's Boys, and many others. In this century, too, in England Harriet Martineau wrote Feats on the Fiord, one of the first good stories that gave at the same time a true picture of life in a foreign country. Her Crofton Boys and Thomas Hughes's Tom Brown at Rugby were the forerunners of the present school story. About the same time in America, Jacob Abbott wrote his historical biographies for young people and followed them with the Rollo books, Jonas books, Lucy books, and Franconia stories—some two hundred volumes in all. Alice in Wonderland, too, is one of the English masterpieces of this period of children's literature.

With this Nineteenth Century development of books for children came a corresponding development in the illustrating and the make-up of them. It is a long step from that first picture book, Orbis Pictus, or The World in Pictures written by Comenius in 1657 in German and Latin and translated into English in 1658, to the picture books of Randolph Caldecott, Kate Greenaway, and Walter Crane, all of whom worked in the same period of the 1800's. There is in this span a change from one period of history to another, with great changes in thought and education.

The qualities that gave strength, fineness, and permanence to the children's books of this period were those that give strength, fineness, and permanence to any book for young or old any time, anywhere—sincerity, understanding, vision, and excellence of writing. "I am persuaded [said Walter Scott] that children hate books which are written down to their capacity, and love those which are composed more for their elders. . . . I will make, if possible, a book that a child shall understand, yet a man will feel some temptation to peruse should he chance to take it up."

These writers and illustrators whom we have mentioned and who lived and worked in the latter half of the 1800's gave themselves fully and freely to their books for children. They had the secret as Anatole France tells it in My Friend's Book:

"When you are writing for children, do not assume a style for the occasion. Think your best and write your best. Let the whole thing live; let there be plenty of breadth and power. That is the one secret of pleasing your readers."

THE NURSERY

MOTHER GOOSE

ONE of the thrilling bits of present-day understanding is that the subconscious mind of people all over the world and in all ages is one element—like the air. A study of nursery rhymes and folk tales brings you to a fresh realization of this. Many nursery rhymes can be traced back to prehistoric times. The same rhymes have appeared throughout Europe, and similar rhymes among uncivilized people all over the world. One reason for this is the insistence of children and primitive people upon the exact repetition of a rhyme or tale.

Yan, tan, tethera, pethera, pimp,
Sethera, lethera, hovera, covera, dik,
Yan-a-dik, tan-a-dik, tethera-dik, pethera-dik, bumfit,
Tan-a-bumfit, tethera-bumfit, pethera-bumfit, figgit—

so the shepherds of England counted their sheep from time immemorial. Out of such ancient numbering have come the quaint counting-out rhymes used by children at play to-day. "Hickory, Dickory, Dock, The Mouse ran up the Clock," and the rest of it, also had its roots in early numbers.

Many nursery rhymes have their origins in history, some in superstitious beliefs, religious customs or festivals, or the nature myths of early man—his attempts to explain the things he observed: night and day; the sun, moon, and stars; the changes of seasons and the tides.

"Jack and Jill" is believed by scholars to have grown out of a myth of the tides. "London Bridge is falling down, falling down" goes far back to the primitive belief that natural forces demanded human sacrifice when bridges or homes or temples were building. The tradition remains in the play capture of a victim.

The preceding chapter on "Five Centuries of Children's Books" tells of the first collections made of these nursery rhymes. To most children of to-day they are the first introduction to literature. In them they find the joy of rhythm, the interest of words, the feeling of form, the pleasure of repetition, and the surprise of climax. But does it not add to their fascination and charm to know that through them we pick up the gold thread which was touched by children perhaps thousands of years ago?

MOTHER GOOSE IN GAY ATTIRE

Clap hands, clap hands,
Hie, Tommy Randy!
Did you see my good man?
They call him Cock-a-bandy.
Silken stockings on his legs,
Silver buckles glancin',
A sky-blue bonnet on his head,
And oh! but he is handsome.

THE OLD MOTHER GOOSE NURSERY RHYME BOOK

Nelson $2.00

A very generous book, many rhymes, familiar and less familiar, many pictures in both black and white and color. The colors are soft and pleasing, and the pictures full of the "illusion" of Mother Goose's realm.

L. LESLIE BROOKE, Illustrator

RING O' ROSES: A Nursery Rhyme Picture Book

Warne $3.00

Contains: "Oranges and Lemons"; "Man in the Moon"; "Little Bo-peep"; "This Little Pig Went to Market"; "Humpty Dumpty"; "Wee Willie Winkie"; "Little Miss Muffet"; "Simple Simon." These are obtainable separately at $.50 each. Also bound in two books in Nursery Rhyme Picture Books I and II at $2.00 each.

It would be hard to imagine a more perfect picture book than this with its wealth of fine black and white drawings and its numerous full-page pictures in which every line is expressive and the colors are clear and delicate. It is a delight to study the details of the pictures; for each time one discovers something new and amusing. In the full-page colored picture of "This Little Pig Had Roast Beef" there is a picture on the wall of a contented fat pig in his sty entitled "There's No Place Like Home," and the design

"Merry are the Bells & merry do they ring"

CHARLES B. FALLS, Illustrator

MOTHER GOOSE

Doubleday $2.00

Many large colored pictures and an abundant sprinkling of small pictures printed in two colors. About four hundred rhymes.

CHARLES FOLKARD, Illustrator

MOTHER GOOSE'S NURSERY RHYMES. Edited by L.
Edna Walter Macmillan $4.00

A very complete collection of rhymes (about 1,000) with pictures in color and black and white. See also the smaller edition of this listed on page 21.

C. LOVAT FRASER, Illustrator

NURSERY RHYMES Knopf $2.00

A small collection of Mother Goose rhymes with the highly decorative and spirited pictures peculiar to this well-known artist. There are also many small black and white drawings throughout. This makes a nice "second" Mother Goose because of its distinctiveness.

KATE GREENAWAY, Illustrator

MOTHER GOOSE Warne $1.00

A dainty little Mother Goose in decorated shiny white boards. Fifty-two pictures and rhymes. For an appreciation of Kate Greenaway see page 33.

ARTHUR RACKHAM, Illustrator

MOTHER GOOSE Century $3.50

Clear black and white drawings in Rackham's characteristic manner. His fantasy is better suited to the fairy world than to that of Mother Goose, however.

FREDERICK RICHARDSON, Illustrator

THE VOLLAND MOTHER GOOSE, Popular edition, edited by Eulalie L. Grover Volland $2.50

Selections made from the Newbery collection published in 1791 and the edition published in Boston in 1833 by Munroe & Francis. Each rhyme has a full-page picture in well-blended colors but somewhat intricate design. It is enjoyed by children.

JESSIE WILLCOX SMITH, Illustrator

MOTHER GOOSE Dodd $5.00

A large oblong book with full-page pictures, each having the typical and charming Jessie Willcox Smith children for its central interest.

LITTLE MOTHER GOOSE (miniature edition) Dodd $1.50

Same as the large edition listed above with fewer pictures.
Size 8" x 6".

BLANCHE FISHER WRIGHT, Illustrator

THE REAL MOTHER GOOSE Rand $2.00

The many bright-colored pictures of simple composition make this a favorite book for babies.

THE JOLLY MOTHER GOOSE Rand $1.25

This is a satisfactory abridgment of The Real Mother Goose. Some mothers prefer it on account of its lighter weight.

The Real Mother Goose has also been divided into four parts and published under the titles: Polly Flinders, Little Jack Horner, Tommy Titlmouse, Our Child's Favorites. Board covers. Each $.75.

MOTHER GOOSE IN PLAINER DRESS

Birds of a feather flock together,
And so will pigs and swine;
Rats and mice will have their choice,
And so will I have mine.

—Mother Goose.

MOTHER GOOSE IN SILHOUETTES Houghton $1.00

Silhouettes cut by Katharine G. Buffum. A little square book with a few of the most familiar rhymes. The black scissor cuts make a good introduction to the little child of the charm of shadow forms and the simplest drawings in black and white.

THE FAVOURITES OF A NURSERY OF SEVENTY YEARS

AGO, with some others of a later date. Houghton $3.00

Compiled by Edith Forbes. "This collection of nursery rhymes and ballads has been selected to preserve for the children of this century the quaint little stories and verses which were popular about a hundred years ago and in the later years of the Nineteenth Century." Tales are also included. The pictures are old engravings and drawings from various sources.

L'ENTENTE CORDIALE DES BÉBÉS Imported $1.25

By E. Gutch. Illustrated. A selection of English nursery rhymes done into French for English and French homes.

THE ONLY TRUE MOTHER GOOSE Lothrop $1.00

An exact reproduction of the text and illustrations of the original edition, published and copyrighted in Boston in the year 1833 by Munroe & Francis. Introduction by Edward Everett Hale.

THE CHINESE MOTHER GOOSE RHYMES Revell $1.75

Translated by Isaac Taylor Headland. Pictures are photographs of Chinese mothers and children. Chinese and English text. There are probably more nursery rhymes in China than can be found in England and America, in most of which there are features common to our own Mother Goose.

"This one's old,
This one's young,
This one has no meat.
This one's gone
To buy some hay,
And this one's on the street."

THE NURSERY RHYME BOOK Warne $2.50

Collected by Andrew Lang and illustrated by L. Leslie Brooke. This very full collection of rhymes with its jolly and whimsical arrangement and L. Leslie Brooke's pictures to point up the whimsy

PICTURE BOOKS THAT WILL LIVE FOREVER

Summer fading, winter comes—
Frosty mornings, tingling thumbs,
Window robins, winter rooks,
And the picture story-books.

We may see how all things are—

And the flying fairies' looks, with the same pictures and paper covers, each $.75. May also be had separately with fewer pictures, paper covers, each $.50.
In the picture story-books.

JOHNNY CROW'S GARDEN

Warne $1.75

JOHNNY CROW'S PARTY

Warne $1.75

"Even the duckling
Couldn't help chuckling
In Johnny Crow's garden."

Fine drawings showing delicious humor with Johnny Crow always full of kindness and courtesy. There is just a line or two of text to each pictured page. The two books are companion volumes.

THE TAILOR AND THE CROW: An Old Rhyme with New Drawings

Warne $1.00

This, like Johnny Crow's Garden, is a picture book with just a line of text to a page. The old nonsense verse begins:

"A carrion crow sat on an oak,
Fol de riddle, lol de riddle, hi ding do,
Watching a tailor shape his cloak
Sing heigh ho."

The drawings of L. Leslie Brooke express his own delightful personality and give joy to the reader. He lives now, as Miss Moore wrote in her article for The Horn Book in March,

From L. Leslie Brooke's "The Three Bears."
(Frederick Warne & Co.)

1925, in a little village near Oxford, "close to the meadows and slopes associated with Scott's Amy Robsart and with Matthew Arnold's dearly loved haunts."

Miss Moore gives, too, the words of close friends to describe him and his work:

"Leslie Brooke is of Irish extraction—a descendant, on his father's side, of Henry Brooke of County Cavan, the author of The Fool of Quality, a novel in five volumes, published in 1766. As an artist, Leslie Brooke has succeeded as a portrait painter and illustrator of children's books.

"His extraordinary powers of observation and delicate sympathy with every phase of life have linked his own creative faculties as an artist to a rare understanding of 'the inner side of things.' Even his thumb-nail sketches bring a smile of happy amusement to anyone who understands 'children,' whatever the age may be.

"He is a lover of the countryside and a first-rate walker. As a companion on the open road, or by the running stream, his charm is a part of the surroundings, and leaves the

Vol. 2: "The House That Jack Built"; "Sing a Song of Sixpence"; "The Queen of Hearts."

Simplicity, gayety, kindness, humor, and a certain genial warmth shine in Caldecott's Picture Books. As you turn the pages of John Gilpin or Come, Lasses and Lads, The Three Jovial Huntsmen, A Frog He Would a-Wooing Go—or any of the others—you find yourself feeling pleased and happy. You gather from the pictures, too, that the artist loved the life of the countryside and the farm; that he was fond of animals, particularly horses; he seemed, indeed, to have a very friendly feeling for pigs.

When you read in Henry Blackburn's sketch of Caldecott's life, "He was the very embodiment of sweetness, simple-mindedness, generosity and honor. . . . His presence then as in later years seemed to dispel all jealousies if they ever existed, and to scatter evil spirits if they ever approached him"—you say to yourself, I knew that from his drawings; for surely few artists are more self-expressive than he was.

Caldecott was born in Chester, March 22, 1846—the same month and the same year as Kate Greenaway. When he was fifteen years old he was sent to a bank at Whitechurch in Shropshire. There for six years he lived at an old farmhouse about two miles from the town. He had much leisure, and he used to go fishing and shooting, to the meets of the hounds, to markets and cattle fairs—all of which he later drew upon in his work. He went on from Whitechurch to the Elsmere Bank in Manchester where he stayed for five years, using all his spare time for walks and rides about the city and the near-by country, making many sketches. He was known at this time to spend many whole nights drawing, and attended art school winter evenings in Manchester.

In 1872 he went up to London. His first London drawings appeared in London Society in February, 1871, whose contributors then included J. R. Planché, Francis Palgrave, Tom Hood, and such artists as Sir John Gilbert, Charles Keene, and Mrs. Allingham. He had his first drawings in Punch and in the London Graphic in 1872. Mr. Edmund Evans, the engraver, wrote Caldecott in 1878 to ask him to illustrate some picture books, and the books listed above were the result.

Someone has said of Caldecott, "He delighted in showing the power of line in drawing, studying the art of leaving out as a science." In addition to his illustrating for magazines and books he made friezes and panels for wall decorations, carved panels, and modeled in clay. He died at St. Augustine, Florida, February 27, 1886.

triplets," as he called The Baby's Opera, The Baby's Bouquet (page 50-51) and The Baby's Æsop (page 105), you see manuscript books transferred by photographic process to printed book form; that is, the artist has not only drawn the pictures but has drawn the text as well. In the Household Tales of Grimm (p. 201) you see the harmonious and lovely results obtainable in a book when the artist has prescribed every detail of it from front cover to back.

Those interested in Walter Crane's art should try to see also certain books now out of print: The First of May, A Fairy Masque, a poem of his friend, John R. Wise, which he illustrated at Mr. Wise's home in Sherwood Forest. This is done entirely in pencil, and the artist has written the entire poem in letters which combine with poetry and picture in perfect symmetry and express the rare personality of the poet and artist, too. Queen Summer, or The Tourney of the Lily and the Rose, is another book which Crane "penned" as well as "portrayed"; also Spenser's Faërie Queene, his most important work, in three large volumes into which the work of three years was put, although he taught, and designed, and painted other things during those years. These three books together with those listed in this book list do not by any means represent his complete output. He illustrated and wrote many, many more, but those here mentioned do give all the different phases of his illustrative art.

In looking at his Toy Books—done in the years 1865 to 1876, beginning when the artist was twenty years old—in addition to their strong decorative quality, notice the perfection with which details of houses and gardens in different lands have been represented: Egypt in Valentine and Orson, China in Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp, the French Renaissance in Bluebeard, and "Moorish arches, trellis windows, Oriental jars and pots and horse trappings, Eastern costumes and embroideries, tiles and furniture" in The Forty Thieves. And in every one, whether it is Old Mother Hubbard, Puss in Boots, The Three Bears, or Cinderella, the characters are surrounded with beauty in everyday life, "high" or "low." These picture books are full of interest for grown-ups as well as children, and they earned for their maker the title "Founder of the Nursery Academy."

The influences shown in his work and the elements composing it are finely expressed in P. G. Konody's book, The Art of Walter Crane (George Bell & Sons, London, 1902), to which, indeed, except for the study of the books themselves, we are indebted for all this material.

"... Constant practice in drawing and painting from nature has given him that remarkable facility of draughtsmanship which speaks out of every line playfully jotted down by him on paper; from the pre-Raphaelites he has drawn the love of poetry and romance and his conscientiousness in recording the minute details of nature; the years spent at the wood-engraver's office made him conversant with the requirements of the craft by which his designs are to be translated into print; from the colour-prints of Japan he derived his knowledge as regards the decorative use of colour for book-illustrations and the expressiveness of line which can only get its full value if it is used sparingly and discriminately; the mediæval wood-engravers, illustrators, and illuminators have taught him the true principles of book-decoration; the intercourse with Morris planted in him the germ of his Socialistic ideal; and his profound knowledge of mediæval and Renaissance art has not only left its mark on his actual work as designer and painter, but has directed his attention to those principles of the unity of all arts and crafts and fraternity among all art-workers, the promotion of which by word and deed has made Walter Crane one of the most important figures in the art movement of our time."

Before Walter Crane died in 1915, he had left an impression upon the world of art and design which is still felt to-day. As director of several art schools and societies—among them the Arts and Crafts Society, the directorship of which he held from its formation in 1888 until his death except for six years, 1890 to 1896, when the position was held by William Morris—as director of Design, Manchester Municipal School (1894); as art director, Reading College (1896); as principal, Royal College of Art (1898), he had the opportunity to pass the torch of his ideas and art on to many.

page," said he, "until I tell you what is on it. I know this book by heart, but it's years since I've seen it."

Little boys and girls both are open to the charm of Kate Greenaway's pictures, and a child's library would not seem complete to us without every one of her books. Most boys and girls and grown-ups, too, will not be troubled as Ruskin was by their faults of drawing. He wrote Kate Greenaway about "A Apple Pie" (page 38).

"The titles are simply bill-sticking of the vulgarest sort, over the drawings—nor is there one of those that has the least melodious charm as a colour design—while the feet—from merely shapeless are becoming literal paddles and flappers—and in the pretty—though ungrammatical ‘Eat it’ are real deformities.”

Ruskin’s friendship was one of the great events of Kate Greenaway’s life. They met very seldom, but corresponded constantly for twenty years, until Ruskin’s death, January 20, 1900. Her letters to him were usually decorated with delightful sketches.

Kate Greenaway was born in London on the 17th of March, 1846. Her father, John Greenaway, was a well-known wood engraver and draughtsman. His daughter took the greatest interest in his work. As a little girl she spent delightful days at a farm in Rolleston, Nottinghamshire. Color and clothes always interested her, and here she saw quaint old-fashioned garb still surviving in an out-of-the-way spot of prosperous farms. Flowers of the wood and field and garden, as well as children, were her great delight, so that when she began to produce her Christmas cards they were full of a dainty originality, and later, in her picture books and almanacs, she drew upon all these things.

As she began to present her children in books in the clothes which seemed to her full of the joy and charm of childhood, she actually dressed doll models in order to experiment with garments. Indeed, she is said by her pictures to have set the style for the children’s clothing of three continents, and her name was as well-known in Europe as the names of Millais, Leighton, Burne-Jones, Watts, and Walter Crane.

For thirteen years (1883–1897 except 1896) her almanacs were to be had in England and other countries. It is due to the custom of Edmund Evans of printing extra sheets with the letter-press space left blank to be printed with the calendars of France and Germany, and to the fact that some of these sheets have recently been discovered, that we have had the truly first edition calendars of the past three years (1926, 1927, and 1928).

"Home Beauty." Poem by Austin Dobson. Drawing by Kate Greenaway.
 From "Kate Greenaway," by M.H. Spielman and G. S. Layard. (Adam & Charles Black, London.)

As a person Kate Greenaway was quiet, modest, unassuming, eager to avoid publicity, devoted to her friends, and conservative in all her tastes. She began to exhibit at twenty-two. Her first great success was a valentine of which twenty-five thousand copies were sold in just a few weeks, but the artist's share of the profits was not more than £3. Later Edmund Evans made a generous contract for her work. He had already published the picture books of Walter Crane and Randolph Caldecott. His skill as a printer was very great, and he could obtain rare results with as few as three color blocks.

BESKOW, ELSA

Elsa Beskow lives in Djursholm, Sweden. She is the wife of a minister, Dr. Nathaniel Beskow, and the mother of six sons. Her artistic talent began to express itself when she told stories to her young brothers and sisters and illustrated them with her own drawings. Her first published books were a series of painting books for children. Her course at the Art Academy was interrupted by her marriage in 1897, and in that year, too, her first picture book appeared. To-day her books are in homes throughout Sweden and have been published in French, Finnish, Polish, German, Czech, Russian, Danish, Norwegian, Dutch, and English.

Sometimes Mrs. Beskow's pictures are finely realistic, sometimes they are delicately imaginative, and again they are full of fairy atmosphere and romance. It is interesting to see how Mrs. Beskow's work has grown in strength of line, richness of color, and in imaginative depth. But the quality so strong in her pictures and so hard to express in words, something "fortifying and encouraging," "moral but not moralizing," has come not only from her genius as an artist but from her experience with her own children.

We are listing only a small number of her books, for they are difficult to obtain in this country, and the prices that are quoted are only approximate ones.

NOS ENFANTS

Imported $2.50

Text of both books is by Anatole France. Pictures of quaint little French children, with simple stories of child life in town and country. The books may be had with English text under the titles Boys and Girls and Our Children, each $2.50 (Duffield).

Maurice Boutet de Monvel was born in Orleans in 1850, and Orleans is rich in memories of Joan of Arc. There the maid of seventeen years with her soldiers stormed the battlements of the Tourelles and rid the city of the English. What a story to occupy the mind of a sensitive boy. It is true that Boutet de Monvel's parents moved to Paris when he was three years old, but he continued to spend his vacations in Orleans, and the world has the five beautiful frescos he painted from her history for the Church at Domremy, and one of the most beautiful picture books in existence, as a result of the artist's association with Orleans.

*From "Boys and Girls," by Boutet de Monvel.
(Duffield & Co.)*

In 1876 the first illustrating Boutet de Monvel did for children appeared in a Child's History of France, published by Delagrave. Early in the 1880's came Vieilles Chansons et Rondes followed by Chansons de France (page 50), La Civilité Honnête et Puerile, Fables de La Fontaine (page 106), Nos Enfants, Filles et Garçons, and Jeanne d'Arc (page 438).

Notice in Filles et Garçons, and Nos Enfants how simply a great deal is shown. "The children's heads, their hands, their little feet, express so much! An oval contour, two dots for eyes, a couple of delicate indicated accents for mouth and nose, and you have Mademoiselle Fifne, who turns her cheek and submits to the chaste embrace of Monsieur Paul, in pinafore." In the drawings for La Fontaine's Fables and Jeanne d'Arc the meaning can be read entirely from the pictures.

LE MAIR, WILLEBEEK, Illustrator

When the Princess Cantacuzene visited Willebeek Le Mair in Suresnes in 1925, the artist said of her picture books: "They are stupid things, read once and shut in cupboards thereafter most of the time."¹ We take exception to this statement, and we believe many other owners of the lovely books listed below will join with us. As familiar as we are with them in our Bookshop, we pore over them constantly, and they have often been our inspiration in practical ways such as in the arrangement of our show windows and tables, for the pictures are full of the color and design of Dutch interiors and Dutch needlework.

For children her work offers all the fascination of children at play in friendly fascinating surroundings. Many of the pictures are full of dancing motion, and it is interesting to know that the artist was a pupil of Dalcroze and at a quite young age had a little class of children to whom she taught dancing. She is said to be to-day "one of the most glorious dancers one could find anywhere."

Willebeek Le Mair began her drawing at the age of eight. Her father sketched constantly, and her mother also painted and wrote verses. When the young artist was sixteen she made pictures for fairy-tale verses which her mother had written. Later she was the only pupil Maurice Boutet de Monvel ever had, and he protected the original quality of her work. The effect of an eighteen-month trip in Arabia taken with her parents at the end of her teens had a very real influence upon her later work, which tends to have far less detail than her earlier illustrations. She has, too, in these recent years been much occupied with mural painting. She decorated the children's playroom of a Dutch steamer plying to the Orient. She has also decorated a children's chapel in Europe, and has a commission to do a children's chapel for the Cathedral of St. John, in New York, as well as the children's ward of a large hospital.

*MITCHELL, LUCY SPRAGUE*HERE AND NOW STORY BOOK Dutton $2.00

"Two to Seven-Year-Olds. Experimental stories written for the children of the City and Country School (formerly the Play School) and the Nursery School of the Bureau of Educational Experiments."

"Stories which include the children's first-hand experiences as a starting point, not stories which are literally limited to these experiences." (Introduction.)

TWO POINTS OF VIEW on the place of fairy tales in the little child's world:

Mrs. Mitchell's as given in Introduction to Here and Now Story Book:

"It is the blind eye of the adult that finds the familiar uninteresting. The attempt to amuse children by presenting them with the strange, the bizarre, the unreal, is the unhappy result of this adult blindness. Children do not find the unusual piquant until they are firmly acquainted with the usual; they do not find the preposterous humorous until they have intimate knowledge of ordinary behavior; they do not get the point of alien environments until they are securely oriented in their own. Too often we mistake excitement for genuine interest and give the children stimulus instead of food. The fairy story, the circus, novelty hunting, delight the sophisticated adult. They excite and confuse the child."

Anatole France, as given in My Friend's Book:

"Little Things though they be, they are already possessed by that hunger for knowledge which makes the student and the poet. They long for someone to lay bare the secrets of the Universe, the hidden, mystic Universe. The writer that throws them back on themselves, and insists on their contemplating their own childishness, bores them beyond endurance. This, however, is what people who write for the young are always endeavoring to do. They aim at putting themselves into the position of little children. . . .

"Refashioning the world in their own way, the weavers of fairy tales prompt the weak, the simple, and the young to refashion it in theirs. This is why their influence is of the most sympathetic order. They stir the imagination, they quicken the feelings, they stimulate the affections.

"Never fear that they will mislead the child by filling his mind with useless notions about hobgoblins and fairies. The child knows well enough that such delightful apparitions are not of this world. . . .

"Unhappily there are a great many elements abroad who look upon the imagination with mistrust. They are wrong! For she it is who sows the seeds of Beauty and Virtue up and down the world. She alone leads to greatness. Never, O ye mothers, never fear that she will injure your children. Rather will she hold them safe from vulgar faults and facile errors."

The Story of a Fierce Bad Rabbit
The Story of Miss Moppet

It takes a special kind of genius to write for little children. Beatrix Potter has this to such a marked degree that every one of her little books with its fascinating mixture of reality and fancy has a lasting quality and the flavor of real literature. Her pictures and stories are full of her own Lakeland scenery. Squirrel Nutkin sailed on Derwentwater; Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle lived in the vale of Newlands near Keswick. The books relating to Tom Kitten and Samuel Whiskers describe the interior of the author's old farmhouse where visiting children are "comically impressed by seeing the real chimney and cupboards." Because she has this unusual gift we were interested to discover what was the background which developed it. With her permission we quote her answer to our question, "How did they happen?"

"I am inclined to put it down to three things, namely: (1) matter-of-fact ancestry. I am descended from generations of Lancashire yeomen and weavers; obstinate, hard-headed, matter-of-fact folk. As far back as I can go, they were Puritans, Nonjurors, Nonconformists, Dissenters. Your Mayflower ancestors sailed to America; mine at the same time were sticking it out at home; probably rather enjoying persecution. (2) The accidental circumstance of having spent a good deal of my childhood in the Highlands of Scotland, with a Highland nurse girl, and a firm belief in witches, fairies, and the creed of the terrible John Calvin. (The creed rubbed off, but the fairies remained!) (3) A peculiarly precocious and tenacious memory. I have been laughed at for what I say I can remember; but it is admitted that I can remember quite plainly from one and two years old; not only facts like learning to walk, but places and sentiments—the way things impressed a very young child.

"Does that not go a long way toward explaining the books?"

As for the books themselves, they are full of real animals in real settings, having real adventures, and though the author lays claim to matter-of-fact-ness, it has not stood in the way of whimsicality and delightful absurdities. Poke bonnet, print dress, red muffler, and flowered waistcoat bring the animal world closer to our own in thought and feeling but do not make it incongruous or falsely represented. This is so definitely a fact that even the small child must feel it.

"Little Benjamin did not want very much to see his Aunt.

"He came round the back of the fir-tree, and nearly tumbled upon the top of his Cousin Peter.

"Peter was sitting by himself. He looked poorly, and was dressed in a red cotton pocket-handkerchief.

From "The Roly Poly Pudding." (Frederick Warne & Co.)

"'Peter,' said little Benjamin, in a whisper, 'who has got your clothes?'

"Peter replied, 'The scarecrow in Mr. McGregor's garden,' and described how he had been chased about the garden, and had dropped his shoes and coat."

Also what distinct characters the little animals have.

"Mrs. Tittlemouse was a most terribly tidy particular little mouse, always sweeping and dusting the soft sandy floors.

"Sometimes a beetle lost its way in the passages.

"'Shuh! Shuh! little dirty feet!' said Mrs. Tittlemouse, clattering her dustpan."

THE TALE OF TWO BUNNIES

Dutton $1.50

There were once two little rabbits named Tippetty and Hoppety. They lived in a cozy little house near a wood, and there they played about and had a merry time together.

*ROBERTS, JACK*THE WONDERFUL ADVENTURES OF LUDO, THE LITTLE GREEN DUCK*Duffield* $2.00

We see in bold and bright pictures Ludo's trip around the world from his little farm in Normandy through the land of the Chin-Chin Chinamen to the cannibals of the South Seas and the Indians of North America.

ROBINSON, GERALDINE

THREE KITTENS IN A BOAT

Warne $.75

"Let us take a holiday; we can hire a boat and go up the river, catch fish and swim all day, and sleep in our tent at night." And that is what the three kittens did, but—when they got home they sent for the doctor and went to bed, because it was no ordinary holiday that they had had.

WRIGHT, ALAN

MRS. BUNNYKIN'S BUSY DAY

Macrae $.75

"It was very early on Spring-Cleaning-Day morning and Mrs. Bunnykins was sound asleep dreaming she had wings and was trying to catch the loveliest flying carrots. Suddenly she woke with such a start. . . . What was that? . . . It was the little red chicken who seemed to be saying: "Cock-a-doodle-do, cock-a-doodle-do! Wake up, wake up, you have so much to do!"

PART II

BOOKS
CHILDREN

From "Pepper and Salt," illustrated by Howard Pyle. (Harper Bros.)

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN

Books certain to interest children from four to eight years old have been selected for Part II from nearly every subject represented in children's books. But many mothers will want to choose also from Parts I and III. It is impossible and uninteresting to make any hard-and-fast age divisions for books. Seven-year-olds are often ready for Kingsley's Heroes and Colum's Adventures of Odysseus. Grown-ups enjoy Winnie the Pooh. And so it goes. Many fairy tales of interest to four-year-olds will be found in the Fairy Tale section of Part III, but since most collections cover a wide range of age interest Part III has been arranged for children older rather than younger, and Part II for those younger rather than older.

THE LITTLE WILD HORSE OF MAGIC— POETRY

"Suppose . . . and suppose that a little wild Horse of Magic Came cantering out of the sky,
With bridle of silver, and into the saddle I mounted,
To fly—and to fly."¹

ALDIS, DOROTHY

EVERYTHING AND ANYTHING

Minton $2.00

With drawings by Helen D. Jameson. Poems expressing the thoughts and imaginings of a little child, sometimes a girl, sometimes a boy.

"Snap-Dragons and Dande-Lions
Are not so very wild—
I never yet saw one forget
And try to hurt a child."

¹This verse and the remainder of the poem quoted throughout this section is Walter de la Mare's "Suppose and Suppose." Reprinted with the permission of J. B. Lippincott Company.

BROWN, ABBIE FARWELL

FRESH POSIES

Houghton $1.50

Rhymes to read and pieces to speak.

POCKETFUL OF POSIES

Houghton $1.50

Illustrated.

"I'll wear a cloak of sunshine,
A hat of summer sky,
And not a child in all the world
Shall be as gay as I!

"A scarf of scented breezes,
Green grass upon my feet,
I'll dance and sing like anything,—
The world is all so sweet.

"I'll fill my heart with sunshine
I'll fill my pockets, too,
So it will last me all the year;
And I'll give some to you."

Miss Brown went one day, as she loved to do, to talk about poetry and read her poems to children in a near-by school. In her genial company the boys and girls were moved to read some of their poems, too. But one little boy said sadly, "I like to write poetry, but when it rhymes it doesn't make any sense and when it makes sense it doesn't rhyme."

Miss Brown died at her home on Beacon Hill, Boston, on March 6, 1927, in the house where she was born. Her first book—The Book of Saints and Friendly Beasts—was published in 1900. In 1902 In the Days of Giants was published—a delightful telling of the Northern myths and sagas for younger boys and girls. These and other fine books by her will be found in this list.

CONKLING, HILDA

POEMS BY A LITTLE GIRL

Stokes $1.50

THE SHOES OF THE WIND

Stokes $1.50

SILVERHORN

Stokes $2.50

Many pictures by Dorothy Lathrop. Selections made from the two books listed above.

"As I walked through my garden
I saw the butterfly light on a flower.
His wings were pink and purple;
He spoke a small word
It was Follow!"

Hilda Conkling is the daughter of a poet-mother, Grace Hazard Conkling. As a very little girl she expressed herself poetically, and her mother recorded many of her then unconscious "poems." They are full of a real understanding of beauty and the consciousness of a child's one-ness with nature.

Then turned to his sizzling,
And sank him back."

SONGS OF CHILDHOOD

Longmans $2.25

One of the strange things in the history of poetry is that Walter de la Mare, a poet with the most delicate and fanciful imagination, whose poetry is concerned with fairies, witches, mermaids, and the like; and whose prose, very beautiful in form and concerned with such uncommon things as monkeys of noble birth journeying to a monkey kingdom ("The Three Mulla Mulgars"), the chronicles of a tiny person ("The Memoirs of a Midget"), or things eerie and ghostly as in "Broomsticks," should have worked for twenty years in the English branch of the Standard Oil Company. He was born at Charlton, in Kent, April 25, 1873, and was educated at St. Paul's Cathedral Choir School in London. For some time now he has devoted himself to writing. Let us hope that he will some day be moved to write the story of his inner life as boy and man.

"And we stretched up into the air, fleeting on in the sunshine,
 A speck in the gleam,
 On galloping hoofs, his mane in the wind out-flowing,
 In a shadowy stream;

"And oh, when, all lone, the gentle star of evening
 Came crinkling into the blue,
 A magical castle we saw in the air, like a cloud of moonlight,
 As onward we flew."

EDGAR, M. G., and CHILMAN, ERIC

A TREASURY OF VERSE FOR SCHOOL AND HOME

Crowell $2.50

Illustrated by Honor C. Appleton. A charming anthology, in attractive dress. Begins with verse for the earliest years and continues up to the beginning of the teens.

FARJEON, ELEANOR

JOAN'S DOOR

Stokes $2.00

Illustrated by Will Townsend. Little verses of the city and the country, of fairy tales and flowers.

"The old sun, the old sun
 With lovely May returning,
 Went among the chestnut trees
 And set their candles burning.

"The cold winds, the cold winds,
Came down like Goths and Vandals,
And went among the chestnut trees
Blowing out their candles."

POEMS OF CHILDHOOD

Scribner $2.50

Illustrated by Maxfield Parrish. "Wynken, Blynken and Nod"; "Little Boy Blue"; "The Dinkey Bird"; "The Little Peach," and many others are as well known as Stevenson's Child's Garden.

Eugene Field was born in St. Louis, September 2, 1850, and died in Chicago, November 4, 1895. He devoted his life to writing.

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN

THE POINTED PEOPLE

Yale University Press $1.25

Thoughtful poems of childhood experiences illustrated with silhouettes by the author.

TAXIS AND TOADSTOOLS

Doubleday $2.00

With pictures in color and black and white by the author. This book could not fail to give pleasure to young and old alike. It has a section of poems on islands which will delight all those who love an island. The book closes with the poem "Old Gypsies."

From "Taxis and Toadstools." (Doubleday, Doran & Co.)

"Over the sky's dark roads
 The Caravan moon moves slow,
 And all the hosts of stars
 Forever restless go;
 Unwearied gypsy companies
 Traveling the centuries."

FYLEMAN, ROSE

FAIRIES AND CHIMNEYS

Doubleday $1.25

"The robin is the fairies' page;
 They keep him neatly dressed /
 For country service or for town /
 In dapper livery of brown
 And little scarlet vest.

"On busy errands all day long
 He hurries to and fro
 With watchful eyes and nimble wings—
 There are not very many things
 The robin doesn't know."

Many of Rose Fyleman's lovely poems have appeared first in Punch. About five years ago Miss Fyleman started in England a fine magazine for small children called The Merry Go Round. The slender little volume mentioned above and its three companion volumes mentioned below make delightful gifts for sick children or weary grown-ups, or gay creatures in any circumstances any time.

THE FAIRY GREEN

Doubleday $1.25

THE ROSE FYLEMAN FAIRY BOOK

Doubleday $3.50

This volume contains selections from the four small volumes and has pictures by Hilda T. Miller.

"And across the green moat on the drawbridge we foamed and we snorted;
 And there was a beautiful Queen
 Who smiled at me strangely, and spoke to my wild little horse, too—
 A lovely and beautiful Queen;

"And she cried with delight—and delight—to her delicate maidens,
 'Behold my daughter—my dear!'
 And they crowned me with flowers, and then to their harps sate playing,
 Solemn and clear."

LUCAS, E. V., Editor

A BOOK OF VERSES FOR CHILDREN Holt $1.25

"Unless you are very keenly set upon reading to yourself, I think I should advise you to ask someone to read these verses aloud, not too many at a time. And I want you to understand that there is a kind of poetry that is finer far than anything here; poetry to which this book is, in the old-fashioned phrase, simply a stepping-stone. When you feel, as I hope you will feel, that these pages no longer satisfy, then you must turn to the better things." Preface.

ANOTHER BOOK OF VERSES FOR CHILDREN

Macmillan $2.50

Illustrated by Francis Bedford. In the introduction the editor says the collection is not so much "poetry as poetry-for-children—merely a preparation for the real thing." In spite of these remarks, we believe that in the selection there is much of the real thing and also a delightfulness in the editor's touches that should not be missed.

LUCAS, E. V.

PLAYTIME AND COMPANY Doubleday $1.50

Illustrated by Ernest H. Shepard. A collection of simple verses of the everyday child world.

MILNE, A. A.

NOW WE ARE SIX Dutton $2.00

Illustrated by Ernest H. Shepard. A companion volume to When We Were Very Young.

"Binker isn't greedy, but he does like things to eat,
 So I have to say to people when they are giving me a sweet,
 'Oh, Binker wants a chocolate, so could you give me two?'"
 And then I eat it for him, 'cos his teeth are rather new.

Well, I'm very fond of Daddy, but he hasn't time to play,
 And I'm very fond of Mummy, but she sometimes goes away,
 And I'm often cross with Nanny when she wants to brush my hair . . .

But Binker's always Binker, and is certain to be there."

Mr. Milne's poems, too, appeared first in Punch. What magic divining rod does that magazine have for finding these people with rare creative charm?

PEABODY, JOSEPHINE PRESTON

THE BOOK OF THE LITTLE PAST Houghton $1.25

Illustrated by Elizabeth Shippen Green. Poems of Child Life: "Making a House"; "The Busy Child"; "I Was Lost"; "The Polite Visitor"; "The Christmas Tree"; "The Green Singing-Book," and others.

"And magical cakes and goblets were spread on the table;
And at the window the birds came in,
Hopping along with bright eyes, pecking crumbs from the platters,
And sipped of the wine;

"And splashing up—up to the roof tossed fountains of crystal;
And Princes in scarlet and green
Shot with their bows and arrows, and kneeled with their dishes
Of fruits for the Queen."

RILEY, JAMES WHITCOMB

A HOST OF CHILDREN Bobbs $3.00

Illustrated by Ethel F. Betts. Contains the old favorites: "The Circus-Day Parade"; "The Runaway Boy"; "The Nine Little Goblins"; "Little Orphant Annie," and others.

THE RAGGEDY MAN, AND OTHER WELL-KNOWN tive and stimulating "Short Talk to Children about Poetry," by E. S. T.

"Selections of poetry for children are numerous,—perhaps too numerous,—but it has not often been my lot to encounter one so carefully thought out and intelligently arranged as that of Mrs. Thacher. A mere glance at the proportions assigned to different authors and periods will show this to be true; and especially the prominence given to purely imaginative writers, like Blake and Emily Dickinson, shows a willingness to recognize and cultivate that ideal side of children which, after all, affords the best part of their lives." (THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON in Preliminary Note.)

TURNER, NANCY BYRD

MAGPIE LANE

Harcourt $1.60

Pictures by Decie Merwin. A nice collection of verses about children and animals and fairies.

UNTERMEYER, LOUIS, Editor

THIS SINGING WORLD FOR YOUNGER CHILDREN

Harcourt $2.50

Pen drawings by Decie Merwin. Frontispiece by C. M. Burd. This book is not intended to replace the first collection, This Singing World (see page 697), but for both books the editor has selected modern poems (all published during the last seventy years). He has arranged the poems chosen under the following alluring headings: "Songs of Awakening"; "Breath of the Earth and Sea"; "Open Road"; "Common Things"; "Places"; "Children and Other People"; "Birds and Beasts"; "Fairies and Phantoms"; "Words and Music"; "Whims and Fantasies"; "Tales and Ballads"; "Laughing Legends"; "Fables in Foolscap"; "Rhyme Without Reason"; "Croons and Lullabies"; "Stars to Hitch to"; "The Heroic Heart."

The range of the collection is shown by any one of these groups: "Common Things" includes poems by Robert Frost, Emily Dickinson, A. E. Housman, Walt Whitman, Hilda Conkling, William Cullen Bryant, Bliss Carman, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Francis Thompson, Stevenson, Longfellow, and Frances Cornford. One of Hilda Conkling's loveliest poems—"Spring Song"—is included in "Songs of Awakening." "Places" has among others Yeats's "The Lake Isle of Innisfree"; Eva Gore-Booth's lovely "Waves of Breffny"; Masfield's "Tewkesbury Road"; Robert Frost's "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening"; "A Brook in the City." Under "Stars to Hitch to" are poems by Austin Dobson, Ralph Hodgson,

James Russell Lowell, W. H. Davies, Longfellow, Kipling, Carl Sandburg, James Stephens, Virginia Moore, John Gould Fletcher, Robert Frost, and Edwin Markham's "Prayer"—

"Teach me, Father, how to go Softly as the grasses grow."

Five poems of Walter de la Mare's are included: "The Lost Shoe"; "Miss T."; "Nod"; "Suppose"; "Tired Tim." And "The Drawing by Dorothy P. Lathrop. (Permission of the artist.)

Heroic Heart" has that marvelous poem of Lenore Speyer's—the very essence of noblest prayer—"Measure Me, Sky!" which ends

"Sky, be my depth,
Wind, be my width and my height,
World, my heart's span;
Loneliness, wings for my flight!"

No boy or girl will want to skip the Notes at the back of the book. They are not ones which ought to be read but which will amuse, entertain, and enlighten—if read.

WIGGIN, KATE DOUGLAS, and SMITH, N. A.

PINAFORE PALACE: A Book of Rhymes for the Nursery.

Doubleday $1.75

Mother Goose rhymes, nonsense verses, guessing games, lullabies, and slumber songs. This book can be used for children of nursery age, too.

POSY RING: A Book of Verse for Children.

Doubleday $1.75

The collection is delightful and genial like everything Kate Douglas Wiggin touched, and the headings under which the poems are grouped are characteristic: "A Year's Windfall"; "The Child's World"; "Hiawatha's Chickens"; "The Flower Folk"; "Hiawatha's Brothers"; "Other Little Children"; "Play-time"; "Story Time"; "Bed Time"; "For Sunday's Child"; "Bells of Christmas."

"And we walked in a magical garden with rivers and bowers,
And my bed was of ivory and gold;
And the Queen breathed soft in my ear a song of enchantment—
And I never grew old . . .

"And I never, never came back to the earth, oh, never and never,
How mother would cry and cry!
There'd be snow on the fields then and all these sweet flowers 'in the winter
Would wither and die. . . .

"Suppose . . . and suppose . . ."

FOR READING ALOUD OR FOR STORY TELLING

The Story

"It [the story] feeds and enriches the life of the spirit, enlarging the hearers' and teller's experiences, and the storyteller must ever bear his high calling in mind. There should surely be no more splendid mission, yet we still find that small reasons and aims are offered for the telling of stories . . . they are to give information, to cultivate the habit of concentration; . . . to form a basis for composition and other language exercises . . . to be a peg on which to hang various school activities. Let us be simple and wise and honest enough to tell the story for the pure love of telling it, for 'it is in beauty and love and joy and laughter that we must find the way of speaking to the soul—the soul that does not appear in the statistics and is therefore always left out of accounts.'"¹

The books which follow have few pictures and are intended for grown-ups to read to children. They contain suitable stories for children under seven and are mentioned here rather than with the fairy tales because they deal with real life as well as with the fairy world.

ASPINWALL, MRS. ALICIA

SHORT STORIES FOR SHORT PEOPLE

DE LA MARE, WALTER, and Others

NUMBER ONE JOY STREET

Appleton $2.50

A medley of prose and verse continued each year by adding a new number to Joy St. Some of the contributors are A. A. Milne, Mabel Marlowe, Rose Fyleman, Eleanor Farjeon, and Hilaire Belloc. The volumes are not uniformly good. The format and illustrations make them popular as gift books. Number Six Joy Street is the one published in 1928.

DE LA MARE, WALTER, and QUAYLE, THOMAS

READINGS

Knopf $5.00

Illustrations and woodcuts by C. T. Nightingale. A large collection of short stories by new and old writers or extracts from well-known books. Varied enough to include both "The Story of Mr. Vinegar" and "The Trial of Warren Hastings," by Lord Macaulay. Good for reading aloud with different ages. Also obtainable in attractively printed small graded volumes with fabric bindings at $1.25.

*EMERSON, CAROLINE D.*A MERRY-GO-ROUND OF MODERN TALES Dutton $2.00

Illustrated by Lois Lenski. A collection of original stories that combine in an unusually successful way realistic and imaginative things. Well constructed and cleverly planned. There are: "The Timid Truck"; "The House That Would Not Stay Still"; "The Shop That Gave Things Away," etc.

FARJEON, ELEANOR

NUTS IN MAY

Collins $4.00

Stories, plays, and verses for little children. Includes "The Italian Peep-Show."

FRENTZ, EDWARD W.

UNCLE ZEB AND HIS FRIENDS

Little $1.50

Illustrated. Short stories of the outdoors, of pioneering, and of Civil War days told by Uncle Zeb. One father was so enthusiastic over this book that he wrote The Bookshop saying that he was reading it again and again with his five-year-old son.

HUTCHINSON, VERONICA S.

CHIMNEY CORNER FAIRY TALES

Minton $2.50

Illustrations by Lois Lenski. The collection of fairy tales includes many old favorites, such as "Snowdrop and the Seven Little Dwarfs," and others like "Billy Beg and His Bull," perhaps not so well known.

Miss Hutchinson has had wide experience in libraries and in story-telling, and Miss Lenski's numerous illustrations, in color and black and white, are delightfully humorous and imaginative.

FIRESIDE STORIES

Minton $2.50

Illustrations by Lois Lenski. Contains: "Teeny-Tiny"; "The Kettle That Would Not Walk"; "Titty Mouse and Tatty Mouse"; "Why the Bear Is Stumpy-tailed"; "The Cat and the Mouse"; "The Hungry Wolf"; "The Foolish Timid Rabbit"; "Drakes-tail"; "The Hare and the Hedgehog"; "The Straw Ox"; "The Wonderful Pot"; "The Jackal and the Alligator"; "Mother Hulda"; "Hans in Luck"; "The Frog Prince."

The foreign tales have been newly translated and the collection has variety and freshness.

HODGKINS, MRS. MARY D. H.

THE ATLANTIC TREASURY OF CHILDHOOD STORIES

Little $3.50

Illustrated. A carefully chosen collection of imaginative and realistic stories, good for a family bookshelf, as it contains some for all ages in its sections arranged under the headings: "Animals, Wise and Foolish"; "Enchantments and Magical Deeds"; "Fairies, Pixies and Elves"; "Dwarfs, Giants, and Ogres"; "Boys and Girls of Other Lands"; "Heroes and Heroines."

KIPLING, RUDYARD

Juvenile Edition. Illustrated. "How the Whale Got His Throat"; "The Elephant's Child"; "The Cat That Walked by Himself"; "The Sing-Song of Old Man Kangaroo," etc. Illustrated in color, $2.50; regular edition, $2.00.

"This is the picture of the Cat That Walked by Himself walking by his wild lone through the wet wild woods and waving his wild tail." From "Just So Stories." (Doubleday, Doran & Co.)

LINDSAY, MAUD

STORY GARDEN

Lothrop $1.25

Illustrated.

STORY-TELLER FOR LITTLE CHILDREN

Lothrop $1.25

Story Garden contains twenty finely told original stories, nearly all with some ethical significance. The Story-Teller is the same type of book, a bit older in content.

MOTHER STORIES

Bradley $1.50

Illustrated.

MORE MOTHER STORIES

Bradley $1.50

"Simple stories embodying some of the truths of Froebel's Mother Play. . . . Most of these stories have been told and retold to little children, and are surrounded, in my eyes, by a halo of listening faces. 'Mrs. Tabby Gray' is founded on a true story of a favorite cat. 'The Journey' is a new version of the old Stage Coach game . . . and I am indebted to some old story, read in childhood, for the suggestion of 'Dust Under the Rug.' (Preface.)

PERRAULT, CHARLES

TALES OF MOTHER GOOSE

Heath $.52

Translated by Charles Welsh.

FAIRY TALES

Dutton $1.25

With colored illustrations by Charles Robinson.

PERRAULT'S FAIRY TALES

Simpkins $1.50

Newly translated by S. R. Littlewood. With twelve colored illustrations by Honor C. Appleton. "This translation has been done with no other aim than to render Perrault's stories as simply and as literally as idiom will allow." (Preface.)

These are the stories Perrault chose to put into that important first fairy-tale book of his: "The Sleeping Beauty"; "Little Red-Riding-Hood"; "Bluebeard"; "Puss in Boots"; "The Fairies"; "Cinderella"; "Riquet of the Tuft"; "Little Thumbling."

POTTER, MIRIAM CLARK

THE GIANT OF APPLE PIE HILL

Dutton $2.50

THE PINAFORE POCKET STORY BOOK

Dutton $2.50

Illustrated by Sophia T. Balcom. Both books contain original stories and verses for three-, four-, and five-year-olds.

PYLE, HOWARD

PEPPER AND SALT, OR SEASONING FOR YOUNG

FOLK

Harper $2.00

Jolly fairy tales and story-telling poems illustrated by the author. Now this is the first of Howard Pyle's books for a child to have, but his mother or father must see to it that sooner or later he has every one!

PYLE, KATHARINE

MOTHER'S NURSERY TALES

Dutton $3.00

Thirty-four old tales for mothers to read and reread to three-, four-, and five-year-olds.

RICHARDS, LAURA

THE PIG BROTHER and Other Fables Little $.65

Short stories with a moral but told with a light and humorous touch.

SANDBURG, CARL

ROOTABAGA STORIES Harcourt $2.00

Illustrations and decorations by Maud and Miska Petersham. Contents: "Three Stories About the Finding of the Zig Zag Railroad, the Pigs with Bibs on, the Circus Clown Ovens, the Village of Liver-and-Onions, the Village of Cream Puffs"; "Five Stories About the Potato Face Blind Man"; "Three Stories About the Gold Buckskin Whincher"; "Four Stories About the Deep Doom of Dark Doorways"; "Three Stories About Three Ways the Wind Went Winding"; "Four Stories About Dear, Dear Eyes"; "One Story—'Only the Fire-born Understand Blue'"; "Two Stories About Corn Fairies, Blue Foxes, Flongboos, and Happenings That Happened in the United States and Canada."

Rootabaga Stories and the author's second book Rootabaga Pigeons, also illustrated by Maud and Miska Petersham (Harcourt, $2.00), are wholly unlike any others on this list. They are stories told by a poet to his own children, full of poetry, nonsense, philosophy, and great originality, with their sources in the effect of nature and the common life of America on a poet's spirit. They were written to be read aloud with gusto.

SCUDDER, HORACE E.

THE CHILDREN'S BOOK Houghton $2.50

Illustrated. A veritable treasure house of the best literature for children: fables, old fairy tales, many stories from Hans Andersen, stories from the Arabian Nights, from Gulliver's Travels, from Baron Munchausen's Travels, stories from Greece and Rome, ballads, poetry, "Goody Two Shoes," and many other famous stories. A child who was forced to depend upon this book alone would not fare badly. The book now seems old-fashioned in type and pictures, but the selection is fine enough to justify reprinting from fresh type in more than one volume.

When the annals of children's books in America are written the name of Horace Scudder will be one of an important small first group. Mr. Scudder was editor of the Riverside Magazine for Young People, published in Boston for a few years in the

From "Rootabaga Stories," illustrated by Maud and Miska Petersham. (Harcourt, Brace & Co.)

1870's. He was a great admirer of Hans Christian Andersen and did much to make his work more widely known. His chapter on Andersen in Childhood in Literature and Art is a delight which does not grow less with rereading. The stories Hans Andersen wrote after 1868 were published first by Mr. Scudder in the Riverside Magazine, a little in advance of their appearance in Denmark and England. Mr. Scudder spared no pains in searching out the simplest and best versions of old tales and fables. Compare the stories in his Fables and Folk Stories with some of the wordy, much-embroidered recent tellings. Throughout his work runs a special appreciation of childhood and the belief that the best in literature is none too good for children and the proper food for their spiritual growth.

SKINNER, IDA MARIA, and ELEANOR L.

A LITTLE CHILD'S BOOK OF STORIES Duffield $3.50

Contents: Stories for the three-, four-, and five-year-old, selected from folk and fairy tales, and the work of Hans Andersen, Walter de la Mare, Louisa Alcott, Beatrix Potter, Lydia Maria Child, Laura E. Richards, Maud Lindsay, and others. There are sixty stories and poems arranged in groups: "The Happy Child at Home"; "Out-of-Doors"; "Grandmother's Nursery Corner"; "For Winter Time" (including five Christmas stories).

WIGGIN, KATE DOUGLAS, and SMITH, NORA A.

THE STORY HOUR: A Book for the Home and the Kindergarten. Houghton $1.50

Seventeen stories to tell to little children.

FOR STORY-TELLERS

BONE, WOUTRINA AGATHA

CHILDREN'S STORIES AND HOW TO TELL THEM

Harcourt $1.50

The plea of the book is for a wider knowledge on the part of the story-teller for the stories he tells. Valuable to the story-writer also in its chapter on picture-making and word-choosing. Bibliographies. Various quotations from it will be found throughout this book.

BRYANT, SARA CONE

HOW TO TELL STORIES TO CHILDREN Houghton $1.60

After chapters on the Purpose of Story-telling, Selection of Stories to Tell, Adaptation of Stories, and How to Tell the Story, the author gives a collection of stories selected and adapted. In her chapter on The Purpose, the author says: "The message of the story is the message of beauty, as effective as that message in marble or paint. Its part in the economy of life is to give joy."

HEWINS, CAROLINE MARIA

A MID-CENTURY CHILD AND HER BOOKS

Macmillan $2.00

A famous New England librarian describes the books of her childhood and incidentally the home life of a bookloving Boston family of the early fifties.

SHEDLOCK, MARIE L.

THE ART OF THE STORY-TELLER

Appleton $2.00

There are many people in America fortunate enough to have heard this distinguished English story-teller in the few years she was here in America. In her book she discusses stories, their choice, study, and manner of presentation from the standpoint of her own experience. She answers "questions asked by teachers," gives eighteen stories, and lists of stories and books.

BIBLE STORIES

The room was low and small and kind;
And in its cupboard old,
The shells were set out to my mind;
The cups I loved with rims of gold.

Then, with that good gift which she had,
My mother showed at will,
David, the ruddy Syrian lad,
With his few sheep upon a hill;

Mary amid the homely din
As slim as violet
The Little Jesus, just within,
About His father's business set.

That week long, in our acres old,
Lad David did I see;
From out our cups with rims of gold,
The Little Jesus supped with me.

—LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE.

“There are parents, of course, who are troubled by the fact that they do not know how to answer their children's questions about the Bible and who want their boys and girls in their earliest years to gain a good start in the right understanding of the Book of Books. When such parents turn for aid to the Bible stories written for children, they have to search a long time to find anything that meets their needs in any measure. Perhaps the ideal book of Bible Stories has yet to be written.”

“The child should be so taught that he never gets the idea that truth conveyed through literal fact of science or history is on a wider level than truth conveyed through the forms of imagination. Let boys and girls, with their awakening interest in 'the thing that is really so,' learn that what is really so may be put into the form of poetry, fable, wonder-story, myth, or legend."

"A reliable foundation stone for later knowledge to rest on is the presentation of Bible tales as old, oft told, and much loved stories."¹

Small children should be allowed to hear bits of the Bible read aloud constantly in the actual words—certain of the Psalms and parts of the Gospels, for example. It does not matter that its meaning is not understood. Children feel the beauty and largeness of it. The spirit stores away both for its own hidden and ineffable uses. And a child's mind turns over and over for years, searching for all its meaning, sentences such as this:

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

"When the meadows laugh with lively green,
And the grasshopper laughs in the merry scene;
When Mary, and Susan, and Emily
With their sweet round mouths sing, 'Ha, Ha, He!'

"When the painted birds laugh in the shade,
Where our table with cherries and nuts is spread:
Come live, and be merry, and join with me,
To sing the sweet chorus of 'Ha, Ha, He!'"¹

¹The complete "Laughing Song," by William Blake, can be found in A Book of Verse for Children, compiled by E. V. Lucas, Holt & Co. See p. 78.

From an early edition of Juliana Horatia Ewing's
"Our Field."

FABLES

"A collection of Indian and, it is believed, Buddhist fables and stories traveled at an early period into Persia. From Persian they were translated into Arabic. The Arabic tales in turn migrated into Europe at the time of the Crusades and were rendered into Greek, Hebrew, and Latin. In this form they became accessible to the nations of Europe, were extensively circulated, and a collection of them was wrongly but very naturally ascribed to a famous story-teller of the ancient Greeks—i.e., Æsop." (FELIX ADLER.)

From "Æsop's Fables," illustrated by Richard Heighway. (The Macmillan Co.)

ÆSOP

FABLES OF ÆSOP (Children's Classics) Macmillan $1.75

Fables told anew and their history traced by Joseph Jacobs. With pictures by Richard Heighway. This will be a particularly satisfactory book to mothers and children with a real regard for books.

ÆSOP'S FABLES

Doubleday $3.50

A new translation by V. S. Vernon Jones with an introduction by G. K. Chesterton and illustrations by Arthur Rackham. Every page of this book of fables has exceeding charm and Mr. Chesterton's introduction is delightful. There is a certain vivid story-telling quality to the text which adds to the book's value.

A BABY'S OWN ÆSOP

Warne $1.50

Being the Fables condensed in rhyme with portable morals pictorially pointed by Walter Crane. In spite of its title the pages are in Crane's most intricately decorative style and so more pleasing to grown people than to children.

BABBITT, ELLEN C.

JATAKA TALES

Century $1.25

MORE JATAKA TALES

Century $1.00

Silhouette illustrations by Ellsworth Young. East Indian fables from the Jatakas, or Birth-stories, one of the sacred books of the Buddhists. These stories tell of the turtle who couldn't stop talking, the strong ox who won a forfeit, the foolish timid rabbit, the elephant Girly-face, the king of the banyan deer, and other beasts of fable.

KENT, FRANCES

PUPPY DOGS' TALES and Stories of Other Animal

Friends

Macmillan $2.00

Includes fables, folk-stories, and extracts from various tales, old and new.

LA FONTAINE, JEAN

FABLES CHOISIES POUR LES ENFANTS

Imported $2.50

Illustrated by M. Boutet de Monvel. Jean La Fontaine was a cynic and satirist living at the court of Louis XIV. He was steeped in the folk-lore of France and in the popular tales of the Middle Ages. He wrote verses using animals as prototypes of the humans he saw about him. The veiled allusions to his life at Versailles have now dropped away and to-day the universal application of his verses is interesting. These "Fables" appeared in 12 books from 1668-1694.

SCUDDER, HORACE

BOOK OF FABLES AND FOLK STORIES

Houghton $2.25

Illustrated by Maurice Day. This book contains a number of fables written for small children, together with a fine collection of the best tales from Perrault, Grimm, d'Aulnoy, and from the English collections.

The same without Mr. Day's pictures, 80 cents.

MAKING FRIENDS WITH NATURE

BERTELLI, LUIGI

THE PRINCE AND HIS ANTS

Holt $1.50

A little Italian boy is changed into an ant and learns all about the doings of ants, bees, and wasps.

BURGESS, THORNTON W.

BURGESS ANIMAL BOOK FOR CHILDREN

Little $2.50

Illustrated by Louis A. Fuertes. This book has many notably fine pictures in color. Its style is characteristic and is shown in the notes following.

BURGESS BIRD BOOK FOR CHILDREN

Little $2.50

Illustrated in color by Louis A. Fuertes. Written in the personal narrative style of the author's Bedtime Stories. Sweet Voice is the Vesper Sparrow; Winsome, the Bluebird; Buzztail, the Rattlesnake; Yap, Yap, the Prairie Dog, and Thunderfoot the Bison. The pictures are very numerous and are true in line and color.

BURGESS FLOWER BOOK FOR CHILDREN

Little $2.50

Peter Rabbit visits the Green Forest, guided by the birds "Winsome Bluebird," "Tommy Tit," and others, to search for flowers. The book contains one hundred and three pictures in color.

The chief value of these three books lies in their pictures, and in their possibilities for arousing interest in very young children. A seven- or eight-year-old who has a real interest will need other books.

DUNCAN, F. MARTIN, and DUNCAN, L. T.

WONDERS OF THE SEA (6 books)

Oxford each $.35

Wonders of the Shore; The Lobster and His Relations; The Starfish and His Relations; Dwellers in the Rock Pools; Life in the Deep Sea; The Sea Birds.

The first book covers plants, shells, and seaweed. This little set is very satisfactory. The text is interesting. There are numerous pictures, some of them in color. Although written for the English seashore, it is equally good for this side of the Atlantic.

Francis Bedford in "At the Back of the North Wind," by George Macdonald. (The Macmillan Co.)

"This is to certify that has learned fifteen constellations and four planets, and is fully qualified to enjoy the oldest and least known of all Nature-Studies." Thus reads the diploma at the end of the book. Through story-lessons and simple charts the child is introduced to star study.

WELLS, CARVETH

THE JUNGLE MAN AND HIS ANIMALS Duffield $2.00

Illustrated by Tony Sarg. Laughable tales of jungle life, strange but true, written in the loose, formless style of impromptu storytelling.

WESTELL, W. PERCIVAL, and TURNER, HENRY E.

OPEN-AIR NATURE BOOKS Dent each $.60

The Hedge I Know; The Pond I Know; The Wood I Know; The Meadow I Know; The Stream I Know; The Common I Know; The Seashore I Know.

Interesting little books with many pictures. Each one gives an all-round look at Nature in the spot chosen. Although for English countryside, many children would be interested in learning of the differences and likenesses between there and here.

Then the little Hiawatha
 Learned of every bird its language,
 Learned their names and all their secrets,
 How they build their nests in Summer,
 Where they hid themselves in Winter,
 Talked with them whene'er he met them,
 Called them "Hiawatha's Chickens."
 Of all beasts he learned the language,
 Learned their names and all their secrets,
 How the beavers built their lodges,
 Where the squirrels hid their acorns,
 How the reindeer ran so swiftly,
 Why the rabbit was so timid,
 Talked with them whene'er he met them,
 Called them "Hiawatha's Brothers."

—HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

From "At the Back of the North Wind," illustrated by F. D. Bedford. (The Macmillan Co.)

PEREZ THE MOUSE

Dodd $.85

With illustrations by George Howard Vyse. Translated from the Spanish. How little King Bube went with Perez the Mouse into out-of-the-way parts of his kingdom. First written to amuse a real little boy king. An amusing and unique little story.

DAUDET, ALPHONSE

THE POPE'S MULE (The Little Library) Macmillan $1.00

Colored frontispiece and other drawings by Herouard. "One day Tistet [the Pope's servant] took it into his head to make the mule go up with him into the belfry tower, the highest point of the Palace." This is far from being the end of the story, for the mule scored there in old Avignon.

From "The Pope's Mule," illustrated by Herouard.
(The Macmillan Co.)

DUSSAUZE, ALICE

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

Macmillan $1.00

Translated by Allan Ross MacDougall. Illustrated by Anne Merriman Peck. A favorite French story of a brave little rabbit who saved a nightingale's nest from a snake and was in turn helped by a cuckoo.

HOGAN, INEZ

SÉGUR, SOPHIE, COMTESSE De

THE MEMOIRS OF A DONKEY (The Little Library)

Macmillan $1.00

Translated by Marguerite Fellows Melcher. Illustrated by Lauren Ford. Cadichon the Learned Donkey tells the story of his life. Lauren Ford's pictures must have been drawn in Normandy where donkeys like Cadichon are still busy.

WAITT, PAUL

ADVENTURES OF MOLLY, WADDY AND TONY

Little $1.00

The elephants at Franklin Park, Boston. Their story is continued in Further Adventures of Molly, Waddy and Tony, $1.00.

WELLS, RHEA

PEPPI THE DUCK

Doubleday $2.00

Illustrated by the author. Peppi was an adventurous duck who lived in the courtyard of an old castle in the Tyrolean Alps. He and Franz, the gardener's son, were good friends, and for that reason Peppi escaped the fate of being roasted. The book is full of fun, and there are many, many pictures of Peppi, and of Franz and the people of the countryside in their gay costumes.

WISE CATS AND BOISTEROUS PUPPIES

ALDIN, CECIL, Illustrator

BUNNYBOROUGH

Oxford $1.50

Stories by M. Byron. One warm day in June Rags, the wire-haired puppy, ate up the kitchen cat's dinner as well as his own, then strolled into the kitchen garden, wormed his way into the asparagus bed, and there, "after two or three preliminary circles in order to press down the growing plants comfortably, he sank down on the luxurious bed he had formed," when—but you must read for yourself all his adventures in Bunnyborough.

FIELD BABIES

Oxford $1.25

In this book a little spaniel tells of his encounters with goslings, ducks, rabbits, porcupines, and other field babies.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE

Oxford O.P.

HUNGRY PETER—HIS ADVENTURES

Oxford $.60

JACK AND JILL

Oxford $1.50

Stories by M. Byron. "Jill is a nice affectionate pussy-cat (So I say), and Jack (that's me) is a singularly handsome terrier (so she says)."

MAC: THE ADVENTURES OF A SCOTCH TERRIER

Oxford $1.50

As for Mac: the Adventures of a Scotch Terrier, The Bookshop is always a jollier place when "Mac" is in it. "I tell't him ma name, every sylup of it, Macgillysloganardnamurchanmore; and says he, 'Is it the long or the short of it ye're after giving me?' 'The short of it,' say I, 'is Mac.'" We beg the publishers in England to re-print this book.

THE MERRY PUPPY BOOK

Oxford $1.50

Stories by M. Byron.

THE MONGREL PUPPY BOOK

Oxford $1.00

This is almost as good as Mac: the Adventures of a Scotch Terrier.

Illustrated by Gertrude Kay. A jolly story of a black cat who proves himself a hero.

CRAIK, GEORGIANA MARION

SO-FAT AND MEW-MEW

Heath $.56

With an introduction by Lucy Wheelock. "The development of amiable traits of character from most disagreeable ones is told in so skilful a fashion as to hold up a mirror to many a fretful and discontented child who finds people and things generally wrong." (Introduction.)

From "The Cat and the Captain," illustrated by Gertrude Kay. (The Macmillan Co.)

FIELD, RACHEL

LITTLE DOG TOBY (The Little Library) Macmillan $1.00

Little Dog Toby's performances with Punch and Judy make him many friends. One of his merriest adventures is the Christmas party at Buckingham Palace.

*FRANCIS, J. G.*THE BOOK OF CHEERFUL CATS AND OTHER ANIMATED ANIMALS

Century $1.50

Amusing pictures and

"Some cat-land fancies, drawn and dressed
To cheer your mind when it's depressed."

FYLEMAN, ROSE

THE RAINBOW CAT

Doubleday $2.00

Illustrated by Thelma Cudlipp Grosvenor. "This fairy cat had a violet nose, indigo eyes, pale blue ears, green front legs, and a red tail. It lived, of course, in Fairyland and had all sorts of strange adventures."

From "Millions of Cats." (Coward, McCann.)

GAG, WANDA

MILLIONS OF CATS

Coward $1.25

An unusual picture-book tale of a kindly old man who goes searching for a kitten and finds—millions of cats.

HEWARD, CONSTANCE

CHAPPIE AND THE OTHERS

Warne $.75

Pictures by Savile Lumley. "Nobody knew where he came from, or how he got into the house, but there he was, calmly sitting on the mat in the hall, trying to lick the mud off his coat—a long-legged, miserable puppy, with a heavy stone tied securely to a piece of rope around his neck."

THE TWINS AND TABIFFA

Macrae $1.50

Pictures by Susan Beatrice Pearse. Another delightful picture story by the authors of Ameliar-Anne and The Green Umbrella. (See page 139.) Tabiffa is loved by the twins and is a much-honored cat when she saves the house from being burned.

HILL, HELEN, and MAXWELL, VIOLET

CHARLIE AND HIS PUPPY BINGO Macmillan $1.25

"Charlie was a little boy who lived with his mother and his daddy and his Auntie in a house in the city. . . . A cat called Jane and her kitten Topsy also lived in the house." And then came Bingo. The authors have tried to use simple language and to write the stories as they would be told. The style is informal with much repetition.

MCCOY, NEELY

THE TALE OF THE GOOD CAT JUPIE Macmillan $1.75

Jean and Jupie kept house together and had many amusing adventures. Followed by Jupie Follows His Tale, $1.75.

PYLE, KATHARINE

THE BLACK-EYED PUPPY Dutton $2.00

The puppy tells his own story of how he was sold and became a circus dog, and then luckily was found again by Tommy, the little boy who was his first master.

ROBINSON, MABEL

LITTLE LUCIA AND HER PUPPY Dutton $1.50

How Little Lucia and the puppy Laddie play together from the time Laddie was a puppy until he was a beautiful dog.

RUSKIN, JOHN

DAME WIGGINS OF LEE AND HER SEVEN WONDERFUL CATS (The Little Library) Macmillan $1.00

Illustrated by Roy Meldrum. This famous old ballad was first published in 1823. It professed to be by a lady of ninety. In 1885 Mr. Ruskin brought out a new edition with four new pictures by Kate Greenaway and new verses by himself.

"Dame Wiggins of Lee
Was a worthy old soul
As e'er threaded a needle or washed in a bowl:
She held mice and rats
In such antipathee
That seven fine cats
Kept Dame Wiggins of Lee."

The same: facsimile of 1823 edition. Dutton $1.00

STRYKER, MABEL F.

LITTLE DOG "READY" Holt $1.50

Illustrated by Hugh Spencer. How Ready lost himself in the big world.

"A true story about a real cat."

WHITNEY, ELINOR

TYKE-Y: HIS BOOK AND HIS MARK Macmillan $1.50

The adventures of a Welsh terrier puppy when he was learning what joys and sorrows make up a dog's day. Written in simple language with silhouettes of Tyke-y in action by the author.

YOUMANS, ELEANOR

SKITTER CAT AND LITTLE BOY Bobbs $1.50

Skitter is a beautiful Persian cat who goes with a little boy and his family on a vacation trip into the Rocky Mountains.

YOUNG, LILLIAN E.

PUSSY WILLOW'S NAUGHTY KITTENS Funk $2.00

A simple story with many illustrations. It contains a device which will interest children. Some of the pictures show a door or a cupboard which with the help of a metal sheet found at the back of the book may be cut open to reveal what some naughty kitten is up to.

PLAYTHINGS IN ACTION

So wherever I am, there's always Pooh,
There's always Pooh and Me.
"What would I do?" I said to Pooh,
"If it wasn't for you," and Pooh said: "True,
It isn't much fun for One, but Two Can stick together," says Pooh, says he.
"That's how it is," says Pooh.

—A. A. MILNE, Now We Are Six.

BIANCO, MARGERY WILLIAMS

THE ADVENTURES OF ANDY

Doubleday $3.00

Pictures by Leon Underwood. After Andromeda's little girl was married there did not seem to be anything for her to do but to go away and never come back. She encounters others of the B. A. T. (Brotherhood of Ancient Toys) in her travels, and has many adventures that are out of the ordinary for a doll, and in the most desperate of them a mysterious stranger always comes to the rescue in a most romantic way.

From "Poor Cecco," illustrated by Arthur Rackham.
(Doubleday, Doran & Co.)

POOR CECCO

Doubleday $3.00

Illustrated by Arthur Rackham. The wonder story of a wonderful wooden dog who was the jolliest toy in the house until he went out to explore the world.

Murruum the cat locks all the toys tight into their cupboard. They get out and go on a treasure hunt, Poor Cecco, the dog; Jensina the Gypsy doll, Tubby and all the others.

THE SKIN HORSE

Doubleday $1.50

Illustrated by Pamela Bianco. A moving story of how the toy horse was loved by a little sick boy and came on shiny wings to take him on a long journey.

THE VELVETEEN RABBIT, or HOW TOYS BECOME

REAL

Doubleday $2.00

With illustrations by William Nicholson.

"What is REAL?" asked the rabbit one day. "Does it mean having things that buzz inside you, and a stick out handle?"

"Real isn't how you are made," said the Skin Horse. "It's a thing that happens to you when a child loves you for a long, long time, not just to play with, but REALLY loves you, then you become REAL."

Another very perfect book by Mrs. Bianco will be found in the Dolls' section with a note which says that The Little Wooden Doll is illustrated with pictures made by the author's daughter, Pamela, when she was a little girl of nine. Here, then, is a mother who writes stories of toys—toys of her own children—with a sensitive imaginative quality akin to the work of Hans Andersen.

FANCIULLI, GIUSEPPE

THE LITTLE BLUE MAN

Houghton $1.75

Translated by May M. Sweet. Illustrated.

"This puppet tale from the pen of one of Italy's most popular writers is reminiscent of Andersen in poetic style and clear childlike characterization." (Introduction by Effie L. Power.)

LEWIS, JANET

THE FRIENDLY ADVENTURES OF OLLIE OSTRICH

Doubleday $1.25

Illustrated by Fay Turpin.

"I'm an Ostrich," said he, "and my name is Ollie, and I have a solid mahogany tail."

"Well," said the gulls, "what do you think of that!"

"By and by the gulls said, 'Where are you going now?'"

““Oh, anywhere,” said Ollie. ‘I was just made this morning, and I’m off to see the world.’”

Ollie does adventure all around the Lake Superior country and he makes many friends and sees many things.

LINDSAY, MAUD

THE TOY SHOP

Lothrop $1.50

Simple, realistic stories of the toys that come from a toy shop kept by a little old lady with silvery hair and twinkling eyes, who could tell the very thing to buy for a little boy or a little girl.

MILNE, A. A.

THE HOUSE AT POOH CORNER

Dutton $2.00

Christopher Robin is growing up. Pooh is the same old Pooh, and so is Piglet much as usual, but Tigger is a new friend, strange and bouncy.

WINNIE-THE-POOH

Dutton $2.00

Drawings by E. H. Shepard. Christopher Robin hears stories about the doings of his bear, Winnie-the-Pooh, and Piglet and Rabbit and Eeyore, the old Grey Donkey, and Kanga and Little Roo. So complete a success that Pooh, the Bear of Little Brain, takes a front place among the immortals in children’s literature.

From “Winnie-the-Pooh,” illustrated by E. H. Shepard. (E. P. Dutton & Co.)

DOLLS

(Edited by Alice-Heidi and Wendy, the Doll Members of The Bookshop Staff)

First of all we should like to introduce ourselves. I'm Alice-Heidi and I'm the elder. I have been in The Bookshop since December, 1916. Wendy came in March, 1926. We live in the most wonderful little house that is up close to the big window that looks out to the Public Garden and the pond where the swanboats are. They say the house is early Colonial. That probably is because there's a Dutch oven set in by the paneled fireplace and because our house is furnished with a big wing chair and a chaise-longue, also a big four-poster bed, and braided rugs, and things like that. I'm quite tall. I can reach the top shelf of the bookcase without standing on the stool. Wendy can't, but she is a tomboyish doll and she just as lief climb right up the shelves. She likes to tip over the wing chair too and sit on the back and lean against the seat. She thinks it much more comfortable. We are both fair with light hair and blue eyes. I could go on and tell a great deal about ourselves, but what they have asked us to do is to tell about all the doll books and what we think of them.

I have written some of the notes and Wendy has written some. We begin with one of our favorites. By the way, we like a poem about "The New Doll's House" which perhaps you haven't seen. It's all about Christina Jane's "West-End Mansion" and it sounds even grander than ours for

The bedrooms shall be chintz,

BENSON, A. C., and WEAVER, SIR LAWRENCE
 EVERYBODY'S BOOK OF THE QUEEN'S DOLLS' HOUSE

Methuen $2.50

This is about the most wonderful dolls' house in the world. It was built for a queen by all the most famous artists and designers in her kingdom. There are many rooms all furnished down to the very littlest things. There is a library of tiny real books and a wee model of the Royal George and a kitchen larder with hams and all kinds of things stored away in it. You probably can't think of anything that isn't in that house. Besides this small book about it there is a large two-volume edition which we have in The Bookshop full of large colored pictures. (Stokes, $50.00.) Then there is also a set of sixty colored post cards ($3.00).

BIANCO, MARGERY WILLIAMS

THE LITTLE WOODEN DOLL (The Little Library)

Macmillan $1.00

The little wooden doll wasn't very good-looking and she lived in a garret with only horrid spiders for company, but the spiders weren't so horrid after all, and the mice were her friends, and in the end all the little creatures of the woods helped to make her a beautiful doll. Pamela Bianco, the author's little girl, made the pictures for this story when she was nine years old. Wendy and I like it so much we know it by heart.

BOUTET DE MONVEL, L. M.

SUSANNA'S AUCTION

Macmillan $1.00

Translated from the French. Preface by the New York Children's Bookshop. Susanna was really a very nice little girl because she loved her doll so very much, but she was naughty when she broke her mother's lovely vase and wouldn't say she was sorry. There are very funny pictures of Susanna with her nose up in the air.

BROWN, ABBIE FARWELL

THE LONESOMEST DOLL

Houghton $1.75

Illustrated by Arthur Rackham. I was lonely before Wendy came, so I felt very sorry for this doll who belonged to a little queen who didn't know how to play with her. I was glad when the porter's little girl came into the story and they all had a good time.

BURNETT, MRS. FRANCES HODGSON

RACKETTY-PACKETTY HOUSE: as told by Queen

Crosspatch

Century $1.00

Wendy thinks it would be fun to visit Racketty-Packetty House because in the story there was always so much going on and everything was always topsy-turvy.

H. W. CANNING-WRIGHT

PEEPS AT THE WORLD'S DOLLS

Macmillan $1.50

We were astonished to see how many different kinds of dolls there are in the world and what funny clothes some of them wear. The book has many pictures and some of them are in color.

DIAZ, MRS. ABBY MORTON

POLLY COLOGNE

Lothrop $1.50

Oh, my gracious, I certainly would hate to get lost the way Polly Cologne did. Alice-Heidi might be able to use her head and get back again, but I should die of fright. Rover may have been a very nice dog, but I wouldn't want to get inside his mouth.

If you want to hear "who did find her and how she went on her travels, and of the different people she stayed with, and how she came back, and when she came back, and what happened to Rover, and how he came back, and when he came back," you must read the book.

GATES, MRS. JOSEPHINE

THE STORY OF LIVE DOLLS

Bobbs $1.25

Ever since we read this book we have been wishing there would come another June day when all dolls would come alive as they did in the village of Cloverdale. Wendy thinks she would go swan-boating if this did happen, and I think I would like to sell books. There is a second story, More About Live Dolls, which tells other exciting things these Cloverdale dolls did.

HORNE, RICHARD (Fairstar, Mrs., pseud.)

THE MEMOIRS OF A LONDON DOLL (The Little Library)

Macmillan $1.25

Illustrated by Emma Brock. Maria Poppet tells of her life in London, first with one dear mama and then another, each in different rank and circumstance. This was first published in 1852 and seems very interesting and quaint to us modern dolls.

PHILLIPS, ETHEL CALVERT

PRETTY POLLY PERKINS

Houghton $1.50

The story of a much-loved rag doll that belonged to three mothers instead of one and so had to become three dolls instead of one. We wonder what Santa Claus really did say when he saw three Polly Perkinses.

THE POPOVER FAMILY

Houghton $1.75

Such funny people as the Popover family were who lived in the little Red Doll House. We laughed and laughed over the funny things they did and said. They had some real adventures, too.

We were just going to tell you about Miss Eliza Orne White's stories so full of little girls and their dolls when They said, "Oh, no, Miss White's books are going somewhere else!" Wendy and I were so distressed! "Why, oh why, can't we have them on our Dolls' pages when we like them almost the best of all?" The editors explained to us that Miss White's stories are more about little girls than about dolls. We are disappointed, but we hope you'll like all the books we like.

From "Memoirs of a London Doll," illustrated by Emma Brock. (The Macmillan Co.)

OF TINKER BELL AND OTHERS

"Poor Tinker Bell was dying, and die she would have done, were it not that Peter, in a frenzy of grief, and with tears in his eyes, made this passionate appeal to all children.

"Do you believe in fairies? If you do, clap your hands, and that will save poor Tinker Bell."

"As his cry rang around the world, there came an echo of sound as of millions of little hands clapping, as if all the children throughout the world knew suddenly that of course they believed in fairies."

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN

THUMBELINA (The Little Library) Macmillan $1.00

With pictures by Einar Nerman. The spring of 1928 brought a charming new Little Library volume: Thumbelina, that tiny child who was born in a tulip, cradled in a walnut shell with violet leaves for her mattress and a rose leaf for her coverlet. She is stolen by Old Frog, saved by the fishes and a butterfly, carried away by cockchafer, and cherished through the cold winter by Fieldmouse. But when Fieldmouse would wed her to old Mole, Thumbelina's friend the Swallow carries her south where she marries a Prince of flowers.

BAKER, MARGARET

THE BLACK CATS AND THE TINKER'S WIFE Duffield $2.00

The tinker and his wife traveled up and down the land, he mending pots and pans, and she telling tales of elves, dwarfs, and water sprites to the children. One night in a wild storm they took refuge in a cave. There before the fire sat ever so many black cats. We must not tell you any more—you must read for yourself.

THE LOST MERBABY

Duffield $2.00

"A baby would be so troublesome," said the fisherman's wife. "How should I keep my little house neat and clean with a baby to mind?" And down in the sea the mermaids were complaining about their merbaby, how she played with their seaweeds and spoiled them; how lovely she was, oh yes, but what a nuisance! They put her in a fisherman's basket! What happened then?

From "The Pixies and the Silver Crown," illustrated by Mary Baker. (Duffield & Co.)

THE PIXIES AND THE SILVER CROWN Duffield $2.00

Nan and Danny lose a silver crown while crossing the Common on the way to the fair on Midsummer Day. The pixies find it and have great fun with it.

THE WATER ELF AND THE MILLER'S CHILD

Duffield $2.00

A friendly little story in which the Wise Woman brings good fortune to the miller's family. Silhouettes by Mary Baker.

Mary Baker has made delightful silhouettes for each of her sister's stories. The books are printed in large type and are unusually attractive.

BARRIE, J. M.

THE PETER PAN PICTURE BOOK (The Little Library)

Macmillan $1.00

The story simplified from J. M. Barrie's play by Daniel O'Connor.

PETER PAN AND WENDY

Scribner $1.00

Retold by May Byron for little people with the approval of the author. With pictures in color and line by Mabel Lucie Attwell.

PETER PAN

Silver $.92

Retold by F. P. Perkins from the play.

Each of these books is a pleasant adaptation of the Peter Pan story but why not wait a bit and read Barrie's own story? (See page 273.)

BOWEN, WILLIAM

MERRIMEG

Macmillan $2.00

Illustrated by Emma Brock. Merrimeg was impatient of dusting and bed-making, but the fairies taught her better ways.

CASSERLEY, ANNE

MICHAEL OF IRELAND

Harper $1.50

Stories of lucky Michael, who, although he belonged to nobody, knew intimately so many delightful personages, Flanagan Pig, the Eldest Goat, Drimin the Cow, the Giant of the mountain side, and the Leprechaun. A group of stories that bring with them the freshness of the heather-covered hillsides of Ireland and the flavor of the finest of the old folk tales.

"Here you sit round the blazing turf fire and listen to stories, which you more than half disbelieve, of how every bunch of heather in the glen hides a fairy—Joe O'Donnel saw one with his own eyes—'a wee woman happed in a red cloak'—the speaker will vouch for the truth of it! Here also you will learn the danger of throwing water out of your kitchen door without warning, lest the fairies be passing at the moment; and here you will be instructed in the necessity for fastening rowan branches over your door on May Eve; and here you will learn the awful consequences of making too free with the old fairy Thorn, which stands, grey, leafless, and solitary, on the hillside.

"As the evening shadows creep on, you reluctantly turn again homewards, carrying with you the scents of mountain and wood, of heather, gorse, and bracken; carrying with you also memories, never to be lost in after life, of the leaping flames of the turf fire, and the faces of those sunburnt, barefooted children, who sit round and tell, with bated breath, their tales of the Fairy People."¹

THE WHINS OF KNOCKATTAN

Harper $2.00

A rare book of the Little Black Lamb who always has something to say for himself, of Paudeen and his Grandmother, of Shaughran, the old red fox, and many other dwellers on the whin-covered hillside of Knockattan.

COLUM, PADRAIC

THE BOY WHO KNEW WHAT THE BIRDS SAID

Macmillan $1.75

The old Crow sat there looking so wise and so friendly that the Boy began to talk to her at his ease. And after a while the Boy said:

From "The Boy Who Knew What the Birds Said," illustrated by Dugald Stewart Walker. (The Macmillan Co.)

"Ma'am, do you think I could ever learn what the Birds say?"

"You would, if you had me to teach you," said the Crow.

"And will you teach me, ma'am?" said the Boy.

"I will," said the Crow.

So well did the Crow teach the Boy that he heard the tale of "The Stone of Victory" from the grouse; "The King of the Birds" from the wrens; "Bloom of Youth and the Witch of the Elders" from the woodpecker; "The Hen-wife's Son and the Princess Bright-Crow from the Stonechecker" (the bird that built within the stones of the Tower); and "The Giant and the Birds"; "The Sea-Maiden Who Became a Swan"; "What the Peacock and the Crow Told Each Other," and "The Treasure of King Labraid Lorc," from other birds.

¹ Anne Casserley, The Horn Book, Volume 3, Number IV.

THE CHILDREN WHO FOLLOWED THE PIPER

Macmillan $1.75

The children who followed the Piper in Padraic Colum's book were very many indeed, "and besides these there went three children who were just as nice as any of the others. Golden Hood I'll name first. She was the milk-woman's child. Then there was John Ball, the Miller's son, and Valentine, the son of the Emperor. These three children went together, and what adventures they had with John Ball, the hero of some of them!

THE GIRL WHO SAT BY THE ASHES

Macmillan $1.75

Many a little girl has wished to know more about Cinderella. Here is a book to please her. "Because she used to herd Goats in the high places and the rocky places, she went by the name of Girl-Go-with-the-Goats. But that was not the name that she herself called herself. She called herself Maid-alone."

The above three books are the same size, with drawings and decorations by Dugald Stewart Walker. They are a poet's books and therefore simple and with beauty in them.

COX, PALMER

THE BROWNIES: Their Book

Century $1.75

"Brownies, like fairies and goblins, are imaginary little sprites who are supposed to delight in harmless pranks and helpful deeds. They work and sport while weary households sleep and never allow themselves to be seen by mortal eyes."

Many mothers and fathers will remember their first acquaintance with Mr. Cox's merry, busy brownies, in the pages of St. Nicholas. Their doings are told in verse, but perhaps their pictured story has the greatest interest for children. The Brownies may be pursued through eight other volumes: Another Brownie Book; The Brownies at Home; The Brownies Around the World; The Brownies through the Union; The Brownies Abroad; The Brownies in the Philippines; The Brownies' Latest Adventures; The Brownies' Many More Nights.

CRAIK, DINAH M. MULOCK

THE ADVENTURES OF A BROWNIE

Rand $1.50

Illustrated by Mary Lott Seaman. A story of all the things a Brownie can do in the house and out of the house when things are not to his liking.

THE COUNTERPANE FAIRY

Dutton $1.50

To Teddy, who is ill in bed, comes the Counterpane Fairy, walking up the hill made by his knees. "Choose any one of the squares of the counterpane, look straight at it while I count seven times seven, and I'll show you a story," said the Fairy.

"Then Golden Horn saw a white fawn where the crocuses grow." Drawing by Dugald Stewart Walker for "The Children Who Followed the Piper." (The Macmillan Co.)

BOYS AND GIRLS

The children were shouting together
And racing along the sands,
A glimmer of dancing shadows,
A dovelike flutter of hands.
The stars were shouting in heaven,
The sun was chasing the moon;
The game was the same as the children's
They danced to the self-same tune. . . .

PEGGY IN HER BLUE FROCK	Houghton	$1.65
THE STRANGE YEAR	Houghton	$1.65
TONY	Houghton	$1.75
WHEN MOLLY WAS SIX	Houghton	$1.65

Many children to-day, as children in every age, suffer and are unhappy on account of the grown-ups who surround them. Yet now, as always, there are many other children so fortunate as to live in homes kept wholesomely tranquil and at the same time pleasantly alive by grown-ups with the faculty for rich and graceful living; grown-ups whose keen interest in children will protect them as far as possible and as far as is wise from the turbulence of adult life.

This is the kind of home Miss White presents in her stories, and always the scene is New England at its best: sometimes the country town; sometimes the seashore; sometimes Boston or Springfield; but wherever the place, true and natural, with real people, clearly drawn.

Miss White's books for children are written from the rich warp and woof of her own experience and tradition. Like Mrs. Ewing, she writes without condescension, without sentimentality, and with no straining for effect. The complete family picture she presents, and also the neighborhood scene—children and grown-ups in friendly, natural relations—this it is which makes her books so satisfactory to young and old alike. Each character is clear and real. Miss White never spends time describing her people. You know them well by the things they do and say.

A Little Girl of Long Ago is the story of Miss White's mother in the Boston of one hundred years ago. The "little girl" is called "Marietta" in the book and her friend Lenora is none other than Lucretia Hale of Peterkin Papers.

ZWILGMEYER, DIKKEN

JOHNNY BLOSSOM

Pilgrim $1.50

Illustrated. Translated from the Norwegian by Emilie Poulsson. Stories of a jolly little Norwegian boy—his crab fishing, his sailing with an umbrella, how he became a credit to his school, and about his birthday party.

UNMANNERLY CHILDREN

Josephus never yet was heard
 To say but just one single word!
 When father said to go to bed,
 Then "Why?" was all Josephus said.
 When mother bade him stop his play,
 Then "Why?" Josephus used to say.
 He always made the same reply.
 'Twas never anything but "Why?"
 —GELETT BURGESS, Goops and How to Be Them.

ADELBORG, OTTILIA

CLEAN PETER AND THE CHILDREN OF GRUBBYLEA

Longmans $1.50

How Clean Peter helped the untidy children of Grubbylea.
 Told in verse with many colored pictures.

"The Children out in Grubbylea are all as black as black can be In pools of mud they gaily prance and never wash by any chance."

BELLOC, H.

THE BAD CHILD'S BOOK OF BEASTS, together with More Beasts for Worse Children and Cautionary Tales

Knopf $2.50

Pictures by B. T. B. Nonsense verses with many pictures:

"Be kind and tender to the Frog and do not call him names, as 'Shinyskin,' or 'polly-wog,' or likewise 'Ugly James,' or 'Gap-a-grin,' or 'Toad-gone-wrong,' or 'Bill Bandy-knees.' The Frog is justly sensitive to epithets like these."

BURGESS, GELETT

GOOPS AND HOW TO BE THEM

Stokes $1.50

"Let me introduce a Race
 Void of Beauty and of Grace, Extraordinary Creatures
 With a paucity of features.
 Though their forms are fashioned ill,
 They have manners stranger still . . ."

MORE GOOPS AND HOW NOT TO BE THEM Stokes $1.50

"Why is it Goops must always wish
To touch each apple on the dish?
Why do they never neatly fold
Their napkins until they are told?
Why do they play with food, and bite
Such awful mouthfuls? Is it right?
Why do they tilt back in their chairs?
Because they're Goops! So no one cares."

HOFFMAN, HEINRICH

SLOVENLY PETER: or Cheerful Stories and Funny Pictures

Winston $1.50

An old favorite which originated in Germany. The pictures are grotesque and crudely bright in color. The verses depict the horrors that result from disobedience and other faults of childhood. Who could wish to imitate Slovenly Peter or Cruel Frederic or Fidgety Philip?

MAXWELL, VIOLET, and HILL, HELEN

CHARLIE AND HIS KITTEN TOPSY Macmillan $1.25

Illustrated. Charlie was a good little boy and a nice little boy except for a few faults, and how he came NEVER AGAIN to do any of these naughty things, these stories tell in an amusing and original way.

PYLE, KATHARINE

CARELESS JANE, and Other Tales Dutton $1.25

Illustrated. Verses and pictures telling of careless children whose faults led them into trouble.

LAZY MATILDA, and Other Tales Dutton $2.00

More verse stories of naughty children.

TAYLOR, JANE and ANN

MEDDLESOME MATTY Viking $1.75

NONSENSE

If the pony rode his master,
If the buttercups ate the cows,
If the cats had the dire disaster
To be worried, sir, by the mouse;
If Mamma, sir, sold the baby
To a gypsy for half a crown;
If a gentleman, sir, was a lady,—
The world would be upside-down!
—WILLIAM BRIGHTY RANDS.

DARWIN, BERNARD and ELINOR

THE TALE OF MR. TOOTLEOO Harper $2.00

Young descendants of the great Mr. Darwin have made an amusing nonsense book.

“Now! listen while I tell to you
The tale of Mr. Tootleoo,
A sailor jovial and brave,
Who sailed upon the ocean wave.”

TOOTLEOO TWO Harper $2.00

Another verse story about shipwrecked Mr. Tootleoo and the Cockyolly family.

HORNE, RICHARD HENRY

THE GOOD-NATURED BEAR (The Little Library)
Macmillan $1.00

Illustrated by Lisl Hummel.

“All the children were ready to die with laughter, more especially as they were obliged to keep the laugh in, for fear of giving offense. As for little Val, he fell upon the floor with keeping his laugh in, and there he lay kicking; and as for Gretchen, who had covered her face with her handkerchief, she was heard to give a sort of little scream; and as for Nancy, she had run to the sofa and covered her head with one of the pillows; they all found it so difficult to help bursting into a peal of laughter.”

You will remember that this was the book the London Doll liked best of those many and delightful ones read to the Doll Shop family as they worked, by little Emmy.¹

The Good-natured Bear tells the story of his life to the delighted Littlepump family.

From "The Good-Natured Bear." Illustrated by Lisl Hummel. (The Macmillan Co.)

KING PENGUIN (The Little Library) Macmillan $1.00

Illustrated by Jimmie Daugherty. A legend of the South Sea Isles. A fanciful nonsensical tale in which the hero becomes conscience-smitten in his betrayal of the King of the Penguins. He admits he never knew any dog, poodle, terrier, hound, or cur who would have done what he had done, but he makes amends.

HOWES, ISAAH C.

JANE, BE GOOD! and Other Verses Macmillan $1.50

Funny verses devised and illustrated by a humorous and devoted grandfather.

LEAR, EDWARD

NONSENSE BOOKS

Little $2.00

With the original illustrations by Lear and an account of his life.

"How pleasant to know Mr. Lear
 Who has written such volumes of Stuff!
 Some think him ill-tempered and queer,
 But a few think him pleasant enough.

 "When he walks in a waterproof white,
 The children run after him so!
 Calling out, He's come out in his nightgown,
 That crazy old Englishman, oh!"

LEAR'S NONSENSE SONGS

Warne $3.50

With illustrations in color and black and white by Leslie Brooke.

"I have become so fat for want of exercise that you would not know me, so I attach a portrait." "Letters of Edward Lear," edited by Lady Strachey.

LOFTING, HUGH

NEWELL, PETER

THE HOLE BOOK

Harper $1.00

The hole made by a capricious bullet shot by a small boy is cut into every picture and shows just what it does in its amazing and startling entrance upon everyday peace.

THACKERAY, WILLIAM MAKEPEACE

THE ROSE AND THE RING (The Little Library)

Macmillan $1.00

Illustrated by the author.

"Here begins the Pantomime:
Royal Folks at breakfast time.
Awful consequence of crime!
Ah, I fear, King Valoroso,
That your conduct is but so-so!
Here behold the Monarch sit
With Her Majesty opposite.
How the Monarch ruled his Nation.
Gruffanuff, and what her station.
Beware of pride without a cause.
Who the Fairy Blackstick was.
Fairy roses, fairy rings
Turn out sometimes troublous things," etc.

Thus run the page headings which Thackeray put to the first edition and which are also in this edition together with the original pictures. This famous nonsense story tells of the complications brought about by the fairy rose and the fairy ring which made the bearer of either charming to whoever beheld them.

From "The Rose and the Ring." (The Macmillan Co.)

WALKER, KENNETH M., and BOUMPHREY, GEOFFREY M.

WHAT HAPPENED IN THE ARK

Dutton $2.00

Illustrated. The Ark under way, and the difficulties of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japhet to keep the animal family contented. Many children will find this funny.

GAMES AND OCCUPATIONS

The Camel's Hump is an ugly hump
Which well you may see at the Zoo;
But uglier yet is the hump we get
From having too little to do.

—KIPLING, Just So Stories.

BURRELL, CAROLINE BENEDICT (Pseud. C. F. Benton)

A LITTLE COOK-BOOK FOR A LITTLE GIRL Page $1.10

Tells how a little girl named Margaret learned to cook and what she made for breakfast, forl uncheon, or for supper, and what she made for dinner. We know a girl much older than Margaret who learned to cook from this book with the weight of a real family on her shoulders.

*Books starred in this section are recent and show special freshness and skill, as well as experience in helping little children to develop the use of their hands.

OUR LITTLE DOLL'S HOUSE Atlantic Book and Art $3.00

OUR LITTLE DOLL'S TOWN Atlantic Book and Art $3.00

Strongly bound, pages of board. The two opposite forming a scene, artistic in color. The doors open, and there are slits in which the dolls or objects may be fitted. Dolls and objects in separate envelopes. The scenes of village, market-place, houses, interiors, people and things are full of the true atmosphere of the old world, with the richness of color of which foreign printers have known the secret for so long.

PLIMPTON, EDNA

*YOUR WORKSHOP: A Book for Boys and Girls

(The Work and Play Series) Macmillan $1.50

Things to make and do with tools, simple enough for children of seven and eight. Author is a teacher of first grade and manual arts at the Brooklyn Ethical Culture School.

WHEELER, IDA M.

*PLAYING WITH CLAY (The Work and Play Series)

Macmillan $1.60

Illustrated by Elizabeth Tyler Wolcott. Very simple stories of the arts of pottery and sculpture are followed by a how-to-do-it chapter—how to make a bowl, a potter's wheel, etc.

WHEN MOTHER LETS US SERIES: Dodd each $1.25

These were among the first books published to show little children how to do things themselves. When Mother Lets Us Cook appeared in 1908 and the others in succeeding years. All are simple, clear, and definite, and while some are slightly outdated now, there is nothing to take their place.

BACHE, ELIZABETH DU B. and L. F.: When Mother Lets Us Make Candy

Fudge, of course, taffy, caramels, and other candies.

BOYD, IDA E.: When Mother Lets Us Cut Out Pictures

Many pictures help in showing how to cut dolls, chairs, tables, trees, and houses out of paper.

GRUBB, MARY B.: When Mother Lets Us Make Gifts

How to make simple, inexpensive gifts such as bags, boxes, candle shades, pillows, desk blotters, etc.

JOHNSON, CONSTANCE: When Mother Lets Us Cook

A book of simple receipts for little folk, with important cooking rules in rhyme, with handy lists of the materials and utensils needed for the preparation of each dish.

KEYES, ANGELA MARY: When Mother Lets Us Play

Indoor games—puzzles, charades, riddles, puppet shows, shadow plays, etc.

RALSTON, MRS. VIRGINIA: When Mother Lets Us Sew

Pictures and simple working drawings show how to baste, cat-stitch, gather, darn, and buttonhole the wardrobe of the doll family, if indeed doll mothers still continue to make such things for their children as petticoats (!), nightgowns, frocks, and coats. Surely the simpler and fewer clothes of to-day have lightened the load for the mother of dolls, but are there as many doll mothers nowadays?

RICH, GRACE ELLINGWOOD: When Mother Lets Us Make Paper Box Furniture

A book that shows children just how to make most attractive toy furniture out of materials which cost practically nothing, toys which give as much pleasure as those from expensive toy shops.

WILHELM, LEILA M.

*WITH SCISSORS AND PASTE (The Work and Play Series)
Macmillan $1.60

A book of toy making for little children, illustrated by M. Lois Murphy. Here are suggestions for window pictures, doll-house furniture, toy villages, etc. Easy enough for very young children to make themselves.

YOUNG FOLKS' ART GALLERY Brown Robertson $1.00

Scrapbooks with fifty prints in color of famous paintings, gummed ready for mounting. The arrangement is optional, but the descriptive text in the back of the portfolio suggests an interesting plan, as it unfolds the history of painting since the Renaissance.

HISTORY STORIES

There was a little Island
Beyond the salty foam—
“We’ll have that little Island!”
Said the Emperors of Rome.

So this one tried, and that one tried,
And t’other one went home
Till at last the Isle was taken
By the Emperors of Rome.

But as a wet dog shakes itself,
The Island shook its loam,
Till it had shaken off its back
The Emperors of Rome.

—ELEANOR FARJEON, Mighty Men, Book II, p. 158.

This section is not intended to do more than list a few books which will give a child a taste of history and a quick glimpse at historical personages. The eager child will plunge into many of the books listed in Part III in the larger section devoted to history, on pages 409 to 583.

Children

Doubleday $2.00

Illustrated by Mary Adshead.

"In this little book I have endeavoured to give a simple outline of the History of Mankind from its dim beginnings to the end of the Roman Empire, in order that the child, when he commences learning the History of England, may have some idea of the great civilizations preceding it, and of the gradual evolution of Man. The story of the first discoveries of Man and his steady increase in power and accomplishment should be one to inspire each generation afresh, for the History of Mankind has in it that which is applicable to the history of each individual. As he grows up, the child constantly will be hearing or reading of events of the past; he has but to take from his bookshelf Kingsley's Heroes or Hawthorne's Wonder Book to make acquaintance with the tales of Greek myth, or the Arabian Nights Entertainments to hear of Bagdad and the legends of the East. Stories abound of the Cave Man and Man the Hunter; all these can take no coherent shape in his mind unless he has a ground place of History in which to build." (Introduction.)

There is no doubt that the book does well just what it aims to do. The style is clear and concise and full of word pictures. The child will undoubtedly come away from it with a true and logical background with which to continue the study of history, and, what is more, with an interest and desire to go farther and deeper.

BOOKS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

FOLK LITERATURE

"Folk literature for children divides itself roughly into seven groups: fables, pure myths, hero myths, place legends, fairy lore, nursery tales and rhymes, and hero romances."¹

We have followed in the succeeding pages this grouping made by Frances Jenkins Olcott, who for some time was Children's Librarian at Pittsburgh, and has spent years studying the folklore of the world from the standpoint of children.

Now "Fables" and "Nursery Tales and Rhymes" we have placed in the two earlier sections where they seem logically to fit because of age interest, but we have tried to show their relation to folk literature. Some nursery tales will be found to be included, however, in many of the books mentioned in the following pages, but they have interest for boys and girls over a wide span of years depending upon individual temperament. The other five groups are combined here under three large headings: "Fairy Tales of All Countries"; "Myths, Legends, and Epics"; and "Hero Romances."

Folk literature, what is it really and why does it play such an important part in the literature of childhood? What it is Miss Olcott has said clearly and comprehensively:

"Folk literature conserves the accumulating mass of spontaneous, unscientific thought, feelings, beliefs, fancies, traditions, distortions, superstitions, and ethical teachings of the common people of all races. It has no known authors, but, like an avalanche, it gathers into itself, age by age, all that lies in its path of the natural mental products of the human race. In treatment it is imaginative and objective—in fact, childlike."²

¹Frances Jenkins Olcott, The Children's Reading, Houghton Mifflin Company.

²*Ibid.*

"Household Stories from the Brothers Grimm," illustrated by Walter Crane. (The Macmillan Co.)

Mythology and fairy lore are inextricably interwoven.

"Primitive people, as they have looked out on the world about them, on the sea and the trees, on the sky and the clouds, and as they have felt the power of natural forces . . . have recognized in these things the expression and action of some being more powerful than themselves. Able to understand only those motives and sensations that are like their own they have conceived these beings more or less after their own nature. The Hebrews indeed at an early time recognized one supreme God, who had created and who directed all the world according to His will, but most other early people have seen living, willing beings in the forms and powers of nature, and have worshipped these beings as gods or feared them as devils. Physical events, such as the rising and setting of the sun, or the springing and ripening of the grain, are to them actions of the beings identified with sun or grain. In accounting for these acts, whether regularly recurring, as the rising of the sun, or occasionally disturbing the ordinary course of nature, as earthquakes, eclipses or violent storms, stories more or less complete grow, are repeated, and believed. These stories told of superhuman beings and believed by a whole people are myths, and all these myths together form a mythology."¹

So in mythology we have the elements of Nature personified. In fairy lore we have many different clans of "Little People."

"In Scandinavian tales there are the Elves of field and heath, Brownies and Nissies of the farmsteads and church spires. These are as large as little children; they dress in gray with red caps; they love quiet and the silver moon.

"There are the Trolls and Giants of the North, hardy folk; the Bergmen of Denmark, and the Dwarfs. There are the little earth sprites, the Gnomes, melancholy and very often covetous, and there are the gayer little brethren, the Pixies, the frolicsome men of the woods.

¹Jessie M. Tatlock, Greek and Roman Mythology, The Century Company.

"Then there are the fairies we know best of all, who dance in the moonlight on Midsummer Eve, in rings on the green grass. They are the Trooping Fairies:

"Wee folk, good folk,
 'Trooping all together
 Green jacket, red cap
 And white owl's feather.'"¹

These fairy folk troop back and forth between mythology and fairy lore blending the "dark age of Fear and Superstition with the bright lands of Romance and the shining age of Aspiration," and the great factor in this blending seems to be the coming of Christianity. "The giants, trolls and dwarfs, the wise women on ghostly horses, ride away out of the beliefs of the older people in the fairy tales of the children."²

From "Household Stories from the Brothers Grimm," illustrated by Walter Crane. (The Macmillan Co.)

As for epics and hero romances they are of the substance of mythology, for in them we have the deifying of the human or the glorifying of the race even as we have the personifying of the deity in the myth.

The reasons folk literature plays such an important part in the literature of childhood are first because by means of these stories of the childhood of the race, children of to-day and to-morrow catch up with the world as it is. Secondly, folk literature—tale, myth, or legend—teaches "simple truths and morals; put in a way that appeals directly to children;

¹W. A. Bone, Children's Stories and How to Tell Them, Harcourt, Brace & Co.

²Rachel M. Fleming, Round the World in Folk Tales, Harcourt, Brace & Co.

it shows the distinction between elemental good and evil; that retribution follows sin; and it emphasizes the majesty or beauty of nature."¹ Thirdly, it feeds the imagination, taking the fancy far away, and this imaginative freedom and agility will mean everything to the child. As to whether the stories are true or untrue who shall say? For most of us there is much truth in them, and they reveal no greater marvels than lie in the world of science to-day.

FAIRY TALES OF ALL COUNTRIES

FAIRY TALES ROUND THE WORLD

In The Bookshop we often suggest that fairy tales be included with the geographical study of a country. They are full of descriptions of the land as well as of the customs and life of the people. Miss Fleming says this so well in her introduction to Round the World in Folk Tales (Harcourt, Brace & Co.) that we quote it in opening this grand fairy-tale tour.

These stories "should remind you that children all the world over, whether tanned by the hot sun to a deep brown or black, or bleached by cloudy skies to pallor and flaxen hair, share with you a love for tales. Perhaps these very tales which you are now reading in English are being told to-day to other children in Breton or Hungarian or Russian or Japanese or whatever their native tongue may be.

The stories tell us much about their home land. The Legend of the Flowers shows how often parts of Australia suffer from long periods when no rain falls. Notice that the wind which brings moisture and blossoms to some parts of Australia is the east wind, whereas in England the east wind is dry and often brings frost that nips the buds. The quick blooming of flowers on a bare land after the drought is once over is common to nearly all lands on the desert fringe. . . .

"Other stories show children living on different foods: Little Peachling's dumpling is made from millet and not from suet. Rice is mentioned for Khotan, and maize for the North American Indian. The Bushman stories tell of life where the fear of wild beasts is ever present, and the mention of lions and ostriches in this story and of lions and gazelles in the story of the Sphinx should set you thinking of the great difference between your experience and that of these other children."

FINGER, CHARLES J.
TALES WORTH TELLING

Century $3.50

Illustrations by Paul Honoré. Like Tales from Silver Lands, (page 216) this book is a collection of strange and wonderful tales gleaned from many places, and told the author by guides, herders, ship's cooks, or boatmen, as he traveled or camped with them. Some have their roots in South American and Mexican folklore, and others in African, Serbian, Norwegian, and Irish. They are, indeed, tales worth telling, and Mr. Finger's style is so rich in imagery and so flowing in style that one feels that he must himself be the good wizard Mulu-Nugu, whose fortune it was to wield the magic paint-stick, which had caught the hues of the rainbow, the azure of the sky, the silver of the mist, and the gray of the cloud, and was able to create a living, vivid world of color and romance.

FLEMING, RACHEL M., Composer and Editor

ROUND THE WORLD IN FOLK TALES Harcourt $1.50

THE YELLOW FAIRY BOOK Longmans $1.75

Fairy stories from Russian, German, French, Icelandic, and Indian folklore.

THE MAGIC FAIRY TALES Longmans $1.50

Thirteen favorite tales from The Blue Fairy Book.

There is delightful material about fairy tales in the introductions to Andrew Lang's books. We wish we had been able to find more material about him. He was born at Selkirk, Scotland, March 31, 1844, and was educated at St. Andrews University and at Balliol College, Oxford. He had to do with many fine books for boys and girls during his life and he wrote considerable poetry. Those who are particularly interested in the origin of fairy tales will enjoy his Custom and Myth, Longmans, London, 1893. He died in 1912.

ASIA AND AFRICA

THE ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS

The Arabian Nights stories are fairy tales of India, Egypt, Arabia, and Persia, dressed up by the professional story-tellers in that age when people generally did not read and had no access to books. These story-tellers made the characters good Mahommedans living in Bagdad and Cairo. "At last some story-teller thought of writing down the tales and fixing them in a kind of framework, as if they had been narrated to a cruel Sultan by his wife. Probably the tales were written down about the time when Edward I was fighting Robert Bruce."

Many scholars feel that the final collection was made in Egypt. Cairo is described most minutely, and the customs are of Egypt of the Thirteenth Century and later. Additions to the original were probably made as late as the Sixteenth Century. The first European translation was made in 1704 by a Frenchman, M. Galland. Edward W. Lane is considered to have made the best translation—the Cairo Edition, three volumes, published in London 1839-1841. Practically all the collections of Arabian Nights' Tales for children are based upon the Lane translation.

"Sinbad's account of the building of his raft from the planks and ropes of the wrecked ship almost reads like an entry in Crusoe's journal, and there is the characteristic opening which simulates a narrative of fact: 'In the time of the Khalifeh, the Prince of the Faithful Harun-Er Rashid, in the city of Baghdad.' All the sounds and colours of the East are in the setting of these tales, all the details of life and traffic; and yet it is never out of keeping with the supernatural. Wizards and fairies simply move among the natural inhabitants of bazaars or palaces—a thing in no way surprising to a child; and forms of enchantment surpassing the illusions of a dream rise up in existing cities." (FLORENCE V. BARRY, A Century of Children's Books, p. 51).

FAIRY TALES FROM ARABIAN NIGHTS Putnam $2.50

FAIRY-GOLD

Dutton $2.50

A book of old English fairy tales. Illustrated by Herbert Cole. Poetry relating to fairies and fairyland precedes each story. This book will be a source of joy to those who delight in fairy lore, for in addition to fairy poetry and such tales as "Cinderella," "Tom Tit Tot," "The Pied Piper," "Sir Gawaine and the Green Knight," it has excerpts from The Little People's Diaries and other delightful results of fairy research. In this book Mr. Rhys tells us that, "A fairy tale, like a cat, has nine lives; it can pass into many queer shapes, and yet not die. You may cut off its head, or drown it in sentiment, or sea water, or tie a moral to its tail, but it will still survive and be found sitting safe by the fire some winter night."

GermanyGRIMM, JACOB (1785–1863), and WILLIAM (1786–1859)

The brothers Grimm were thirteen years in collecting their stories. They "obtained most of their tales from the lips of the people in Hesse and Hanau, Germany. They were very fortunate in securing many of the tales from an old nurse, the wife of a cowherd . . . who told her story with exactness and never changed anything in repeating. Grimm himself said, 'Our first care was faithfulness to the truth. We strove to penetrate into the wild forests of our ancestors, listening to their noble language, watching their pure customs, recognizing their ancient freedom and hearty faith.'"¹

The Grimm Tales were first translated into English in 1823. A list of their tales particularly suitable for young children follows as given by Miss Kready in the book mentioned above. By the asterisk she has indicated stories suitable for children of four and five, and by ¹ those suitable for five and six.

- ¹ Birdie and Lena
- ¹ Briar Rose
- * The Cat and the Mouse in Partnership.
- ¹ Chanticleer and Partlet.

NORTH AMERICA

Indian Folklore

"We have now in North America a number of groups of tales obtained from the Indians which, when considered together, illustrate and supplement one another; they constitute, in fact, a whole system. These tales we may describe as forming collectively the Creation myth of the New World. Since the primitive tribes of North America have not emerged yet from the Stone Age of development, their tales are complete and in good preservation.

"What is the substance and sense of these Indian tales, of what do they treat? To begin with, they give an account of how the present order of things arose in the world, and are taken up with the exploits, adventures, and struggles of various elements, animals, birds, reptiles, insects, plants, rocks and other objects before they became what they are now. According to the earliest tales of North America, this world was occupied, prior to the appearance of man, by beings called variously 'the first people,' 'the outside people,' or simply 'people.'

"... These accounts of a former people, and the life of the world before this, as given in the tales, were delivered in one place and another by some of these 'former people' who were the last to be transformed, and who found means to give needful instruction to men. On the Klamath River, in northwestern California, there is a sacred tree, a former divinity, which has been a great source of revelation. On a branch of the Upper Columbia is a rock which has told whole histories of a world before this."¹

Folklore of the American Negro

HARRIS, JOEL CHANDLER

UNCLE REMUS: His Songs and His Sayings

Appleton $2.00

Illustrated by A. B. Frost.

Here in North America there is another stream of folklore with its spring very far away, indeed as far away as Africa—the stream of animal fable and folklore known to the negro. In December, 1880, D. Appleton & Company published the first collection of these stories as written down by Joel Chandler Harris and published singly over a period of four years in the Atlanta Constitution. He claimed that the publication of these stories “was just an accident.” “All I did was to write out and put into print the stories I had heard all my life.” But was it all so much of an accident? All through his boyhood from a very early age, Joel Chandler Harris had listened to these stories; many another boy had heard them, too, but as his daughter-in-law has written in his life, “Either because of the fineness of his ear or the accuracy of his memory or the wonderful assimilative power of his mind, or the combination of all three, he obtained an early and a complete mastery of the dialects of the American negro.”¹

Mr. Harris had no idea when he published Uncle Remus: His Songs and His Sayings of presenting a volume of folklore importance. He did know, however, that the Negro had not learned these stories from white people and “he had most carefully investigated the genuineness of them and in every case had sifted out the variants and had taken pains to retain the version which seemed to him most characteristic, after which he proceeded to give it without embellishment and without exaggeration.”

But if Joel Chandler Harris knew little about folklore in the beginning he was literally forced to become a student of it. As a matter of fact, his interest in the negroes and their stories led him naturally in that direction, but he was always against pedantry, and said, "First, let us have the folk tales told as they were intended to be told for the sake of amusement—as a part of the art of literary entertainment. Then, if the folklorists find anything of value to their pretensions let it be picked out and preserved with as little cackling as possible."

Mr. Harris felt that the illustrations by Arthur Burdett Frost had done ever so much to make the Uncle Remus stories successful, and so expressed his feeling freely and with characteristic generosity.

Joel Chandler Harris was born December 8, 1848, the son of Mary Harris (whose family was of some prominence in Eatonton, Putnam County, Georgia) and a young Irishman who worked as a day laborer near his mother's home. Her family opposed the marriage, and not strong enough to stand up in the community against their bitter opposition the father disappeared soon after the boy's birth and was never heard of again. Joel's mother discarded his father's name and gave her family name to her son. She was much respected and beloved in Eatonton, and Joel Chandler Harris kept all his life the memory of the friendliness of their neighbors there.

When he was fourteen years old he applied to Mr. Joseph Addison Turner, of Turnwold, a plantation nine miles from Eatonton, and editor of the Countryman to learn the printer's trade. Then later he worked on newspapers in Macon, New Orleans, Forsyth, Savannah, and Atlanta. It was while he was in Savannah that he met Esther La Rose, whose parents had a large farm in the Province of Quebec and whom Mr. Harris shortly married. He was twenty-nine years old and had three children when in 1876 he joined the staff of the Atlanta Constitution, where he remained for twenty-four years. He bought land at the West End of Atlanta, enlarging the house on the land to take care of his growing family. Here, with gardens and beautiful trees, he spent the rest of his life. He called the place for a long time "Snap-Bean Farm," a title which had grown jokingly out of Eugene Field's Sabine Farm. Later he gave the name of "The Sign of the Wren's Nest" to the place, and this name it keeps to-day as a Joel Chandler Harris memorial.

Some boys and girls who read and enjoy the books listed in these pages will like to read On the Plantation: A Story of a Georgia Boy's Adventures During the War. In this book Mr. Harris told a great deal about his own boyhood.

LITTLE MR. THIMBLEFINGER AND HIS QUEER COUNTRY Houghton $1.75

"Once upon a time there lived on a plantation in the very middle of Middle Georgia a little girl and a little boy and their negro nurse. The little girl's name was Sweetest Susan. . . . She was seven years old. The little boy's name was Buster John. . . . Buster John was eight. The nurse's name was Drusilla, and she was twelve. . . . She was more of a child than either Sweetest Susan or Buster John, but she was very much larger. She was their playmate—their companion, and a capital one she made." The three have very interesting adventures in Mr. Thimblefinger's queer country behind the spring, where they meet Mr. Rabbit, Mrs. Meadows, Chickamy Crany Crow, Tickle-my-toes, and other quaint people.

MYTHS, LEGENDS, AND EPICS

THE MYTHOLOGY AND EPICS OF GREECE AND ROME

"The mythology of any people is interesting because it reflects their individual nature and developing life; that of the Greeks is more interesting to us than any other, first because it expresses the nature of a people gifted with a peculiarly fine and artistic soul; secondly, because our own thought and art are, in great part, a heritage from the civilization of Greece. Much of this heritage comes to us quite directly from the Greek writers and artists whose work has been preserved. . . . But more of this heritage comes down to us through the Romans, whose genius taught them to conquer and govern without destroying, and who learned from the nations that they conquered, Egypt, Asia, and Greece, all that centuries of rich civilization had to give. The civilization of the modern world, America as well as Europe, is rooted deeply in the civilization of Rome, and through Rome in that of Greece. Greek thought and Greek principles run through our law, our government, our standards of taste, our art, and our literature. . . .

"The Romans did not develop an original mythology but took over stories from the Greeks and others and told them of their own gods. It was the Greek Zeus, not the Roman Jupiter, who had so many love adventures; it was the Greek Aphrodite, not the Roman Venus, who received the golden apple from the Trojan Paris. Classical mythology is the expression of the nature and thought of the Greeks, not that of the Romans. For the Greeks were by nature artistic; they instinctively expressed their ideals, the truth as they saw it, in poetry, story, and sculpture, and because imagination, insight, and love of beauty were united in them, their stories and their art have an appeal that is universal. . . .¹

¹Jessie M. Tatlock, Greek and Roman Mythology, The Century Co.

"Out of Greek mythology and religion and the great cycle of legends about the Trojan War and the heroes engaged in it grew the greatest of all the world's epics, the Iliad, concerned with the siege of Troy; and the Odyssey, the adventures of one of the heroes of that war on his voyage home.

"These two epics are attributed to Homer . . . who is said to have lived sometime between 1050 and 850 B. C. . . . The events upon which the Iliad is based took place sometime before 1100 B. C., and we are told the poems of Homer were collected and committed to writing by Pisistratus during the age of Epic Poetry, or second age of Greek literature, which ends 600 B. C."¹

THE theme of the Iliad is "the final incident in the siege of Troy by the Greeks. The action occupies only a few days. But in the swift narrative there are recalled the story of the nine years of war that have gone before and the cause of the war; indeed a large part of Greek mythology is implicitly in the poem. The immediate episode is the wrath of Achilles, the best fighter among the allied Greeks. He is angry at his chief Agamemnon, because he is obliged to give up a captive girl who has fallen to his lot as part of the spoils of war. So he quits the fight and sulks in his tent. Wherefore the battle goes against the Greeks. But the bosom friend of Achilles, Patroclus, is killed, and Achilles, with another kind of anger, goes back into the combat to avenge his friend's death, and kills the Trojan prince, Hector."²

The Odyssey is closely related to the Iliad. . . . In manner the two poems are much alike, and if they are not expressions of the genius of some individual poet they are expressions of the genius of a race. The Odyssey concludes the story of the siege of Troy, its capture by the trick of the wooden horse; and then narrates the travels and adventures of Odysseus. . . . While he is on his long and roundabout journey home, his wife, Penelope, is surrounded by suitors who try to force her to infidelity to take advantage of her young son, Telemachus. She remains faithful and is rewarded by the return of her husband who outwits and kills the suitors.

"There is no more thrilling story in the literature of the world. In its essential plot it seems even stronger and finer than the Iliad. For the Iliad is a series of celestial intrigues and hand-to-hand combats which are as repetitious as the exploits of King Arthur or as modern prize fights. The career of Ulysses (the Latin form for Odysseus) embraces the world and touches all the primary emotions and activities of man. Moreover, Ulysses is a more splendid hero than Achilles."¹

In writing the great epic of Rome, the Æneid, Virgil took Homer's poems as model, using even some of Homer's scenes and characters. "It had been his earliest ambition to compose an heroic poem on the traditions and glories of the Roman people, . . . to sing to the birth and future of Rome. . . . The story was to be of Æneas, but of later Rome, too, and it was to tell also the very meaning of life."²

The Wonder Book contains stories of Greek mythology: "The Gorgon's Head"; "The Golden Touch"; "The Paradise of Children"; "The Three Golden Apples"; "The Miraculous Pitcher"; "The Chimæra." In Tanglewood Tales: "The Minotaur"; "The Pygmies"; "The Dragon's Teeth"; "Circe's Palace"; "The Pomegranate Seeds"; "The Golden Fleece."

Opinions differ as to the excellence of Hawthorne's versions. Horace Scudder has written of them, "It is easily said that Hawthorne Yankeeized the stories, that he used the Greek stones for constructing a Gothic building, but this is academic criticism. He really succeeded in naturalizing the Greek myths in American soil, and all the labors of all the Coxes will not succeed in supplanting them. Moreover, I venture to think that Hawthorne's fame is more firmly fixed by means of The Wonder Book. . . . I do not care for the embroidery of actual child life which he had devised for these tales; it is scarcely more than a fashion and already strikes one as quaint and out of date. But I cannot read the tales themselves without being aware that Hawthorne was breathing one air when he was writing them and another when he was at work on his romances. . . . With what bright and joyous playfulness he repeats the old stories, and with what a paternal air he makes the tales yield their morsels of wisdom! There is no opening of dark passages, no peering into recesses, but a happy, generous spirit reigns throughout."¹

But J. Rose Colby says: "It is a pity that reverence for the genius of Hawthorne has made it natural for many to choose his versions of the earliest myths, the stories, for instance, of Cadmus and Europa, of Pandora and Persephone. To reduce the heroes of Greek imagination and tradition to childish stature and mind; to transform the great god Hermes to the fairy Quicksilver; in the great myths of the soul and of life and death and immortality to reduce Psyche and Persephone to children, is to make such havoc of the noble and serious life of Greece as we should make of Jewish life if we presented Joseph in Egypt and Moses on Sinai as mere children. Such changes distort the vision and make it permanently difficult to get a serious and true conception of a people. Greece counts for too much in an intelligent life to make one patient with such a travesty. And children, too, have a right to honest and serious treatment in such a matter."²

GREEK AND ROMAN MYTHOLOGY

Century $2.00

A delightfully fresh and modern introduction to the religion, mythology, and literature of Greece and Rome, written with two purposes in mind: (1) By a sympathetic and accurate treatment to give understanding and appreciation of the character and ideals of the people among whom the mythology developed. (2) By placing the familiar stories in their proper relation to enable the student better to understand references in literature and representations in art, ancient and modern.

BEOWULF—THE ANGLO SAXON EPIC

"The epic of Beowulf was probably first made on the shores of the Baltic Sea, in Denmark or southern Sweden. It tells of people who lived in these places between 550 and 600 A. D. But apparently the tribes who made the poem came from the Angles, Saxons, and Jutes to conquer Britain, and it was in Britain or England between 800 and 900 A. D. that someone finally wrote Beowulf down. So it was written down in the Old English or Anglo-Saxon tongue, and came to be, not only the first English poem we have, but also the first poem we have from the Teutonic peoples."¹

NORTHERN SAGAS

"To most people the Iceland of to-day is little more than a name, and the Iceland of the past is entirely unknown. Yet the little island in the far north has a special claim upon all Northern peoples, for she has preserved a Literature which is the record of a race whose blood runs in their own veins, and which was written in the language that was in the days long past common to all of them. In the course of years this one language developed into many languages, through the influence of different conquering races in the different lands; but the little island still kept the old language untouched by foreign invaders, for the rigours of her climate and the wide seas around her made her unattractive and dangerous and thus protected her. And not only was she able to preserve the old language, but also the character and traditions of her people. And language, character, and traditions were enshrined in a Literature which in beauty and in human interest is as rich as any of the classic literature of the world.

"Let us see how this Literature arose. It was not until the end of the ninth century that Iceland became the home of a settled population. Before then it was probably uninhabited, except for some holy men who came from Ireland seeking peace and solitude in the lonely island, and for a few fishermen who came yearly from Ireland and Scotland and dwelt during the summer season pursuing their industry.

"But towards the end of the ninth century, many chiefs with their families and all their followers came over from Norway and settled in the land. Before this time Norway had been broken up into many small kingdoms and these chiefs had been as kings, and had ruled their own little kingdoms, but the mighty Harald Hairfair, himself a King over one of these kingdoms, had fared through the length and breadth of the land warring against all who opposed him, until he had made himself master and sole King of the whole of Norway. And many of the chiefs bowed before him and became his men, but many there were who went to death or exile rather than bend the knee to the overbearing Harald.

"Some of the chiefs who escaped, having heard from adventurous seamen of an unpeopled land in the West, set sail for Iceland and made it their home. . . . And for more than sixty years after the first families had settled there, there was a constant stream of chieftains, noblemen and yeomen, who fled from the tyranny of Harald. And each chief took a part of the island and ruled his own people just as he had done in his own land of Norway, and they prospered and multiplied. Simple they were in their domestic life; well-ordered in their public affairs; brave and adventurous when they fared forth a-warring as far as the world was then known.

"And in the new life and land they did not forget the old life and the old country. In the long dark nights of winter they sat by their fires and, while the men made nets, and the women wove or spun, one of the household would tell or sing the old stories of their gods and kings and heroes. And the children listened, and learnt the stories by heart, and when they were grown to manhood and womanhood, they told and sang the same stories to their children. And so the past was kept alive.

"And not only with regard to the past was this done, but the deeds of each chieftain and each hero in each community were kept on record in the same way, so that an almost complete history of the people and the land was made.

"And the years passed on and the stories and songs were at last written down, most of them between the years 1140 and 1220. . . .

"In one group you will read of the ideas held by this ancient people regarding the making of the world, the wonders of nature, and the mysteries of life. In those early days they were not Christians but worshipped many gods, of whom Odin, the All-Father, was chief.

"Other stories deal with their chieftains, with the Kings of Norway, and with their heroes, both actual and legendary."

*"Beautiful were those battle maidens, and fearless."
The Valkyrie, by Willy Pogány, end papers for "The Children of Odin." (The Macmillan Co.)*

Perhaps the greatest of the legendary-heroic stories is the Story of the Volsungs. The story of its hero, Sigurd, is found in many forms in many Northern lands: in Germany it is the subject of Richard Wagner's great music drama of 'Siegfried.'¹

THE STORY OF SIEGFRIED

Scribner $2.00

This is Sigurd (the Sunbeam) of Icelandic Volsungs, the hero of the Nibelungenlied. The book also contains many others of the Norse myths.

"While the balmy air and the clear sky of the south (Greece) tended to refine men's thoughts and language, the rugged scenery and bleak storms of the north (Iceland and Norway) made them uncouth, bold and energetic. Yet both the cultured Greek and the rude Saxon looked upon nature with much the same eyes, and there was a strange resemblance in their manner of thinking and speaking.

"In the north . . . sometimes men told how Odin the All-Father had become angry with Brunhild (the maid of spring), and had wounded her with the thorn of sleep, and how all the castle in which she slept was wrapped in deathlike slumber until Sigurd or Siegfried (the Sunbeam) rode through flaming fire and awakened her with a kiss." "Eight hundred years ago, when the galleys of the bold Norse men were scudding through storm and mist far into the unknown western seas, or, in the soft summer of the Mediterranean, riding at anchor in the ports of Italy and Northern Africa, the old stories of the battles of the gods and the giants that had been repeated for hundreds of years by Norse firesides were brought together by some unknown man in Iceland, and were known henceforth as the Elder Eddas; and a hundred years later Snorre Stureeson retold the same old stories, with others equally marvelous, in the Younger Edda. These ancient books . . . take one back to the beginning of time, and tell of the birth of the worlds and the coming of the gods to rule over them. . . .

"'Out of these trees,' he [Odin] said at last, 'Let us make man to fill the earth and make it fruitful, and he shall be our child, and we will care for him.'

THE EPIC OF FINLAND

"The Finns . . . are the proud possessors of an epic poem—the Kalevala—which until last century existed only in the memory of a few peasants. Scattered parts of this poem were published in 1822 by Zacharias Topelius, and Elias Lönnrot (also a physician), who patiently travelled about to collect the remainder, was the first to arrange the 22,793 verses into fifty runes or cantos. . . . Like most epics, its source is in the mythology and folklore of the people, and its style has been closely imitated by Longfellow in his Hiawatha."¹

"Not only does it relate 'the ever-varying contests between Finns and Laplanders,' but that between Light and Darkness, Good and Evil, for in the poem the Finns personify Light and Good, while the Lapps are emblems of Darkness and Evil. The Sampo, which is mentioned in this poem, and which seems to have been some sort of a magic grist-mill, holds the same place in Finn mythology as the Golden

THE PERSIAN EPIC

"The Shah-Nameh, or King-Book was composed by the poet Abul Kasin Mansur, who sang so sweetly that his master termed him Firdusi, or Singer of Paradise, by which name he is best known, although he is also called the 'Homer of the East.' Mahmoud, Shah of Persia, who lived about 920 B. C., decided to have the chronicles of the land put into rhyme and engaged Firdusi for this piece of work, promising him a thousand gold pieces for every thousand distichs he finished. Firdusi, who had long wished to build stone embankments for the river whose overflow devastated his native town, begged the king to withhold payment until the work was done. At the end of thirty-three years, when the poem was completed, the grand vizier, after counting its 60,000 couplets, concluded not to pay for it in gold and sent instead sixty thousand pieces of silver. On receiving so inadequate a reward, Firdusi became so angry that after distributing the money among the bearers and writing an insulting poem to the king, he fled first to Mazinderan and then to Bagdad, where he lingered until shortly before his death when he returned to Tous. Tradition claims that the Shah, hearing he had come home,—and having meanwhile discovered the trickery of his minister,—immediately sent Firdusi sixty thousand pieces of gold, but that the money arrived only as his corpse was being lowered into the tomb! As the poet's daughter indignantly refused to accept this tardy atonement, another relative took the money and built the dike which Firdusi had longed to see."¹

Of this King-Book the tale of Roostem and Soohrab is the best known largely because of Matthew Arnold's poem based upon the tale and with the same title.

EPICS OF INDIA

"The Mâhâbhârata and the Râmâyana are, as all know, the twin epics of ancient India. Their date is uncertain.

¹H. A. Guerber, The Book of the Epic, p. 398, J. B. Lippincott Company.

That of the Râmâyana is, probably, the third century B. C., that of the Mâhâbhârata a few centuries earlier, since the Great War, of which it treats, is fairly fixed as having been fought in the fourteenth century B. C.

"Both epics are prodigiously long. The Mâhâbhârata, in its literal English translation, runs to thirty-two thick volumes. . . . Truly there is small wonder that the millions of India hold the Mâhâbhârata as sacred, as the West holds its Bible. It sweeps on like some giant wave, gathering with its thousand facets of bright bold sea worthless pebbles, hopeless wreckage, and priceless gems. It is a marvelous dream of 'wind-tossed clouds,' 'celestial voices deep as the kettledrums of the skies,' 'sparkling showers of keen arrows like the rays of the sun,' 'tender, small-waisted maidens' and 'mighty, high-souled warriors.' As one reads it, the ear seems filled with the message of life indestructible, eternal.

"The Râmâyana is more poetical, less real."¹ It describes the wanderings of a prince banished from his country.

ANCIENT IRELAND

Legends written down in the beautiful ancient manuscript books of Ireland tell at great length how five successive colonies arrived in Ireland many centuries before the Christian Era; and in the Book of Leinster and other ancient manuscripts there are many beautiful stories about the people of these colonies, their wandering and adventures before their arrival in Ireland, and the mighty deeds of their heroes.

The first colony was the Parthalonians, named after their leader Parthalon, who came from Greece with a thousand followers. These people took up their abode eventually on the east coast, calling their lands Moy-Elta. Here they lived until all were carried off by a plague in one week.

The second colony was the Nemedians coming from Scythia, but it was so harassed by a race of sea warriors from Scandinavia, called Fomorians, that few of either group survived. Some of the Nemedians fled over the seas to Greece and after several hundreds of years their descendants, under the names of Firbolgs and Dedannans, made their way back to Ireland.

The Firbolgs came first and were the third colony, partitioning the country into five provinces—Leinster, Ulster, Connaught, Thomond (North Munster), and Desmond (South Munster). After thirty-six years came the Dedannans, descendants of that other branch of the Nemedians who had lived in Greece near Athens for many generations and become skilled in magic from their masters, the Greeks. In subsequent ages the Dedannans were deified and became Shee or fairies and were worshiped by the pagan Irish. Finally came the fifth colony, again from Scythia, and the legends dwell with fond minuteness on the origin, the wanderings, and the adventures of this last and greatest of the Irish colonies. In their long pilgrimage in search of their "Isle of Destiny" they settled in Spain and from thence came to Ireland led by the eight sons of the hero Miled of Spain, whence they were called Milesians. Thenceforward Ireland was ruled by Milesian kings till the reign of Roderick O'Connor in 1166, the last native over-king.

From the time of the partitioning of the country into five provinces by the Firbolgs, there were kings of these provinces and an over-king of all Ireland. Tara in Meath was the residence for generations, until the Sixth Century, of the ancient kings of the country. Emain in Ulster was one of the royal residences of the Kings of Ulster, famous in legend.

One important cycle of stories has to do with the Red Branch Knights of Ulster, a sort of heroic militia, mighty men all, who came every year to Emain to be trained in military science and feats of arms, residing for the time in a separate palace called Creeveroe or the Red Branch. Their greatest commander was Cuculain, the mightiest of all the Irish heroes of antiquity. The Red Branch Knights were in the service of Concobar, or Conor MacNessa, King of Ulster, who feasted the leading heroes every day in his own palace.

Another cycle of stories centers about a similar royal militia, the "Fianna of Erin." The Fianna defended the throne of the mighty King Cormac, the most illustrious of all the pagan kings of Ireland. King Cormac was a great warrior, scholar, and encourager of education. He is said to have founded three colleges at Tara: one for law, one for history and literature, and one for military science. The most celebrated leader of the Fianna was King Cormac's son-in-law Finn, the son of Cumal (Coole), who of all the ancient heroes of Ireland is at the present day best remembered in tradition.

In addition, for the reading of the old Irish tales it helps to know that the pagan Irish had gods and goddesses, many of whom are named in the old writings. The Irish sea god was Mananan MacLir, a Dedannan chief, deified after his death. The people thought, as they looked out over the sea on a stormy night, they could see dimly thousands of Mananan's white-maned steeds careering along on the crests of the waves.

The people also worshiped the Shee, or fairies. The belief was that the Dedannans after they were conquered by the Milesians, went to live underground and became fairies. Each chief selected a green mound, in the Irish language a shee or fairy hill, under which he took up his residence with his followers in a glorious palace brilliantly lighted up and all sparkling with gems and gold. The fairies themselves were also called shee; and they were believed to issue forth from the hills at night and roam over the country, doing harm oftener than good. The people dreaded the shee, and whatever worship they paid them was merely propitiatory.

It is important to know the position of the Druids in the old days. They were the only men of learning. They combined in themselves priest, physician, poet, historian, and law-giver. They were considered also great magicians and the people believed they could raise clouds and mists and bring down showers of snow, of fire, of blood; that they could give a person a "cloak of darkness" to make him invisible; that they could drive a man mad or make him an idiot, and many other marvelous things. They professed to be able to foretell future events in all sorts of ways. They were also employed to educate the children of kings and chiefs. It is clear that they were persons of high position and great influence, held in respect by all, and much dreaded by the common people.¹

Perhaps it was the Druids, as T. W. Rolleston suggests,² who stifled the myth-making instinct among the people in regard to the world and the nature of things, at any rate, there is said to be suggestions of such a mythology in the stories of Lir, the Sea-God, father of Mananan; of Kian, Sawan, and Goban the Smith; of Lugh of the Long Arm; of Balor; and of Ainé, the Danaan love goddess. But no connected story is to be found written down in the great old manuscript books of the country.

¹The foregoing is drawn from an Illustrated History of Ireland, by P. W. Joyce, chapters II, V, VII, and VIII, Longmans, Green & Co.

²T. W. Rolleston, Myths and Legends of the Celtic Race, chap. III, F. A. Stokes & Co.

So the great mass of Irish literature divides itself into the myths of the invasions or the colonies, the stories of the Red Branch Knights, the stories of the Fianna of Erin, and the many miscellaneous legends and tales. Many of the latter appear in the fairy-tale collections listed on pages 190-191.

DEIRDRE

Macmillan $2.50

A vigorous and beautiful retelling of the legend of Deirdre and the sons of Usnac. While King Conor and many Red Branch Knights were feasting with Felim, a Lord of Ulster, a daughter was born to Felim. "She shall be fairest among the women of Erin, and shall wed a King, but because of her, death and ruin shall come upon the Province of Ulster" was the prophecy of Cathbad, the Druid priest. When the warriors would then and there have put the child to death, King Conor forbade. She was named Deirdre, and he had her brought up in solitude in the depths of a great wood by his nurse Levarcam, to become his bride when she was of age. When the time of their marriage drew near, Deirdre did not want to marry the aged Conor, and with the help of Levarcam she married Naisi the son of Usnac, and he and his two brothers carried her away to Scotland. At length Conor accomplished the death of the three sons of Usnac through treachery, and took the beautiful Deirdre perforce. When he would have sent her to live

"Deirdre" is the first of a series of five books which James Stephens plans to write from the old bardic tales of Ireland.

THE LAND OF YOUTH

Macmillan $2.50

The second volume in the series of five referred to above. Tells the story of how Nera won the King's gold-hilted sword and followed the men of the Shi into the land of Faërie. Also the story of Etain, the beautiful wife of Midir, Lord of the Shi.

IRISH FAIRY TALES

Macmillan $2.50

Frontispiece by Arthur Rackham. A strange stirring man is James Stephens. He has held men, women, and children in thrall with his chanted poetry. Any one of the stories in this book is steeped twice in beauty—the beauty of a poet's words and the beauty of the ancient literature of Ireland. The book contains: "The Story of Tuan MacCairill"; "The Boyhood of Fionn"; "The Birth of Bran"; "Oisín's Mother"; "The Wooing of Bec-fola"; "The Little Brawl at Allen"; "The Carl of the Drab Coat"; "The Enchanted Cave of Cesh Corran"; "Becuma of the White Skin"; "Mongan's Frenzy."

We like to think that we had Ella Young's tales on our shelves before ever she came to this country and we knew her for the poet and folklore student she is. Stories of the Gubbaun Saor as told in this book we have not found elsewhere.

THE WONDERSMITH AND HIS SON

Longmans $2.00

Illustrated by Boris Artzybasheff. (The Gubbaun Saor of Miss Young's book is the same Goban referred to in the introduction to this section—Goban the Smith, the brother of Kian and Sawan.)

"The Gubbaun Saor, whose other name was Mananaun, whose other name was Cullion the Smith, was a great person long ago. He was a maker of worlds and a shaper of universes. Men said the stars were sparks from his anvil. White horses were sacred to him, and Lugh's White Hound, the Sun, knew him as master. . . .

"It was in Achill Island that I heard the first story about the Gubbaun. It was told to me by an old man of eighty, as he was guiding me along Achill Head, a wild promontory with cliffs descending a thousand feet to the sea. He knew only two stories about the Gubbaun but had heard that there were others. I made up my mind to get the others. It took me nearly twenty years to gather what I have in this book. Sometimes I could get no more than bits of a story and I had to piece it together, and, in parts, fill it in. Sometimes I got the story almost as I have told it.

"The stories were told to me in Gaelic at times, at times in English. I heard them in cottages by turf fires, I heard them in brown-sailed fishing boats and on rocky hillsides. They are mixed in my mind with sunshine and sweet air and wide empty spaces: with lakes in Donegal, where faëry horses are said to hide, with pools in Connemara where crested serpents, called Piasts, lift their heads, and with glittering inlets of the sea and mountains in Kerry." (Foreword.)

HERO-ROMANCES

“Quite apart, then, from the mere stories they tell, the romances of chivalry deserve the attention of all those who are concerned to know how we came to have our best conceptions of conduct in the world, our noblest ideals of behavior in the strife and tumult of life, our highest ambitions in practical affairs. It is in these tales that we get our earliest glimpses of the modern gentleman, the modern soldier, the modern patriot, the modern lover.” (THOMAS BULFINCH.)

STORIES OF CHARLEMAGNE AND ROLAND

“Charlemagne has had the fortune to be a hero both of history and of fable.” (THOMAS BULFINCH.)

Trouvères in the north of France and troubadours in the south traveled about the country in the Middle Ages, singing from castle to castle the knightly tales of the lords and their ancestors, and making and unmaking reputations. The songs were called Chansons de Geste, and while originally always in verse, came sometimes to be very long prose romances. The legends of King Arthur had their cycle in France, although not originating there. Long songs of Greek and Roman heroes were sung by these bards. But the greatest of the hero poems of the French is the Song of Roland. Roland was a beloved nephew of the great Charlemagne, and the Song of Roland was one of the legends and songs out of the many centering about the great emperor of the Franks who ruled France and Germany and was Charles the Great, the first emperor of the Holy Roman Empire. In this cycle Charlemagne seems often to represent Christ. He is always the champion of Christianity, and is depicted as surrounded by twelve peers instead of twelve disciples. Ganelon is the traitor in the group, and many miracles and marvels occur in the stories.

King Arthur and His Knights

After the Romans left Britain to the time when the Saxons became firmly settled in the land there was constant struggle, and the great hero of the warfare between Britons and Saxons was the Cymric or Welsh King Arthur. This was as early as 520 A. D. Perhaps fugitives to Bretagne carried traditions of Arthur with them. At any rate, when the Normans came on their conquest of England, they came knowing many stories of King Arthur and found the same stories and others there. But the early traditional stories of King Arthur had been carried throughout England, onto the Continent, and back again until it was not the Arthur of history with whom the stories were concerned but a legendary Arthur to whose legend many story-tellers had contributed. When, in 1265, a Welsh priest, known as Geoffrey of Monmouth, incorporated into his so-called Book of British Kings many of these tales and added others of his own the legendary Arthur became the Arthur of literature. Geoffrey had written his book in Latin, which was a common language for those who could read at that time, whether Cymric, English, or Norman.

After Geoffrey of Monmouth two French poets wrote the Arthur story: Robert Wace with his long poem "Le Romans de Brut," or "The Romances of Brutus"; and Walter Map, a poet priest, chaplain to Henry II. It was Walter Map who added the Holy Grail story. The Holy Grail was said to have been the dish used by Christ at the Last Supper. It was also said to have been used to hold the sacred blood from Christ's wounds on the Cross and to have been brought by Joseph of Arimathea into Britain. Then Layamon, also a priest, gave the stories their first presentation in English toward the end of the Twelfth or early in the Thirteenth Century, in a long poem called "Brut."

In the Fourteenth Century tales existing in Wales in some form or other for hundreds of years were written down in the manuscript book called the Red Book of Hergest. The story of one of the old Welsh poets, Taliesin or "Shining Forehead," is given in this book, and that of another poet of the same race, Merlin. Lady Charlotte Guest translated this manuscript book, and her translation was published in 1849. To it she gave the title, The Mabinogion. The Welsh had in the early days an organization of bards and story-tellers. There were apprentices to the guild of bards, and an apprentice was called "Mabinog." A story which an apprentice bard might be expected to know was called "Mabinogi." Hence Lady Guest's title.

It was in the reign of King Edward the Fourth, in 1469, that Sir Thomas Malory, a scholarly Welshman, finished his translation of King Arthur tales mostly from poems written by French poets in the Eleventh and Twelfth centuries.

When William Caxton established the first English printing press in England at Westminster in 1497, one of the first books he printed was Sir Thomas Malory's Noble Histories of King Arthur. To this book Caxton himself wrote a preface which tells a great deal about it; and to make the contents clearer he has divided the volume into twenty-one books and enumerates the books and the number of chapters in each. Since there could be no better outline of the book than the subjects of these twenty-one books, and in the belief that this outline will afford those who read the King Arthur stories long ago as much pleasure as it afforded us, and that those who have never read them may be urged thereto, we give the books and their chapters as Caxton laid them out so many years ago and as they may be read to-day in the Morte d'Arthur of Malory, Everyman's Edition, listed below. Let no one be deterred from reading Morte d'Arthur, in this day of little time, by the number of chapters—the length of most chapters is only a page and a half.

At the end of the 1400's, Wynkyn de Worde, who succeeded Caxton, printed for the first time A Lytell Geste of Robin Hood, "the earliest songs of Robin Hood grown into a ballad epic in which Robin's character was proved in talk and incidents, and further shown by the story-teller's comments on his courage and gentleness, his respect for women, his love of the forest; but gentle attributes failed to impress the writers of eighteenth century broadsheets. . . .

"They deal directly with Robin's combats and escapes, his farcical adventures with bishops and beggars, his daring rescues; and in these, the quality that comes uppermost is the roguish humour which above all distinguishes him from the conventional knight of chivalry. . . ."¹ colors and motley, that you would not know them but for the names tagged to them. Here is a stout, lusty fellow with a quick temper, yet none so ill for all that, who goes by the name of Henry II. Here is a fair, gentle lady before whom all the others bow and call her Queen Eleanor. Here is a fat rogue of a fellow, dressed up in rich robes of a clerical kind, that all the good folk call my Lord Bishop of Hereford. Here is a certain fellow with a sour temper and a grim look—the worshipful, the Sheriff of Nottingham. And here, above all, is a great, tall, merry fellow that roams the greenwood and joins in homely sports, and sits beside the Sheriff at merry feast, which same beareth the name of the proudest of the Plantagenets—Richard of the Lion's Heart. Beside these there are a whole host of knights, priests, nobles, burghers, yeomen, pages, ladies, lasses, landlords, beggars, pedlars, and what not, all living the merriest of merry lives, and all bound by nothing but a few odd strands of certain old ballads (snipped and clipped and tied together again in a score of knots) which draw these jocund fellows here and there, singing as they go.

"Here you will find a hundred dull, sober, jogging places, all tricked out with flowers and what not, till no one would know them in their fanciful dress. And here is a country bearing a well-known name, wherein no chill mists press upon our spirits, and no rain falls but what rolls off our backs like April showers off the backs of sleek drakes; where flowers bloom forever and birds are always singing; where every fellow hath a merry catch as he travels the roads, and ale and beer and wine (such as muddle no wits) flow like water in a brook.

"This country is not Fairy-land. What is it? 'Tis the land of Fancy, and is of that pleasant kind that, when you tire of it—whisk!—you clap the leaves of this book together and 'tis gone, and you are ready for every-day life, with no harm done.

"And now I lift the curtain that hangs between here and Norman's-land. Will you come with me, sweet Reader? I thank you. Give me your hand." (Preface.)

This book will assure to its owner a period—length determined by the times of rereading—"of mirth and joyousness in the land of Fancy." It is the most delightful of all the Robin Hoods.

"These 'Champions of Christendom' have nothing whatever to do with the saints whose names they bear. . . . "Many of the ideas [in these stories] are almost as old as mankind; they have their roots deep in folklore and obscure history. 'The Ash and the Hazel,' for instance, contains the elemental parts of 'Patient Griselda.' 'The Knight and the Greyhound,' in 'The Seven Wise Masters,' is but the tale of 'Llewellyn and Gelert.' 'The Thief and His Son' (in the same story) goes back at least as far as the days when Herodotus learnt all about Egypt from his dragoman. . . . 'Havelok the Dane' may contain a fair element of truth in the account of the foundation of Grimsby. In the details of 'Guy of Warwick,' 'William and the Werewolf,' and the tales into which Saracens enter, there is obviously the remnant, dim and perverted, of genuine tradition." (Introduction.)

“CREATIONS OF FANCY”—MODERN FAIRY TALES

Come away, O human child!
To the Waters and the Wild
With a fairy, hand in hand,
For the World's more full of weeping than You can understand.

—W. B. YEATS.

“THE belief in fairies gave rise to the genuine fairy tale, which is now an acknowledged classic, and the gradual elimination of this belief from the civilized mind has been attended with some awkwardness. These creations of fancy—if we must so dismiss them—had secured a somewhat positive recognition in literature before it was finally discovered that they came out of the unseen and therefore could have no life. Once received into literature they could not well be ignored, but the understanding, which appears to serve as special police in such cases, now has orders to admit no newcomers unless they answer to one of three classes: either they must be direct descendants of the fairies of literature, having certain marks about them to indicate their parentage, or they must be teachers of morality thus disguised, or they may be mere masqueraders; one thing is certain, they must spring from no belief in fairy life, but be one and all referred to some sufficient cause—a dream, a moral lesson, a chemical experiment. But it is found that literature has its own sympathies, not always compassed by the mere understanding, and the consequence is that the sham fairies in the sham fairy tales never really get into literature at all, but disappear in limbo; while every now and then a genuine fairy, born of a genuine, poetic belief, secures a place in spite of the vigilance of the guard. . . .

“By a tacit agreement fairy tales have come to be consigned to the nursery; the old tools of superstition have become the child’s toys, and when a writer comes forward, now, bringing new fairy tales, it is almost always with an apology, not for trespassing upon ground already occupied, but for indulging in what is no longer belief, but make-belief. . . . It may be accepted as a foregone conclusion that with a disbelief in fairies the genuine fairy tale has died, and that it is better to content ourselves with those stories which sprang from actual belief, telling them over to successive generations of children, than to seek to extend the literature by any ingenuity of modern skepticism. There they are, the fairy tales without authorship, as imperishable as nursery ditties; scholarly collections of them may be made, but they will have their true preservation, not as specimens in a museum of literary curiosities, but as children’s toys. Like the sleeping princess in the wood, the fairy tale may be hedged about with bristling notes and thickets of commentaries, but the child will pass straight to the beauty, and awaken for his own delight the old charmed life.

“It is worth noting, then, that just when historical criticism, under the impulse of the Grimms, was ordering and accounting for these fragile creations,—Hans Christian Andersen should have come forward as master in a new order of stories, which may be regarded as the true literary successor to the old order of fairy tales, answering the demands of a spirit which rejects the pale ghost of the scientific or moral or jocular or pedantic fairy tale. Andersen, indeed, has invented fairy tales purely such, and has given form and enduring substance to traditional stories current in Scandinavia; but it is not upon such work that his real fame rests, and it is certain that while he will be mentioned in the biographical dictionaries as the writer of novels, poems, romances, dramas, sketches of travel, and an autobiography, he will be known and read as the author of certain short stories, of which the charm at first glance seems to be in the sudden discovery of life and humor in what are ordinarily regarded as inanimate objects, or what are somewhat compassionately called dumb animals. When we have read and studied the stories further, and perceived their ingenuity and wit and humane philosophy, we can after all give no better account of their charm than just this, that they disclose the possible or fancied parallel to human life carried on by what our senses tell us has no life, or our reason assures us has no rational power."¹

HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN

Suppose a child of five could have for seven years only one book, what book would you choose—first to read aloud to him and then for him to read himself? We would choose the stories, tales, and wonder stories of Hans Christian Andersen.

Why? Because he is the greatest writer of stories of truth, beauty, fancy and imagination. In literary form of the greatest simplicity, he presents the whole tapestry of life. His range is as wide as life itself. As in the most beautiful tapestries, his backgrounds are strong and clear: forest, mountains, valleys, lakes, rivers, streams, cities, towns, villages; castles, town houses, peasant cottages. Persons of every rank and condition of life have their place in his stories, but so do birds, beasts, insects, and all sorts of common things: china-shelf ornaments, tin toys, bottles, teapots, tables, chairs, brooms, pins, yes, even eggs. And uncommon things such as ice maidens, mermaids, snow queens, gardens of Paradise, and a princess who could feel a pea through twenty mattresses and twenty feather beds.

Moreover, throughout Andersen's stories the meanings and values of life are true, and the blend of truth and art is such as to stir the soul with wonder and reverence. Those were qualities innate in the man himself. It is the work of a genius who was a poet and who had always the capacity for looking out upon the world and its happenings with deep understanding that has nothing to do with childishness—at the same time as though with the eyes of a child.

It is impossible to explain the hows or wherefores of genius.

¹Horace Scudder, on Modern Fairy Tales, in his Childhood in Literature and Art, Houghton Mifflin Company.

Andersen was born in Odense, on April 2, 1805, on the green island of Fünen rich in "beautiful beech woods and corn and clover fields." His father "was a shoemaker, scarcely twenty-two years old, a man of richly gifted and truly poetical mind. His wife, a few years older than himself, was ignorant of life and the world, but possessed a heart full of love." These things he tells us in his own True Story of My Life. He also tells us that his mother and father loved each other dearly and describes his home:

"Our little room, which was almost filled with the shoemaker's bench, the bed, and my crib, was the abode of my childhood; the walls, however, were covered with pictures, and over the work bench was a cupboard containing books and songs; the little kitchen was full of shining plates and metal pans, and by means of a ladder it was possible to go out on the roof, where, in the gutters between our and the neighbor's house, there stood a great chest filled with soil, my Mother's sole garden, and where grew her vegetables. In my story of the Snow Queen that garden still blooms."

Andersen arrived in Copenhagen in September of the year he was fourteen—a tall, ungainly lad, dreamy, sensitive, absolutely unworldly, but confident that he had the makings of something—he thought an actor—within him. Then followed years of discouragement in which Andersen began the writing of plays greatly hampered in expression by his lack of education, until, when he was eighteen, Jonas Collin, then Director of the Theatre Royal in Copenhagen, became interested in him, obtained an annual sum for his living from King Frederick the Sixth and free instruction in the grammar schools of Slagelse.

His poetry and the stories for which he has become famous began to receive notice in Germany, then in Sweden, and finally he received his due in his own country. Things became easier for him, and he spent much time in travel, which gave his mind and spirit great stimulus. He died August 4, 1875, at the age of seventy.

Of the modern tendency to-day to shield children from all that is unchildish or unhappy, and of Andersen's stories,

From "Andersen's Fairy Tales and Stories," illustrated by Eric Pape. (The Macmillan Co.)

Margery Williams Bianco, whose work has strong kinship to Andersen's, has written:

"It is rather a shock to realize that, judged by this standard of imperative cheerfulness, and of what we consider fitted for a child's mind, more than one half of Hans Andersen's priceless stories might never have passed a publisher's reader. 'What?' he might say. 'The Fir Tree burn up? Impossible! The Little Match Girl can't die; she must be adopted by some really nice family, and the morocco ball should certainly not end in the gutter!'

"For nearly all of these stories are sad, and some are more than just sad. . . .

"'You must not look at it from the sorrowful side,' says the little boy. 'To me it all appears remarkably pretty. . . .'

"This is not priggishness; still less is it the conventional optimism which, by insisting so much on the 'happy ending,' also postulates a possible unhappy ending. To Andersen all endings were happy; they were as they should be. Old people die, but would you have them go on living forever? Wicked Inge is punished for her pride, but her soul, after long suffering, turns into the little bird that 'flew' straight into the sun'; the little Match Girl starved, but she had the vision of eternal life, and the happiest moment of the little Fir Tree is when it bursts into deathless flame. . . .

"Even the humblest things take somehow an element of greatness; he gave nobility to whatever he touched. And if there is one motif that stands out more than any other in his writing, that recurs again and again, it is that expressed most clearly in the words of the angel to the child:

“The good and the beautiful shall not be forgotten; it shall live on in legend and in song.”

Having applied Mr. Scudder's tests and their own to the following books, the editors assert that, to the best of their judgment, there are no sham fairies or sham fairy tales in this collection. Each is a book which deserves a place in children's literature.

ALDEN, RAYMOND MACDONALD

WHY THE CHIMES RANG, and Other Stories Bobbs $2.00

The other stories are: "The Knights of the Silver Shield"; "The Boy Who Discovered the Spring"; "The Brook in the King's Garden"; "The Hunt for the Beautiful"; "The Boy Who Went Out of the World"; "The Palace Made by Music"; "The Forest Full of Friends"; "The Bag of Smiles"; "The Castle Under the Sea"; "In the Great Walled Country." These are ethical stories of good quality. Another similar collection by same author is "Boy Who Found the King and Other Stories" ($1.75); "Why the Chimes Rang," listed in separate edition on page 711.

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN

"It is beautiful to live!" said the little Marie; so, too, said the small and big boys; father and mother, the whole family, and chief of all, Godfather: and he had experience; he was the oldest of them all; knew all stories: and he said, "Life is the most beautiful fairy tale."¹

STORIES AND TALES

Houghton $2.50WONDER STORIES TOLD FOR CHILDREN Houghton $2.50

These two books together are the most complete collection of Andersen. Type is good but pictures are old-fashioned. A fine household collection where reading aloud is done. "Stories and Tales" has an interesting introduction with much information from Andersen himself as to sources of the stories, incidents connected with them, etc.

BAILEY, MARGERY

THE LITTLE MAN WITH ONE SHOE

Little $2.25

"This book concerns him, the six tales he told me and the six songs of simple pattern with which I had to bargain for the same." Pictures by Alice Bolan Preston. (The music of the songs is given.)

SEVEN PEAS IN A POD

Little $2.25

With illustrations by Alice Bolan Preston. "The which taken slowly and severally (one on Monday, the next on Tuesday, one on Wednesday and one on Thursday, one on Friday and another on Saturday and the last of all to be had on Sunday) will insure good dreams and the departure of all ill humors."

BANCROFT, ALBERTA

THE GOBLINS OF HAUBECK

McBride $1.50

A very well-written and original story of good goblins, whose duty it is to aid the housewives of the Old World town of Haubeck. The story centers around a mischievous changeling who made trouble for them.

BARRIE, SIR JAMES MATTHEW

THE LITTLE WHITE BIRD

Scribner $2.50

PETER PAN IN KENSINGTON GARDENS

Scribner $2.50

With drawings by Arthur Rackham. Peter Pan was born a human baby but escaped when he was seven days old, flying, without wings, over the houses to Kensington Gardens and landing there on the open sward between the Baby's Palace and the Serpentine. There he lived on the birds' island and became very learned in bird lore. He saw a great deal of the fairies who take possession of the Gardens after Lock-up Time and served as the fairies' orchestra. He was there, of course, when the fairies built that little house for Mamie Mantering, that house for lost children. Peter Pan in Kensington Gardens is taken out of Barrie's Little White Bird.

PETER AND WENDY

Scribner $2.50

Illustrated by Francis D. Bedford. Peter Pan, no longer a baby but a boy of just the right age, visits the Darling family and spirits Wendy and John and Michael away with him to the Never-never-land, where they make the acquaintance of Tinker Bell and the Fairies, pirates, and Captain Hook. The fairies build the house for Wendy with

"Gay windows all about,
With roses peeping in, you know,
And babies peeping out."

This is the story Barrie wrote from his play.

The same with the title PETER PAN AND WENDY

Scribner $2.50

A sensitive little boy's imaginative adventures beyond the blue door.

BESTON, HENRY B.

THE FIRELIGHT FAIRY BOOK Little $2.50

Illustrated in color by Maurice Day. Contains: "The Queen of Lantern Land"; "The Adventures of Florian"; "The Seller of Dreams"; "The Treasure Castle"; "Prince Sneeze"; "Marianna"; "The Lost Half-Hour"; "The Enchanted Elm"; "The Bird-Boy"; "The Master Mariner"; "The Marvelous Dog and the Wonderful Cat"; "The Shepherd of Clouds"; "The City Under the Sea."

THE STARLIGHT WONDER BOOK Little $2.50

Also illustrated by Maurice Day. Twelve more tales of strange doings about the Adamant Mountains. Includes "The Enchanted Baby." Both collections are jolly fairy tales, full of color and action, with a touch of poetry and real excellence of style.

BOWEN, WILLIAM

THE OLD TOBACCO SHOP Macmillan $1.50

A true account of what befell a little boy in search of adventure. Toby Littleback who kept the shop and his Aunt Amanda who sewed in the room behind the shop made it a fascinating place for Freddie. Now Toby had told the little boy on his first visit that a strange white porcelain jar on the top shelf, shaped like a china-man's head, held tobacco that was magic.

SOLARIO THE TAILOR Macmillan $2.00

Illustrated by J. Ormsbee. Bojohn and Bobkin, two young rascals at the court of King Fortmain the Ninth, rescue a magical tailor from an enchantment. His name was Solario, and he lived on at the castle in the forest and told the boys wonderful tales of his strange and exciting past.

Nearly everyone knows that on July 4, 1862, Charles Lutwidge Dodgson took three little girls to row on the river and began to tell them the story of Alice's adventures underground. Still more people know that the original manuscript of this story, "illustrated with pen and ink sketches by himself and minutely penned in printing characters" at a sale in London in 1927, brought $75,000. Greville Macdonald has contributed a picture less well known of the shy, learned mathematician and humorist's understanding and friendliness to children.

"Our annual treat was Uncle Dodgson taking us to the Polytechnic for the entrancing 'dissolving views' of fairytales, or to go down in the diving bell or watch the mechanical athlete Leotard. There was also the Coliseum in Albany Street, with its storms by land and sea on a wonderful stage, and its great panorama of London. And there was Crimer's toy-shop in Regent Street—not to mention bath-buns and ginger-beer—all associated in my memory with the adorable writer of 'Alice.'"

Lewis Carroll was born in 1832 and died in 1898. He was a Deacon in Holy Orders and an M. A. of Christ College, where he became a lecturer and spent most of his life. Eleanor Farjeon has written of him: "The effect of this crystallised life on a nature like his could not be development—only intensification of what was in him when he entered it. Therefore he remained what he was born: in spirit gentle, retiring, devout, strict towards himself, tolerant of others; generous and tender-hearted; in mentality brilliant, logical, meticulous, eccentric, delighting in a sort of complicated clarity; and in state a bachelor. . . . He produced indefatigably a quantity of books in which the nonsensical and logical minds were so balanced that those on logic could not help being nonsensical, while his nonsense was irrepressibly logical. . . . He went ardently to the theatre; . . . preached rarely but movingly; invented stamp-cases, puzzles, word-games, memory systems, and elaborate schemes for simplifying the political purity of the ballot-box and the postal privacy of money-orders; and till within nine days of his death, pursued a safe, healthy, successful, happy, routine-bound existence."¹

CHRISMAN, ARTHUR BOWIE

SHEN OF THE SEA: Chinese Stories for Children

Dutton $2.00

Delightfully illustrated in silhouette by Else Hasselriis. Mr. Chrisman has never been in China, but he must have known a Chinaman somewhere who had the same hold upon his imagination that Toby Littleback in The Old Tobacco Shop had upon Freddie. At any rate, he has written a collection of stories so filled with what seems true Chinese atmosphere that many thought them translations in the beginning. His book was awarded the Newbery Medal for 1926 as the best children's book in America that year.

From "Shen of the Sea," illustrated by Else Hasselriis. (E. P. Dutton & Co.)

THE WIND THAT WOULDN'T BLOW

Dutton $2.50

A second collection of Chinese stories with more silhouette pictures by Else Hasselriis.

COLUM, PADRAIC

THE KING OF IRELAND'S SON

Macmillan $2.25

Illustrated by Willy Pogány. Into the framework story of King Connal's son and his friend Fiann and two maidens—Fedelma, the Enchanter's Daughter, and Morag, the Giant's byre-maid—the author has put tale within tale and episode within episode. Marvelous adventures relieved by humorous domestic incident, heroic exploit by the animal story—all in the Gaelic tradition as explored by a poet.

CRAIK, MRS. DINAH MULLOCK

THE LITTLE LAME PRINCE

Rand $1.50

Illustrated by Hope Dunlap. The story of the little Prince Dolor imprisoned in a lonely stone tower to whom his fairy godmother gave a wonderful traveling cloak. This cloak could become small enough to go in his trousers pocket but when he untied it, it grew larger and turned up all about for safe traveling, and when he said, "Abracadabra, dum, dum, dum!" it became grandfather to our aeroplanes and bore him on many exciting journeys, finally taking him away to the Beautiful Mountains.

CROTHERS, SAMUEL

MISS MUFFET'S CHRISTMAS PARTY

Houghton $1.25

Into the stern Muffet household on Christmas Eve came the spider, not to frighten Miss Muffet away, but with a happy suggestion to cheer the little girl. He suggested that Miss Muffet have a literary Christmas party and invite all the people she had read about. They wrote the invitations together, and the grandest party ever known came off, with all the invited guests present.

DE LA MARE, WALTER

THE THREE MULLA MULGARS

Knopf $2.50

Thumb, Thimble and Nod, three little monkeys of the Blood Royal, decide to seek their uncle Assasimmon, Prince of the Valley of Tishnar, and the book is the beautifully written tale of their journey. The author's description of Tishnar might well be used to describe the spirit of his own books, "all that which cannot be thought about in words, or told or expressed. So all the wonderful world beyond the Mulgars' lives is Tishnar—wind and stars, too, the sea and the endless unknown."

ELIOT, ETHEL COOK

THE WIND BOY

Doubleday $2.00

Illustrated by Winifred Bromhall. A story written with real beauty, of a boy with wings who comes from the Clear Land to play with the children.

EWING, MRS. JULIANA HORATIA

THE BROWNIES, and Other Tales Harcourt $2.00

Illustrated by A. B. Woodward. The other tales are: "The Land of Lost Toys"; "Three Christmas Trees"; "An Idyll of the Wood"; "Christmas Crackers"; "Amelia and the Dwarfs." As the god-mother's grandmother said of "Amelia and the Dwarfs," each is a very "pleasant tale with a good moral, which is surely enough for anybody."

FARJEON, ELEANOR

MARTIN PIPPIN IN THE APPLE ORCHARD Stokes $2.50

A whimsical romantic fantasy of Sussex in spring, based on an old singing game. Martin Pippin frees Robin Rue's sweetheart Gillian from her father's well house where she was guarded by six milkmaids "sworn virgins and man-haters all."

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN

ELIZA AND THE ELVES Macmillan $2.00

Illustrated by Elizabeth MacKinstry. An elfin scrapbook of whimsical, amusing tales and rhymes of these delightful small people. The pictures run trippingly with the text.

FOLLETT, BARBARA NEWHALL

THE HOUSE WITHOUT WINDOWS AND EEPERSIP'S
LIFE THERE Knopf $2.00

The story of a little girl who was "rather lonely" and who left home one day to explore the meadows, fields, and woods near by. But she became so enamored of life in the woods that she decided to "live wild" and never go home any more. She goes to the mountain and she goes to the sea, then back to the mountains where on one beautiful summer day she becomes a dryad. A rarely lovely book, and the only instance we know where a child has been able to record that longing common to many children under ten to be one with nature. The book was written by the author at nine and rewritten at twelve, as the original manuscript had been burned.

FYLEMAN, ROSE

A PRINCESS COMES TO OUR TOWN Doubleday $2.00

A small book illustrated by Gertrude Lindsay which tells how a Fairy Princess, tired of living only in a fairy tale, appeared suddenly in the market place of a big town. There she made friends with a nice girl and went home to stay with her. The story of what happened then is told by Finestra's young hostess.

GRAHAME, KENNETH

THE WIND IN THE WILLOWS

Scribner $2.00

The same

Scribner $2.50

With illustrations by Nancy Barnhart. "The wind in the willows"—there is magic in the words for many children and grown-ups, too. And the child who has loved the book usually finds as a mature person that he must read it at least once a year. Just as the Mole suddenly threw down his white-wash brush, left his spring-cleaning in the middle, and was off across through the woods to the meadow, so the reader turns his back on all serious things and enters into the wholly irresponsible outdoor spring world with Mole, Rat, Mr. Badger, and Toad.

Do you remember Mole in a boat for the first time—Ratty's boat, Mole's bliss, and Water Rat's solemn remark:

"Believe me, my young friend, there is nothing—absolutely nothing half so worth doing as simply messing about in boats. Simply messing,' he went on dreamily; 'messing—about—in—boats; messing——' (but here the boat struck the bank full tilt and the joyous oarsman lay on his back at the bottom of the boat) 'about in boats—or with boats,' the Rat went on composedly. 'In or out of 'em, it doesn't matter. Nothing seems really to matter, that's the charm of it. Whether you get away, or whether you don't; whether you arrive at your destination or whether you reach somewhere else, or whether you never get anywhere at all, you're always busy, and you never do anything in particular; and when you've done it there's always something else to do, and you can do it if you'd like but you'd much better not. Look here! If you've really nothing else on hand this morning, supposing we drop down the river together and have a long day of it?"

It was in 1863 that Charles Kingsley wrote The Water Babies for his youngest son, then four years old. The Heroes had been written for the three elder children. It is a living, vital story to-day. Tom, a poor little chimney sweep, is taken by the fairies and becomes a water baby. He lives a jolly life in the sea and makes the acquaintance of many sea creatures and other interesting folk such as Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid and Mrs. Doasyouwouldbedoneby.

No description of the book could be better than that of Kingsley's daughter, given in the Introduction to the Dodd, Mead edition:

"Places he had seen, and many more he had read and dreamed of in his father's fine library of voyages and travels, fairies and men of science, education true and false, Pandora's box and sanitary science—a matter always dear to his heart—the ways of beasts and birds, fishes and insects, of plant and tree and rock, of river

THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF NILS Doubleday $2.00

This famous Swedish novelist was born at Mårback-gord, Varmland, in 1858. In 1909, she was awarded the Nobel Prize of $40,000 for literature, and in 1914 she was elected to the Swedish Academy, the first woman to be honored in this way.

The Wonderful Adventures of Nils was written to be used as a reader in the schools of Sweden and is a great piece of literature. This is one of the books which should be read aloud to children so that they may feel the beauty and grandeur of the prose in such passages as the "great crane dance on Kullaberg," which perhaps they skip when reading the book themselves and hurrying on after Nils as he journeys swiftly on the wild goose's back.

Hugh Lofting is of English-Irish parentage. He has an interest in natural history, was trained as an engineer and worked at his profession, building railroads in West Africa before the war. How did he happen to write "The Story of Dr. Dolittle?" He has answered the question himself:

"It was during the Great War, and my children at home wanted letters from me—and they wanted them with illustrations rather than without. There seemed very little of interest to write to youngsters from the Front: the news was either too horrible or too dull. And it was all censored. One thing, however, that kept forcing itself more and more on my attention was the very considerable part the animals were playing in the World War, and that as time went on they, too, seemed to become Fatalists. . . .

"If we made the animals take the same chances as we did ourselves, why did we not give them similar attention when wounded? But obviously to develop a horse-surgery as good as that of our Casualty Clearing Stations would necessitate a knowledge of horse language.

"That was the beginning of the idea: an eccentric country physician with a bent for natural history and a great love of pets, who finally decides to give up his human practice for the more difficult, more sincere and, for him, more attractive therapy of the animal kingdom. He is challenged by the difficulty of the work—for obviously it requires a much cleverer brain to become a good animal doctor (who must first acquire all animal languages and physiologies) than it does to take care of the mere human hypochondriac."

top of the house one day, up long staircases and winding passages, the Princess found a beautiful old lady known only to her. In the caverns of the mountain lived goblins, plotting against the people above ground and the King's house. The Princess and her nurse were protected from the goblins one day by Curdie, a miner's son. And later, when Curdie was lost in the mines, the Princess went in the night, found him, and led him out by means of a silver thread given her by the beautiful grandmother, and the beacon of the shining light, in her grandmother's room. But Curdie did not feel the thread or see the light. He did not even see the lovely grandmother when Irene led him into the room. But the grandmother said: "People must believe what they can, and those who believe more must not be hard upon those who believe less."

There is more to the story than this—how Curdie unearths the Kobolds' plot, rescues the Princess, and with his mother's help, comes to see, and understand more.

George Macdonald's stories for children listed above are all, as his son has said, appeals "to the imaginative seeing of a truth rather than a claim for its passive acceptance on the score of authority," and they are therefore symbolic of their author's life. He put the sincere and personal spiritual life before the life of strict compliance to denominational form. He was in rebellion against a doctrine that only certain people were to be saved. He believed that faith and religion were individual matters. He was interested in change and realized that "increase of truth" would always seem at first like error. He dared to be simple, direct, and undramatic in his preaching in an age of noise and fury in the pulpit. All his beliefs he lived out independently when so doing lost him church after church, and worked against him in all worldly ways.

George Macdonald was born in "The Little Grey Town of Huntly in Aberdeenshire," December 10, 1824. Two rivers, the Bogie and the Devoron, flow through the town, and it saw many raids, risings, and violence in the past what with chiefs, kings, John Knox, and Calvinism. But when Macdonald came into the world Huntly was devoted to spinning and weaving with blue flax growing all about in its season. Fine woolen yarn was spun in the town, of a famous quality, and every cottage boasted two wheels.

His life coincided with the coming of the industrial revolution, the departure of the looms and wheels from the cottages with its accompanying greater material prosperity but its decrease in the color and richness of life growing out of agriculture and handicrafts. But George Macdonald saw both ways, and his books for grown-ups are all filled with the old picturesque life and some of the problems of the new.

He studied at King's College, Aberdeen, and married an extremely interesting woman, Louisa Powell—"comical, satirical, sometimes cruelly so, and witty, besides being easily moved to tears by others' suffering of mind and body." Their lifelong love and devotion for each other in their struggles against ill-health, poverty, the deaths of several of their children, and hardships is a story in itself. They had many friends—Lewis Carroll, Ruskin, Lady Byron (Lord Byron's widow), Octavia Hill, the Burne-Joneses, and Arthur Hughes among them. It was to his friend George Macdonald that Lewis Carroll carried the manuscript of Alice's Adventures Underground when he went to visit him at Aberystwith in the summer of 1862. At Macdonald's suggestion Mrs. Macdonald read it aloud to the children, and when she came to the end Greville, aged six, exclaimed that there ought to be sixty thousand volumes of it!

"God is the God of the Beautiful, Religion the love of the Beautiful, and Heaven the home of the Beautiful"—this belief George Macdonald expressed in his life and in his books.¹

THE WONDER CLOCK

Harper $2.00

Twenty-four marvelous tales, one for each hour of the day—old tales retold as this artist-author likes to tell them, in a way which most children enjoy. Every child who can should own the book for its delightful pictures as well as for the stories.

In the history of American illustrating the greatest name thus far is Howard Pyle's. Those who are interested either in Howard Pyle, the man and artist, or in the art of illustrating should read the delightful volume by Charles D. Abbott—Howard Pyle: A Chronicle. It is upon that book that these notes are based.

Howard Pyle's forbears were Quakers some of whom came to America originally in the ship Welcome in 1682. His home was in Wilmington, and there he was born March 5, 1853. His mother and father were people of unusual culture.

His mother "was an eager spirit, always in quest of the beautiful and the interesting." She became imbued with the mysticism of Swedenborg, trained her children in it, and "instilled in them a permanent interest in the indefinitely mystic."

She kept constantly before the children books which appealed to her—German folk and fairy tales, Pilgrim's Progress, Robinson Crusoe, Malory's Morte d'Arthur. It was she who introduced Howard Pyle to Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry and Ritson's charming old collection of popular ballads which started his interest in Robin Hood.

In copies of Punch and the Illustrated London News, the boy pored over the drawings of Leech, Doyle, Tenniel, Thackeray, and Douglas Jerrold. He read again and again Barnaby Rudge, The Old Curiosity Shop, and The Newcomes.

He heard stories of the Revolution from his great-grandmother, and the Civil War occurred during his own childhood. New England troops were continually pouring through Wilmington to Virginia. Later, when his interest in American history became a driving one, in addition to his wide reading, he talked with many old people who had heard tales of early Colonial days or the Revolution from their elders.

It seems of importance to us, too, that Howard Pyle was born and lived in a place which years later he described like this:

"In front of the house was a grassy lawn with a terraced bank and beyond you could see the turnpike road. . . . On the other side of the house to a little distance was a garden of old, old-fashioned roses and sweet shrubs that filled the air with fragrance when they were abloom. And there were beds of tulips and daffodillies, and there were gravelled walks edged with box, and a greenhouse of shining glass at the lower end of the garden. And there was a wooden summer-house at the end of the gravel walks, and altogether it was such a garden as you would hardly find outside of a storybook. It seems to me that when I think of that garden I cannot remember anything but bloom, and beauty, air filled with the odor of growing things, and birds singing in the shady trees in such a fashion as they do not sing nowadays."

He was taught very largely at home by his mother, and at fifteen or sixteen he seriously considered going to college, but his interests were so definitely with his drawing and so absolutely away from the subjects necessary to enter college that the plan was given up. He was sent instead to study with a Mr. Van der Weilen in Philadelphia, an artist of high honors in Antwerp. Howard Pyle worked with him for three years, and except for some brief studying in night classes at the Art Students League, this was the only art teaching the artist ever had. After his years with Mr. Van der Weilen he worked in the leather business with his father for several years, writing tales and ballads and illustrating them, but not seeming to be ambitious in these ways. A visit to the island of Chincoteague with its wild ponies proved a turning point. He wrote an article and illustrated it and sent it to Scribner's along with a poem. Both were accepted.

This resulted in his going to New York, where he worked for three years, for Scribner's, for Mrs. Dodge on St. Nicholas, contributing animal fables with pictures, and more and more for Harper's—the Weekly, Harper's Young People, and the Bazar. These years were not easy ones. His work was severely criticized, and at Harper's his sketches were redrawn on wood by the staff of "Young Olympians," as Howard Pyle called them, to his great humiliation. He finally got up his courage to ask Mr. Parsons, the art director, if he might not himself make the final drawing of a picture he had in mind and for which he had brought a sketch. This drawing—A Wreck in the Offing—was greatly liked at Harper's, was published on a double-page spread in the Weekly, and brought him the acquaintance and friendship of the "Young Olympians," particularly of A. B. Frost. With this group and a few others Howard Pyle later helped to organize the Art Students League.

But in 1879 his friends at Harper's had scattered, and he returned to Wilmington, set up his studio, began the tremendous reading of history, and mingled in the social life of the town. There A. B. Frost used to visit him, and they would go on sketching trips up the valley of the Brandywine and over the hills. Mr. Abbott writes that "so definite and vigorous was his study of history and so tenacious his memory that years later he could tell precisely how many buttons a colonel in a Massachusetts regiment had on his coat. . . . He knew the definite line of march of every campaign." He began to write and illustrate things historic, and continued his Robin Hood researches, but finally based this book, which many consider his best, on the two books already mentioned, Percy's Reliques and Ritson's ballads.

While he was in New York he had discovered Thorp's Northern Mythology. He wrote of it to his mother as being "a prosy collection of medieval legends many of which I have started to make note of, and I shall try whether I can infuse a little fairy tale juice into them. It is a rich mine to select from though a dull book to read."

This book undoubtedly was background for Pepper and Salt or Seasoning for Young Folks, his first book of fairy tales, which appeared in Harper's Young People, and The Wonder Clock, published in 1888. Then came Twilight Land in 1895. At first his fairy tales were retellings of old tales, but gradually he would develop his own story from the skeleton of an old tale, and finally he told his own stories. In The Garden Behind the Moon he has expressed some of his mystical feeling.

It was the sand dunes at Rehoboth near Cape Henlopen on the Delaware Coast and the legends of pirates connected with them that stirred the artist's interest in such characters as Morgan, Kidd, and Leach. He collected all available books on them, and the short stories he wrote and illustrated have been gathered into The Book of Pirates. His American history drawings have been collected in The Book of the American Spirit.

There is no space here to write of his teaching at Drexel or of the establishment of his own school, first a summer school at Chadds Ford, Pennsylvania, in connection with Drexel, and later an independent school in Wilmington. But the breadth of influence upon American art is newly appreciated when it is realized that Violet and Thornton Oakley, N. C. Wyeth, Jessie Willcox Smith, Maxfield Parrish, Frank Schoonover, all were students of his.

Mr. Abbott says that Howard Pyle retained always great simplicity of character and a deep interest in spiritual things, and N. C. Wyeth, in an introduction to Mr. Abbott's book, emphasizes the "combined strength of spirituality and practical assistance" as the reasons for his power with his students.

That he considered his children's books important and satisfying is shown by the following letter which Mr. Abbott quotes:

"My ambition in days gone by was to write a really notable adult book, but now I am glad that I have made literary friends of the children rather than older folk. In one's mature years, one forgets the books that one reads, but the stories of childhood leave an indelible impression, and their author always has a niche in the temple of memory from which the image is never cast out to be thrown into the rubbish heap of things that are outgrown and outlived."

THE NÜRNBERG STOVE (The Little Library)

Macmillan $1.00

Illustrated by Frank Boyd. "August lived in a little town called Hall. . . . It has the green meadows and the great mountains all about it, and the gray-green glacier-fed water rushes by it. It has paved streets and enchanting little shops that have all latticed panes and iron gratings to them; it has a very grand old Gothic Church." Now if this beginning does not make you want to read further, then you may be a baseball player, a fisherman, or a locomotive engineer, but you're no reader of books.

RUSKIN, JOHN

THE KING OF THE GOLDEN RIVER, or THE BLACK

BROTHERS (Little Library)

Macmillan $1.00

With new pictures by Mary Lott Seaman. Schwartz and Hans, the two elder brothers were cruel, selfish and greedy. Little Gluck was their opposite in every way. The story tells how he won back the inheritance lost by his evil brothers. Written by Ruskin in Scotland, 1841, when he was twenty-two years old. The story is told in the form of a medieval legend, and the pictures are delightful expressive of this spirit.

MIRACLES OF NATURE

Design from "At the Back of the North Wind," illustrated by Francis D. Bedford. (The Macmillan Co.)

Why! who makes much of a miracle?
As for me, I know of nothing else but miracles,
Whether I walk the streets of Manhattan . . .
Or watch honey-bees busy around the hive, of a summer forenoon,
Or animals feeding in the fields,
Or birds—or the wonderfulness of insects in the air,
Or the wonderfulness of the sun-down—or of stars shining so quiet and bright,
Or the exquisite, delicate, thin curve of the new moon in spring; . . .
To me every hour of the light and dark is a miracle,
Every cubic inch of space is a miracle,
Every square yard of the surface of the earth is spread with the same, . . .
To me the sea is a continual miracle;
The fishes that swim—the rocks—the motion of the waves—the ships, with men in them,
What stranger miracles are there?

MARTIN, MARTHA E.

THE FRIENDLY STARS

Harper $2.00

"Describes the twenty brightest stars and the great constellations."

NOYES, ALFRED

THE WATCHERS OF THE SKY

Stokes $2.50

A verse story of the passing on of the torch from one astronomer to another.

"Of Copernicus who lay dying and begged
 'Use all your weapons, doctor, I must live
 To see and touch one copy of my book.
 Have they not brought it yet?—from Nuremberg.
 Do not deceive me. I must know it safe,
 Printed and safe, for other men to use.'
 Of Tycho Brahe who tasted happiness in his hour.
 'There was a prince in Denmark in those days;
 And when he heard how often Kings desired
 The secrets of this new astrology,
 He said, 'This man, in after years, will bring Glory to Denmark, honour to her prince.
 He is a Dane. Give him this isle of Wheen,
 And let him make his great discoveries there.'"
 Of Kepler and his dreams;
 '... This was a fairer dream:
 For I was walking in a far-off spring
 Upon the planet, Venus. Only verse
 Could spread true wings for that delicious world;
 And so I wrote it—for no eyes but mine.
 Or 'twould be seized on, doubtless, as fresh proof
 Of poor old Kepler's madness.'"

And so on of Galileo and his telescope, of Newton and the Herschels—all

“Of those who caught the pure Promethean fire
 One from another, each crying as he went down
 To one that waited, crowned with youth and joy—
 Take thou the splendour, carry it out of sight
 Into the great new age I must not know
 Into the great new realm I must not tread.”

THE SEA

The world below the brine;
Forests at the bottom of the sea—the branches and leaves,
Sea-lettuce, vast lichens, strange flowers and seeds—the thick tangle, the openings, and the pink turf, Different colors, pale gray and green, purple, white, and gold—
the play of light through the waters,
Dumb swimmers there among the rocks . . .

BIRDS

Two guests from Alabama—two together,
And their nest, and four light-green eggs, spotted with brown,
And every day the he-bird, to and fro, near at hand,
And every day the she-bird, crouch'd on her nest, silent, with bright eyes,
And every day I, a curious boy, never too close, never disturbing them,
Cautiously peering, absorbing, translating.

Houghton $1.75

Arranged according to the bird's arrival or the time when most frequently seen. The illustrations are Fuertes', some in color and some in black and white.

WAKE-ROBIN

Houghton $1.75

"My first Book—Wake-Robin—was written while I was a government clerk in Washington. It enabled me to live over again the days I had passed with the birds and in the scenes of my youth. I wrote the book sitting at a desk in part of an iron wall. I was the keeper of a vault in which many millions of bank-notes were stored. How my mind reacted from the iron wall in front of me, and sought solace in memories of the birds and of summer fields and woods!"

A delightful book about birds both of the Adirondacks and of Washington.

"To interpret Nature is not to improve upon her: it is to draw her out; it is to have an emotional intercourse with her, absorb her, and reproduce her tinged with the colors of the spirit.

"If I name every bird I see in my walk, describe its color and ways, etc., give a lot of facts or details about the bird, it is doubtful if any reader is interested. But if I relate the bird in some way to human life, to my own life,—show what it is to me and what it is in the landscape and the season,—then do I give my reader a live bird and not a labeled specimen."

CHAPMAN, FRANK M.

These are all records of painstaking observation of these insects which combine scientific accuracy with a delightful literary style.

Jean Henri Fabre was born in the little upland village of Saint-Leons in southern France on December 22, 1823. His family were of peasant stock and had no background of culture and learning. Even as a small child and in unpromising surroundings, Fabre showed the inquiring mind and the love of nature that later made him a famous naturalist. When Fabre was about ten years old his family moved to the town of Rodez, and he went to school. Later they again moved to Toulouse, where he attended the local academy. He then won a scholarship at the Primary Normal School of Avignon. There was no study of natural history, as it was considered unimportant and could not possibly lead to a career. In 1842 at the age of nineteen Fabre took a position as pupil-teacher at Carpentras. He became interested in chemistry, and in order to learn it he undertook to teach it. This was a method he frequently employed, for he believed teaching was the best way of learning. Later, when asked to teach algebra, of which he knew nothing, he said, "Bah! why not accept? A heroic method of learning to swim is to jump boldly into the water. So why shouldn't I jump head first into this yawning gulf of algebra? . . . I know nothing of the subject, but never mind. Forward with a bold front! I would learn by teaching." It was not until 1854 that he turned definitely to research work in the field of entomology, and the first of his many chapters on insect habits appeared the following year. The great work from Fabre's pen, Entomological Souvenirs, in ten volumes, forms the basis for many of the works listed here and also for many school books that were used widely in France.

Fabre's "habit of introducing the most intimate personal and domestic details into his insect studies gives pleasing variety to his pages; it adds a warmly human touch and makes the reader conscious that it is no dry-as-dust scholar behind those pages, but a living and breathing, suffering and rejoicing fellow-creature." The climax of his recognition came in 1910 when at a "jubilee" he was awarded many medals by home and foreign learned societies. Fabre's great service to natural science lay in his being the first to study the living insect. Fabre died on October 11, 1915.

"It would be unfair to this life-long truth-lover and truth-seeker to leave the impression that he stood in unchallenged preëminence in his domain of nature-study. The evolutionists, naturally enough, criticized him for his unqualified rejection of their theory; and no fair-minded observer can quite acquit him of some tendency to dogmatism in his views. Darwinism came into vogue when his mental habits were already formed, and with advancing age he did not become less set in his ways of thinking. Nevertheless, his refusal to accept evolution as the key to the riddle of existence was a useful and needed protest against a prevalent tendency to make mechanical laws account for the wonders of a universe that is surely not less spiritual than material.

"Another criticism of Fabre's work has to do with his accuracy and faithfulness as an observer of insect habits. His compatriot, the entomologist Ferton, has pointed out in Fabre's writings certain instances that in this critic's opinion amount to errors of statement, with some alleged betrayals of ignorance respecting the work of other entomologists. But who of us is infallible? Even the severest of Fabre's critics acknowledge the inestimable value of his observations as a whole and the unrivaled charm of his style as a writer."¹

WILD LIFE UNDER THE EQUATOR Harper $2.00

Paul Du Chaillu was born in Paris, July 31, 1835. He was educated there and when quite young went to live on the west coast of Africa, where his father was a trader. In 1855 he explored the country on foot and in four years walked more than eight thousand miles. He discovered many amazing things of scientific nature and was probably the first white man who ever saw a gorilla and the first to study the habits of the animals. He stuffed more than two thousand species of birds. His stories when first published were ridiculed for the preposterous nature of his statements, but since then they have been well substantiated. All of these books are of Africa except The Land of the Long Night, which tells of a winter journey by sledge and skis to northern Scandinavia and of the inhabitants and wild life of that region.

All the above, published by Harper, are illustrated by Erick Berry.

HEMING, ARTHUR

THE DRAMA OF THE FOREST, Romance and

The boyhood of the author which was spent on the South American pampas is shown to be a vivid one closely attuned to the beautiful setting and the wild life about him.

"Fifteen years old! This was indeed the most memorable day of my life, for on that evening I began to think about myself, and my thoughts were strange and unhappy thoughts of me—what I was, what I was in the world for, what I wanted, what destiny was going to make of me! Or was it for me to do just what I wished, to shape my own destiny, as my elder brothers had done? It was the first time such questions had come to me, and I was startled at them. . . .

"What, then did I want?—What did I ask to have? If the question had been put to me then, and if I had been capable of expressing what was in me, I should have replied: I want only to keep what I have; to rise each morning and look out on the sky and the grassy dew-wet earth from day to day, from year to year. To watch every June and July for spring, to feel the same old sweet surprise and delight at the appearance of each familiar flower, every new-born insect, every bird returned once more from the north. To listen in a trance of delight to the wild notes of the golden plover coming once more to the great plain, flying, flying south, flock succeeding flock the whole day long. Oh, those wild beautiful cries of the golden plover! I could exclaim with Hafiz, with but one word changed: 'If after a thousand years that sound should float o'er my tomb, my bones uprising in their gladness would dance in the sepulchre!' To climb trees and put my hand down in the deep hot nest of the Bien-te-veo and feel the hot eggs—the five long pointed cream-coloured eggs with chocolate spots and splashes at the larger end. To lie on a grassy bank with the blue water between me and beds of tall bulrushes, listening to the mysterious sounds of the wind and of hidden rails and coots and courlans conversing together in strange human-like tones. . . . To lie on my back on the rust-brown grass in January and gaze up at the wide hot whitey-blue sky, peopled with millions and myriads of glistening balls of thistle-down, ever, ever floating by; to gaze and gaze until they are to me living things and I, in an ecstasy, am with them, floating in that immense shining void!"¹

WHITE, GILBERT

THE NATURAL HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES OF SELBORNE IN THE COUNTY OF SOUTHAMP-TON

Dodd $3.00

Edited with notes by Grant Allen. Illustrated by Edmund H. New

"Some time about the year 1755, as far as one can judge, there went to settle down at Selborne, in Hampshire, a certain quiet and unobtrusive parson—the Reverend Gilbert White, Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford—who has made this out-of-the-way village a place of pilgrimage for all lovers of nature on both sides of the Atlantic. . . . So modest was he, indeed, and so careless of fame that no portrait now exists of him, and only a few particulars can with difficulty be gleaned from very brief notices about the man whose letters have probably been reprinted in a greater number of editions than those of any other English worthy. . . .

"Fully to understand The Natural History of Selborne, one ought to visit Selborne itself. There, facing the chief street of the village, you see a quiet, unobtrusive old house, which is the one where White made his immortal observations and penned in peace his immortal letters. . . . The front windows, it is true, give upon a very compact street of eighteenth century domestic architecture; the back opens out upon a spacious lawn and garden, sloping up toward the Hangar, and wooded with fine old trees, some of them doubtless of Gilbert White's own planting. Here the easy-minded Fellow of Oriel and curate of Faringdon could sit in his rustic chair all day long, and observe the birds and beasts as they dropped in to visit him. . . ." (Introduction.)

From "The Natural History of Selborne," illustrated by Edmund H. New. (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

TRAVEL

"... The road you travel from Tana to Cathay is perfectly safe, whether by day or by night, according to what the merchants say who have used it . . . You may reckon that from Tana to Sarai the road is less safe than on any other part of the journey, and yet even when this part of the road is at its worst, if you are some sixty men in the company, you will go as safely as if you were in your own house." (Pegolotti, Merchants' Handbook, 1340.)

ADAMS, H. C.

TRAVELLER'S TALES: A BOOK OF MARVELS Boni $3.50

Ancient Travellers, Mediæval Travellers, Strange Quests, Strange Lands, Modern Travellers, Strange Customs, Strange Men-

From "Sir John Maundeville's Travels."

Monsters, Strange Beasts, Strange Birds, Strange Fish, Strange Reptiles, Strange Insects, Strange Plants. This collection of interesting extracts is made from various sources as Marco Polo, Maundeville, Munchausen, Captain Cook, Nunzio, Park, and others. Many of them are "too marvellous to believe." A footnote gives this interesting story.

"Sir Walter Scott relates that one day when in Park's company, the latter had related to him some of his adventures, which were far more striking and interesting than any he had published. Sir Walter inquired why he had not given these particulars to the public. Mr. Park answered that, as they were of no practical benefit to mankind, he did not wish to shock their credulity, or gain the reputation of romancing. To another gentleman, who made a similar inquiry, he made the same answer, though in fewer words, 'Sir, they were too marvellous to be believed.'"

COOPER, MERIAN C.

GRASS

Putnam $2.75

Cooper accompanied the Baktyari tribe across mountains and rivers of Persia in order to secure a moving-picture film. Many boys have probably seen the film.

PERTAINING TO THE CIRCUS

Such a man, sir, should be encouraged; for his performances show the extent of the human powers in one instance, and thus tend to raise our opinion of the faculties of man. He shows what may be attained by persevering application, so that every man may hope that by giving as much application, although he may never ride three horses at a time, or dance upon a wire, yet he may be equally expert in whatever profession he has chosen to pursue.

—DR. JOHNSON, on Circuses.

PETS

Speak gently to the herring, and kindly to the calf,
Be blithesome with the bunny, at barnacles don't laugh!
Give nuts unto the monkey, and buns unto the bear,
Ne'er hint at currant jelly if you chance to see a hare!
O, little girls, pray hide your combs when tortoises draw nigh
And never in the hearing of a pigeon whisper "Pie!"
But give the stranded jelly-fish a shove into the sea—
Be always kind to animals wherever you may be!

—ASHBY STERRY.

(Doubleday, Doran & Co.)*

MAN'S ADVENTUROUS MIND

Materials here, under your eye, shall change their shape as if by magic;
The cotton shall be picked almost in the very field,
Shall be dried, clean'd, ginn'd, baled, spun into thread and cloth, before you:
You shall see hands at work at all the old processes, and all the new ones;
You shall see the various grains, and how flour is made, and then bread baked by the bakers;
You shall see the crude ores of California and Nevada passing on and on till they become bullion;
You shall watch how the printer sets type, and learn what a composing stick is;
You shall mark, in amazement, the Hoe press wheeling its cylinders, shedding the printed leaves steady and fast:
The photograph, model, watch, pin, nail, shall be created before you.

-WALT WHITMAN.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

ABBOT, CHARLES GREELEY

EVERYDAY MYSTERIES: Secrets of Science in the Home Macmillan $2.00

How the sun makes plants grow. How deep is the ocean. How a scientist saved half his coal pile, etc. In Young People's Shelf of Science series.

ADAMS, JOSEPH H.

HARPER'S ELECTRICITY BOOK FOR BOYS Harper $1.60

Clear directions for making everyday electrical appliances with home-made apparatus at small cost.

BASSETT, SARA W.

CHRISTOPHER AND THE CLOCKMAKERS Little $1.65

Christopher, in an enforced year of release from school work, becomes interested in the history and workmanship of clocks, and this leads him to a friendship and adventures that make his year a profitable one.

The Invention Series also contains: Paul and the Printing Press; Steve and the Steam Engine; Ted and the Telephone—all of which combine much information with a story.

BRIDGES, T. C.

THE YOUNG FOLKS' BOOK OF INVENTIONS Little $2.00

An account of inventions from prehistoric to modern times.

CHAMBERS, MRS. MARY D.

NATURE SECRETS (Little Gateway to Science series)
Little $1.25

The elementary principles of physics and chemistry are presented and illustrated so as to explain many everyday facts of nature in an interesting way.

CLARKE, CHARLES RAMSAY

THE BOYS' BOOK OF CHEMISTRY Dutton $2.00

Illustrated. A simple explanation of up-to-date chemistry, together with many easily made experiments.

THE BOYS' BOOK OF PHYSICS Dutton $2.00

Illustrated. A simple explanation of modern science with easily made apparatus and many simple experiments.

COLLINS, A. FREDERICK

A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF INVENTION Crowell $2.00

Nineteen chapters, each covering one different class of invention as units of measurement, farming implements, printing presses, vehicles of transportation, etc., etc.

THE BOOK OF WIRELESS Appleton $1.50

A clear description of wireless telegraph sets and how to make and operate them, with a simple explanation of how wireless works.

THE BOY CHEMIST Lothrop $2.00

Taken in order, the chapters up to Chapter X set forth a good course in chemistry. The last five chapters give a large number of interesting experiments.

THE BOYS' BOOK OF SUBMARINES Stokes $1.50

Illustrations and drawings. A brief history of the submarine, directions upon how to make and work a model, with much information upon the real boats, how they are operated, living conditions, types of engines, etc.

THE RADIO AMATEUR'S HANDBOOK Crowell $2.00

First appeared in 1922, but has been revised to 1926. Appendix has more than one hundred pages of useful information, including radio facts.

THE WONDERS OF CHEMISTRY Crowell $1.75

The author presupposes no advance knowledge as he takes the reader on a trip through his laboratory. Chemistry in its relation to everyday life is the side which is emphasized, and not its technical side.

DARROW, F. L.

THE BOYS' OWN BOOK OF GREAT INVENTION

Macmillan $2.00

Illustrations and diagrams. Not only the history of some of the great epoch-making inventions, but of experiments embodying the principles involved; sufficiently elementary for the home laboratory.

FABRE, JEAN HENRI C.

THE WONDER BOOK OF CHEMISTRY

Century $2.50

Translated by Florence C. Bicknell. "Uncle Paul" addresses the same two little boys as in The Story-Book of Science and explains to them the elementary principles of the subject.

HAUSMANN, ERICH, and Eight Other Experts

RADIO PHONE RECEIVING

Van Nostrand $1.50

A practical book for everybody. Describes in a clear manner the construction and working of the apparatus used in receiving speech and music sent by means of radio telephony.

KAEMPFFERT, WALDEMAR BERNHARD, Editor

A POPULAR HISTORY OF AMERICAN INVENTION

Scribner set $10.00

Illustrated. Vol. I covers transportation, communication and power. Vol. II material resources and labor-saving machines. Five hundred and more pictures. "Popular, non-technical, and authoritative, this is not only a record of American invention, but a narrative of initiative and perseverance in real life that rivals the imaginings of a fictionist." (A. L. A. Booklist.)

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE

GREAT MOMENTS IN SCIENCE

Doubleday $2.50

"Time and space were baffling problems to the man of long ago. He was forced to live in a tiny, enclosed world of his own present existence. Writing, printing, photography, and the phonograph have given him one kind of control; clocks, telescopes, the telegraph, the telephone, radio, the steam engine, the automobile, and the airplane have won him other victories over time and space. . . .

"The man, the place and period in which he lived, and the moment in which he won an immortal victory—this is the subject matter for the stories of this book." (Preface.)

LESCARBOURA, A. C.

RADIO FOR EVERYBODY

Scientific American $1.50

A popular guide to practical radio phone reception and transmission for the layman, by the managing editor of Scientific American. Accurate, popular guide.

MILLS, JOHN

LETTERS OF A RADIO ENGINEER TO HIS SON

THE BOY ELECTRICIAN

Lothrop $2.50

Illustrated. Directions for making electrical appliances. Includes microphones, wireless telephones and transformers.

BOYS' HOME BOOK OF SCIENCE AND CONSTRUCTION

Lothrop $2.50

"Plans for experiments in chemistry, mechanics and physics are clearly worked out by description and diagram, and at minimum expense."

RUSH, CHARLES EVERETT, and WINSLOW, AMY MODERN ALADDINS AND THEIR MAGIC: THE SCIENCE OF THINGS ABOUT US Little $1.50

History and development of such articles of daily use as paper, ink, chalk, brass, copper, dishes, needles, thimbles, etc., and the process of their manufacture. Interestingly told.

SHAFER, DONALD C.
HARPER'S EVERY-DAY ELECTRICITY Harper $1.35

Directions for making from inexpensive materials all kinds of simple apparatus, such as cells and batteries, telegraph keys and sounders, electric bells and buzzers.

SLOSSON, EDWIN
CREATIVE CHEMISTRY Century $3.00

Descriptive of great achievements in the chemical industries and shows their effect on modern life in an interesting and enlightening manner.

VAN METRE, T. W.
TRAINS, TRACKS, AND TRAVEL Simmons $3.50

Fully illustrated. All about our steam railroads. Every phase is covered: "Our Steam Railroads"; "The Railroad Track"; "The Locomotive"; "Freight Cars"; "Passenger Train Cars"; "Passenger Stations and Terminals"; "Freight Terminals"; "The Operation of the Trains." The book has splendid pictures and an index.

WILLIAMS, ARCHIBALD
HOW IT WORKS Nelson $2.00

Dealing in simple language with steam, electricity, light, heat, sound, hydraulics, optics, etc., and with their applications to apparatus in common use.

HOW IT IS MADE Nelson $2.00

"Describing in simple language how various machines and many articles in common use are manufactured from the raw materials."

YATES, RAYMOND FRANCIS

THE BOYS' PLAYBOOK OF CHEMISTRY Century $1.60

Illustrated. "The performance of simple chemical experiments in a little attic laboratory will afford no end of pleasure to the boy with an acquiring mind. . . . Much of the apparatus used can be put together with odds and ends found about the house, while the corner drugstore may be the chief source of supply for the same amount of chemicals needed." (Preface.)

PIONEERS IN SCIENCE AND SERVICE

DARROW, FLOYD L.

MASTERS OF SCIENCE AND INVENTION Macmillan $2.25

Illustrated. Simple account in biographical form of the development of scientific achievement from early times to the present day.

DEKRUIF, PAUL

MICROBE HUNTERS

Harcourt $3.50

Brief biographies of pioneer bacteriologists, their struggle and achievements told with a vividness and a dramatic quality that has made the book outstanding. Each chapter reads like a thrilling story, for the men live in their human aspects thrown into sharp relief by the brilliance of their work.

Scribner $2.00

The amazing and enthralling autobiography of a young Serbian herdsboy who becomes a great inventor.

VALLERY-RADOT, RENÉ

THE LIFE OF PASTEUR

Doubleday $3.00

"Whether to admire more the man or his method, the life or the work, I leave for the readers of this well-told story to decide. Among the researches that have made the name of Pasteur a household word in the civilised world, three are of the first importance—a knowledge of the true nature of the processes of fermentation—a knowledge of the chief maladies that have scourged man and animals—a knowledge of the measures by which either the body may be protected against these diseases, or the poison neutralised when once within the body. I am of the opinion, expressed recently by the anonymous writer of a beautiful tribute in the Spectator, 'that he was the most perfect man who has ever entered the Kingdom of Science.'" (SIR WILLIAM OSLER in the Introduction.)

ENGINEERING

BOND, A. RUSSELL

AMERICAN BOYS' ENGINEERING BOOK Lippincott $2.50

"Describes for older boys with many diagrams such ambitious subjects as astronomy, surveying, electric power and the weather bureau, the laying of miniature railroads, the building of wharves, dams, dredges, etc." (Best Books of 1918)

PICK, SHOVEL AND PLUCK Scientific American $1.65

A sequel to With the Men Who Do Things. Keokuk Dam, Panama Canal, and other feats which call for courage and skill are described.

WITH THE MEN WHO DO THINGS

Scientific American $1.65

Two boys spend their vacation in New York seeing skyscrapers erected, underground foundations laid, tunnels dug through water, etc. Engineering data have been verified by experts. Sequel is Pick, Shovel and Pluck.

BRYANT, LORINDA MUNSON

HAMBURG, MERRILL

BEGINNING TO FLY: THE BEST MODEL AIR-PLANES

Houghton $2.50

This book "is thoroughly up-to-date, in fact it is ahead of the date. By means of concise text, diagrams, and reproduction of actual photographs it gives full details for the construction of an outdoor endurance model, a pusher model, scale models of famous planes, and best of all, a little twelve-inch plane that will rise from the floor under its own power, circle about the room for more than a minute, and then glide down to a landing that even Lindbergh couldn't beat. . . ." (L. F. RANLETT, The Horn Book.)

JONES, PAUL

AN ALPHABET OF AVIATION

Macrae $2.00

Drawings by Edward Shenton. Basic facts of flying given concisely in picture and text. Diagrams showing the fundamental mechanical features with explanation of how these parts operate.

LINDBERGH, CHARLES A.

"WE"

Putnam $2.50

"Lindbergh has a purpose. It is to see that aëronautics is made safe and that airplanes are widely used for transportation. Landing fields and good equipment are of primary importance. He asserts these points over and over again in his book. He tells of his many adventures simply and briefly. There is but one chapter on the great flight! Every adventure, every experience, leads him round again to his purpose. After that one chapter on the great flight come several chapters that he did not write. They are by Fitzhugh Green, a writer of talent and Lindbergh's manager, and they describe the magnificent receptions that Lindbergh was given and quote from the speeches that he made. Ambassador Herrick writes the Foreword, and Wide World Photos supplies the quantity of illustrations." (L. F. RANLETT, The Horn Book.)

PAGE, CAPTAIN VICTOR W.

THE A-B-C OF AVIATION

Henley $2.50

Complete nontechnical manual for school or home use.

DRIGGS, LAWRENCE LA TOURETTE

THE ADVENTURES OF ARNOLD ADAIR Little each $2.00

ARNOLD ADAIR WITH THE ENGLISH ACES

HAINES, DONALD HAMILTON

DRAGON FLIES Houghton $1.75

"Most yarns about air fighting have to do with duels between plane and plane. Here is one where a plane engages a Zeppelin as well, and it is thrilling. . . . 'Out of the blackness above and ahead of them came a single sharp flash, a pause, and then a bursting, roaring mass of flame that seemed to engulf them as thousands of cubic feet of gas were ignited.'"

WIT, WISDOM, AND TALENT

From "What Shall We Play?", illustrated by Elizabeth MacKinsty. (Doubleday, Doran & Company, Inc.)

GAMES AND AMUSEMENTS

But now for Blind-man's Buff they call,
Of each encumbrance clear the hall.
Jenny her silken kerchief folds,
And blear-eyed Will the black lot holds.
Now laughing stops, with "Silence, hush!"
And Peggy Pout gives Sam a push.
The Blind-man's arms, extended wide,
Sam slips between:—"Oh, woe betide
Thee, clumsy Will, but tittering Kate
Is penned up in the corner strait . . ."

But Dick
Was mischief bent upon a trick;
Down on his hands and knees he lay
Directly in the Blind-man's way,
Then cries out "Hem!" . . .

—WILLIAM BLAKE.

PLAYS¹

“‘Could I do the Dragon?’ asked Bobby, releasing his hot face from the folds of an old blue cloak lined with red, in which he was rehearsing his walk as a belated wayfarer. ‘Certainly not,’ said I, ‘you’re the Bereaved Father and the Faithful Attendant to begin with, and I hope you won’t muddle them. And you’re Twelve Travellers as well, and the thunder, remember!’

“‘I don’t care how many I do, if only I can,’ said Bobby, drawing his willing arm across his streaming forehead. ‘I should like to have a fiery tail.’” (MRS. EWING, An Ill-Tempered Family.)

FOLK SONGS, FOLK DANCES, AND SINGING GAMES

Sometimes, with secure delight,
The upland hamlets will invite,
When the merry bells ring round,
And the jocund rebecks sound
To many a youth and many a maid
Dancing in the checkered shade,
And young and old come forth to play
On a sunshine holyday. . . .

—MILTON.

POLLOCK'S JUVENILE DRAMA

Sets of plays: Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, The Silver Palace, Charles II, The Corsican Brothers, Don Quixote, Aladdin, Douglas, The Forty Thieves, Dick Whittington, The Miller and His Men, Oliver Twist, King Henry, The Battle of Waterloo. These are obtainable mounted and cut or in sheet form ($2.00 to $6.00).

Stages in three sizes with curtain, footlights and carriers for actors ($12.00, $18.00, and $25.00).

These are the very same theaters of which Stevenson wrote in his "A Penny Plain and Twopence Coloured" (Memories and Portraits): "There stands, I fancy, to this day (but now how fallen!) a certain stationer's shop at a corner of the wide thoroughfare that joins the city of my childhood with the sea. When upon any Saturday we made a party to behold the ships, we passed that corner and since in those days I loved a ship as a man loves Burgundy or daybreak, this of itself had been enough to hallow it. . . . But there was more than that. In the Leith Walk window, all the year round, there stood displayed a theatre in working order, with a 'forest set,' a 'combat,' and a few 'robbers carousing' in the slides; and below and about, dearer tenfold to me! the plays themselves, those budgets of romance, lay tumbled one upon another. Long and often have I lingered there with empty pockets. One figure, we shall say, was visible in the first plate of characters, bearded, pistol in hand, or drawing to his ear the clothyard arrow; I would spell the name: was it Macaire, or Long Tom Coffin, or Grindoff, 2d dress? O how I would long to see the rest! how—if the name by chance were hidden—I would wonder in what play he figured, and what immortal legend justified his attitude and strange apparel! And then to go within, to announce myself as an intending purchaser, and, closely watched, be suffered to undo those bundles and breathlessly devour those pages of gesticulating villains, epileptic combats, bosky forests, palaces and warships, frowning fortresses and prison vaults—it was a giddy joy."

MUSIC AND MUSIC MAKERS

Lap me in soft Lydian Aires,
 Married to immortal verse
 Such as the meeting soul may pierce
 In notes, with many a winding bout
 Of linckèd sweetness long drawn out,
 With wanton heed, and giddy cunning,
 The melting voice through mazes running;
 Untwisting all the chains that ty
 The hidden soul of harmony.
 That Orpheus self may heave his head
 From golden slumbers in a bed
 Of heapt Elysian flowres, and hear
 Such streins as would have won the ear
 Of Pluto, to have quite set free
 His half regained Eurydice.

—MILTON.

BAUER, MARION, and PEYSER, ETHEL

HOW MUSIC GREW FROM PREHISTORIC TIMES TO THE PRESENT DAY

Putnam $4.50

Illustrated. Comprehensive, as it includes the development of individual instruments, the musical growth of different nations, and the biographies of famous composers, but not very systematically arranged.

BROWER, HARRIETTE MOORE

STORY-LIVES OF MASTER MUSICIANS

Stokes $2.50

Interesting accounts of twenty-two musicians arranged chronologically from Palestrina, Bach, and Händel through Mendelssohn, Chopin, and Liszt, to MacDowell and Debussy. Not studies of their musical achievements as much as readable accounts of their lives.

BROWN, ABBIE FARWELL

THE BOYHOOD OF EDWARD MACDOWELL

Stokes $2.00

Miss Brown had a true appreciation of the composer as an artist and a man, and although this book has been criticized for its sentimentality we have seen it thoroughly enjoyed by young people who must feel its sincerity.

CHAPIN, ANNA ALICE

TALES FROM WAGNER

Harper $1.75

The legends upon which "Lohengrin," "Tristan and Isolde," "Tannhäuser," "The Flying Dutchman," and "The Meistersinger" are based.

COLEMAN, MRS. SATIS N.

CREATIVE MUSIC FOR CHILDREN

Putnam $3.50

A plan of training based on the natural evolution of music, including the making and playing of instruments, dancing, singing, poetry. "How ridiculous it now seems that all these years we have been confronting a child with the most complicated instrument man has yet evolved, and have expected him to use it, without giving him any of the steps that lead up to it! And how unjust that the verdict of "unmusical" has been passed upon so many children made to cope with this difficult medium! . . . Is it any wonder we have failed to make of ourselves a musical people?"

CREATIVE MUSIC IN THE HOME

Myers $5.00

A splendid book on how to make instruments, how to play them, and what to play. Very completely illustrated with a variety of drawings by a group of illustrators, and photographs. A truly thrilling book which opens one's eyes to the fun and profit of a home-devised orchestra and one's ears to the music in commonplace things.

DALCROZE, E. J.

RHYTHM, MUSIC AND EDUCATION

Putnam $3.50

" . . . The idea underlying the conception and construction of my whole system is that the education of to-morrow must, before all else, teach children to know themselves, to measure their intellectual and physical capacities by judicious comparison with the efforts of their predecessors, and to submit them to exercises enabling them to utilize their powers, to attain due balance, and thereby to adapt themselves to the necessities of their individual and collective existence." Some of the chapter headings are: "Music and the Child"; "Eurythmics and Musical Composition"; "Rhythm and Creative Imagination"; "Rhythm, Time and Temperament."

DAVISON, ARCHIBALD THOMPSON

APPRECIATION OF THE FINE ARTS

Ah, were to do a thing
As easy as to dream of doing it,
We should not want for Artists, but the men
Who carry out in art their great designs,
Are few in number; aye, they may be counted
Upon the fingers of this hand.

An illustrated manual of the history of art throughout the ages with six hundred illustrations.

WHITCOMB, IDA PRENTICE

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S STORY OF ART Dodd $3.50

Broad in its scope, as it gives many legends, and stories of famous artists and their works in architecture, sculpture, and painting.

"You should often amuse yourself, when you take a walk for recreation, in watching and taking notes of the attitudes and actions of men as they talk and dispute, or laugh or come to blows with one another. Both their actions and those of the bystanders who either intervene or stand looking on at these things; noting these down with rapid strokes—in a little pocketbook, which you ought always to carry with you."

—LEONARDO DA VINCI.

BEST-MAUGARD, ADOLFO

A METHOD FOR CREATIVE DESIGN Knopf $2.50

A simple and rapid method of acquiring a form of self-expression for children and adults who love drawing but have not thought it possible to succeed in it.

BLAKE, VERNON

THE WAY TO SKETCH Oxford $2.50

Especially for water-color work. Gives principles of perspective in landscape painting.

BOAS, BELLE

ART IN THE SCHOOLS Doubleday $3.00

Written by the Director of Fine Arts, Horace Mann School, Teachers College, this book sets forth much of the work done in that school. The introduction states that in the ordinary school "there is neither the time nor the money nor the inclination to develop the potential artist. He must be content to await his entrance into an art school. In the unspecialized school all that can be hoped for is the sharpening of taste and of the powers of observation . . . Art teachers are charged with quickening into a flame that spark of wonder which is the beginning of all æsthetic enjoyment. If they succeed in their task, they have given their pupils something infinitely precious, the deeper understanding and love of their world."

LUTZ, EDWIN GEORGE

DRAWING MADE EASY Scribner $1.50
WHAT TO DRAW AND HOW TO DRAW IT Dodd $1.75

The method makes use of only the simplest lines and geometric figures. For young children.

SALWEY, J. P.

THE ART OF DRAWING IN LEAD PENCIL Scribner $3.00

For advanced work as it has to do with developing technique in pencil work as an end in itself and not as a stage in the handling of other mediums.

SARGENT, WALTER, and MILLER, E. E.

HOW CHILDREN LEARN TO DRAW Ginn $1.48

This shows the methods and results of the teaching of drawing in the elementary School of Education, University of Chicago. Illustrated with the children's own work.

WOODBURY, CHARLES E., and PERKINS, ELIZABETH WARD

THE ART OF SEEING: Mental Training Through
Drawing Scribner $2.00

"The aim of the Course in Observation is to train the vision from the mental side, increasing the accuracy of sight at the same time, and furnishing the student with the means for putting his thought in simple line or color. Although he may use the same material as the artist, it is not necessary that his accomplishment be measured by the standards of Art.

"The children of no special talent will in later life use the results of their visual training in drawing and painting as opportunities for graphic expression may present themselves in the professions, business and other activities. To draw a design, a map, a figure in motion, is often to convince at once, to gain time, and to save energy. Facts reach the mind through the eyes more promptly and impressively than through the other senses. The children of special talent, when trained according to a course in observation, will have nothing to unlearn when they reach the Art School. . . . The artistic sense is not a thing by itself, but the superior development of common quality, and the fog of controversy that hangs about the appreciation and teaching of the Fine Arts is, for the most part, unnecessary. It is possible for all citizens to the degree of their intelligence to draw and paint, and to know when one drawing is good, another bad, a third indifferent, although they cannot penetrate to the sources from which real quality arises."

Thus are the general purpose and the general theory of this course in the teaching of art set forth in this book and there follows a detailed outline of the method with a summing up of results to be expected. The book is illustrated with children's own drawings.

ROADS TO THE PAST

INTRODUCTORY

THE roads to the past are so long, the secondary roads, wood roads, and trails so many, and the life of a person so short that most of us can gain little more than a bird's eye or aviator's view. But whether we are trying for a wide picture or following a secondary road or trail through the woods, the journey is fascinating. It does not begin, however, until interest is aroused. Once a boy wants to read more than one book about the same person or the same period he may be considered to have started on his history journey, for nothing is more stimulating than to build a little camp of knowledge for one's self in the wilderness. From that camp it is easier to explore a wide region round about, and gradually one sets up other camps. Home coöperation through reading aloud and conversation does much to help in historical journeys. Even more important than such reading is to offer the right book at the time when interest is pressing.

Perhaps someone will ask why in the wealth of historical material we should have quoted so much from Mr. Geoffrey Parsons's Stream of History.¹ To such a question we would answer that at the time of our work on the history section, we were reading The Stream of History and being greatly stirred by it. We have known no book like it. It is not another outline. It is rather taking the whole great unwieldy mass of history—as a sculptor might take a huge mass of soft clay—and shaping it with care and skill so that it shall present a certain Rodin-like figure of truth. Not perfect or rigid in outline—for history is not fixed; always new and wider knowledge comes to change the figure, now here, now there.

¹Quoted text marked with asterisk throughout the Roads to the Past section is from Geoffrey Parsons's The Stream of History, Scribner, $5.00 (see p. 413). Books with (a) after them are adult books.

One of the most stirring phases of the book is its emphasis on the changing quality of the world and of its history.

(In selecting books on different periods of history, refer also to the Folk Literature section, p. 171.)

A rough time chart showing the period of man's history in its relation to the earth's history before man arrived.

"The earth matured at least five hundred million years ago, probably more than a billion years ago. Each of the five days that follow stands for not less than one hundred million years.

"First Day.—There is an earth bare and terrible. Flame pours from a thousand volcanoes. Streams of lava flow far and wide. Not a tree or blade of grass shows on the land. Only the tides stir in the empty seas. Day long great mountains are washed into the sea by the savage storms, and new mountains upheave. It is an earth fresh from chaos and so it remains throughout the day and night.

"Second Day.—Slowly in the morning the smoke and flame begin to abate. The clouds lift. The lands that stand forth to view are still bleak rock and barren sand. But somewhere life is beginning, perhaps in the inland pools, perhaps along the edge of the warm sea; a gray jelly, floating where the tides will notice it alongside the great mountain ranges that are folded aloft by the shrinking shell of the earth. Yet it has the power of growth and development, and it is destined to be mightier than the hills.

"Third Day.—Still the dry land rises desolate and brown. Only in the sea are change and progress. There the first tiny animals drift about and seaweeds sway in the current. Toward evening the sea becomes alive with countless forms of life, with sponges and sea-anemones and jelly-fish, all the round, backboneless creatures of the deep. Finally, in the last hours of the day, comes the great triumph of the day, a worm boasting the first brain the earth has seen. More than half the life of the earth is past, and the only things on the continents are the great hills that cycle upon cycle are crumpled silently aloft and as silently flow into the sea.

"Fourth Day.—The lands are quieter as this day dawns, and hour by hour the first green plants begin to march from the sea to the dry land. Shallow seas spread over the low places of the continents and retreat again as the lands gently heave and fall. On the marsh-land sprout great forests of fern-trees as tall as oaks, which presently are lying beneath the deltas of rivers and turning to coal. Meanwhile under water the first fish swim and oysters and clams and periwinkles grow their shells. Clumsy, shuffling creatures crawl hesitatingly out upon the shore for a while, and the long line of land-animals is in sight. Insects grow wings and buzz amid the great ferns, giant dragon-flies two feet across the wings. Great armored crocodiles rule the marsh-lands. At midnight the first Appalachian Mountains upheave, as high as the Alps to-day.

"Fifth Day.—The morning of this crowded day sees the rise and decline of the giant reptiles, the great eighty-foot dinosaurs, and the flying dragons twenty-five feet across the wings. True feathered birds take wing, the first flowers bloom, and the first mammals, the size of kittens, suckle their young. One of the mightiest of all mountain-makings comes at noon, folding ranges aloft from Alaska to Cape Horn. Not till the middle of the afternoon do the modern mammals begin to appear. Then one after another of the great line steps forth from the forest—elephant, tiger, bear, leopard, bison, and deer. The whale flops back into the sea. The first monkey takes to the trees. In the middle of the evening comes the last of the great mountain uplifts. The Alps and Himalayas are folded aloft across Europe and Asia: the Rocky Mountains are thrust up again. In the very last hour begins the Great Ice Age. Vast ice-floes march down upon northern America and northwestern Europe. In the last half-hour appears man, the hunter and savage, fighting for his life on the edge of the retreating ice. The whole story of historic man, from Ancient Egypt to the Great War, passes in the last twenty-three seconds of this Fifth Day."¹ *

O'NEILL, ELIZABETHTHE WORLD'S STORY Putnam $5.00

Profusely illustrated in color and black and white from authentic sources. A simple history for boys and girls. More detailed but not so modern or so interesting in its style as The Story of Mankind.

PARSONS, GEOFFREYTHE STREAM OF HISTORY (a) Scribner $5.00

"Geoffrey Parsons in The Stream of History has written a magnificent book about the universe, seeing it in one unbroken flow, often in tumultuous movement, but always moving onward, not as a series of episodic periods. Although the latest scientific investigations lead the thought of man to read a meaning in the unwritten records discovered in every part of the world, he warns us that even science does not always speak with certainty. Condensed though the narrative is into a single medium-sized volume, told with incredible swiftness, it sweeps along with the grip of a great dramatic poem. The stream of history, without beginning or end, carries the imagination on its surging rapids from the vast unknown of chaos to our own day.

A fairer or less opinionated history it would be hard to find. Many a person for whom the past holds significance and charm has longed for a book where he might find both sides of a mooted question, one that would admit the possibility of several theories on doubtful points. Here is a sane and judicial relation of the essential facts known about our world, told with great clarity and simplicity, comparing earlier assumptions with the tendency of modern opinion and making one continuous story of extraordinary vigor and fascination."¹

PREHISTORY—THE BEGINNINGS OF THE WORLD AND PRIMITIVE MAN

BOYLE, MARY E.

IN SEARCH OF OUR ANCESTORS

Little $4.00

An attempt to retrace man's origin and development from later ages back to their beginnings. (Subtitle.) Starting with the Iron Age the author traces man back through the Bronze Age, the Copper Age, the Neolithic Age, and the various eras of the Paleolithic Age to those remote periods of time known as Tertiary, Secondary, and Primary. The latest discoveries are described, and there are reproductions in color of cave paintings and many other pictures. A book for the later teen age young person or grown-up.

MAN BEFORE HISTORY

Little $1.50

A short account of prehistoric times. The story of early man traced through the record of rocks, tools, bones, and wall paintings in caves. Style is simple and clear.

*BURKITT, M. C.*OUR EARLY ANCESTORS (a) Cambridge University $2.50

An introductory study of Mesolithic, Neolithic, and Copper Age cultures in Europe and adjacent regions. (Subtitle.) This book covers the period preceding Miss Davison's book. Would be read by the older teen age boy or girl deeply interested in the subject.

CRUMP, IRVING

OG—SON OF FIRE

Dodd $2.00

The story of a primitive boy and his two wolf cubs. Og discovers the use of fire. In a second book—Og, Boy of Battle, the author tells how Og developed the shield, the spear, and the bow and arrow in his encounters with prehistoric animals. Charles Livingston Bull has illustrated both books.

DAVISON, DOROTHY

DAYS AND WAYS OF EARLY MAN

SAWTELL, RUTH OTIS, and TREAT, IDA

PRIMITIVE HEARTHES IN THE PYRENEES (a)

Appleton $3.00

Illustrated with drawings by Paul Vaillant-Couturier and photographs. The authors spent a summer excavating in "the Violet Hole" of the Plantaurel, "the chain of hills that runs from east to west across the departments of Ariège and Aude, and made trips to many of the famous caves and caverns of the Dordogne and the Garonne as well as to others in the Plantaurel district. This book may serve as a vivid introduction for children and older boys and girls to the realms of prehistory, for is there adventure more full of magic charm than finding and exploring caves where signs are to be seen and discovered of men who lived fifty thousand years ago? Then, too, some of the most interesting finds have been made by boys and girls, or at least a girl! Even the names for the different periods of the old Stone Age—Chellean, Acheulean, Mousterian, Aurignacian, Solutrean, Magdalenian, Azalian—no longer seem formidable when one has met the type stations from which the names have been taken and has visited many of the temples or hearths where signs of the men of the different epochs are to be seen.

TYLER, JOHN MASON

THE NEW STONE AGE IN NORTHERN EUROPE

Scribner $3.00

The Professor Emeritus of Biology at Amherst has reconstructed for the young student the life of man in the new Stone Age (from the records of shell heaps along the Baltic, stone monuments to the dead, temples like Stonehenge, remnants of lake dwellings, pottery, bones, and other archeological specimens).

Not written for young people, but simple enough in style for later teen age.

THEBES, THE GLORY OF A GREAT PAST Dial Press $1.00

"A little book for everybody." The splendid pictures have been borrowed from the large and expensive volume, Thebes, the Glory of a Great Past, by Jean Capart and Marcelle Verbrouck (Dial Press). It is wonderful pictures like these which often start a child on the long trail for real knowledge.

*WEIGALL, A. E. P. B.*THE LIFE AND TIMES OF AKHNATON (a) Putnam $5.00

"A strange young idealist was this pharaoh. His greatness lay in his religious faith. He was the first believer in one god that the world has seen, and he tried his best to convert his people to his lofty faith. He was far in advance of his time, and he failed and his empire collapsed with him. For he was utterly lacking in practical ability. Thotmes III (Akhnaton's father) was a tyrant but an able organizer, and he brought peace and order in the wake of his sword. Akhnaton was a poet and a dreamer, and in his wake came war and chaos."*

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF CLEOPATRA (a) Putnam $5.00

Older boys and girls will enjoy the intimate and surprising picture of the famous queen and also the light thrown on Julius Cæsar and life then in Alexandria and Rome.

CRETE

Egypt, Babylon, Crete—"these three civilizations are the oldest as yet known anywhere in the world. According to existing data they antedate the beginnings of civilization in China and in India by a considerable period of time."*

HERODOTUS, THE FIRST EUROPEAN HISTORIAN

Doubleday $2.00

Edited by Gordon King. Illustrated by Boris Artzybasheff. "Herodotus, the Greek, tells these stories in order that the deeds of men may not be lost, and that great and wonderful actions, whether performed by Greeks or barbarians, shall live and remain fresh in our memories. Besides these and other matters, he tries to answer the question why they waged war upon each other."

LAMPREY, LOUISE

CHILDREN OF ANCIENT GREECE

Little $1.75

CHILDREN OF ANCIENT ROME

Little $1.75

In these two books, the author has been able to reconstruct the atmosphere and surroundings of the times only fairly successfully. Will be useful in school work.

LYTTON, BARON (EDWARD GEORGE EARLE LYTTON BULWER) (BULWER-LYTTON)

THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII

Scribner $2.50

Illustrated classics for younger readers. Nine pictures in color by F. C. Yohn. At last we have an attractive edition of this fine story.

A boy or girl who had read Jennie Hall's Buried Cities, listed above, would enjoy The Last Days more.

MACGREGOR, MARY

THE STORY OF GREECE, TOLD TO BOYS AND GIRLS

Stokes $5.00

SNEDEKER, CAROLINE DALETHE PERILOUS SEATDoubleday $1.75*

A thrilling story of Theria, priestess of Delphi, and how she saved her country by prophecies of her own making.

THE SPARTAN*Doubleday $1.75*

The hero's father was an Athenian, his mother of Sparta. After his father's death the boy is taken to Sparta to be educated in that stern school. His devotion to his father and the different ideals of Athens make his life in Sparta very difficult at first. But Leonidas becomes his friend, his school grows bearable at last, and he goes finally to fight at Thermopylæ and is the only hero to return.

THERAS AND HIS TOWN*Doubleday $1.75*

The everyday life of a small boy in ancient Athens. Theras is seven and just beginning to go to school when the story opens. Theras, too, goes to Sparta and is homesick for Athens. This book is for younger children than the two listed above.

Perhaps the name which comes first to our minds when we think of contemporary artistic writing for young people is that of Caroline Dale Snedeker. Mrs. Snedeker is the gentlest, most modest person imaginable, with great sensitiveness and quiet charm of manner. Her grandfather was the first United States Geologist, and she was born in the headquarters house of his Department at New Harmony, Indiana, where a trilobite was carved over the door of her birth room and the tower of the house was finished with a crinoid, while above swung a prehistoric fish as a weathervane.

She moved from New Harmony to a town not far away at the age of six, but New Harmony, founded by Robert Owen, her great-grandfather, for "the good of humanity," was one of the strongest influences of her childhood. She drove back there with her father many times. She saw there again and again wonderful murals which she firmly believed were painted by Raphael and which really are a mystery to scholars to-day—Psyche, Eros, Mars, a Centaur. These pictures came to weave themselves in her mind about two brief paragraphs from Herodotus in Myers's "delightful" Ancient History, giving the history of Aristodemus, the Coward of Thermopylæ.

Some years later and after six years of work, Mrs. Snedeker's novel, The Coward of Thermopylæ, was published. It is now called The Spartan, and it re-creates the life of Sparta as nothing else we have ever read succeeds in doing. Mrs. Snedeker has written two other fine books on Greece, and also that classic of Quaker life on Nantucket, Downright Dencey, a delightful piece of creative writing and one of the finest junior books in years.

TAPPAN, EVA MARCH

THE STORY OF THE GREEK PEOPLE Houghton $2.50

Pictures from Greek vase paintings, coins, and elsewhere. An elementary history of Greece, with description of the life and art.

THE STORY OF THE ROMAN PEOPLE Houghton $2.50

MEDIÆVAL EUROPE

Ginn $2.00

The first book is a splendid short history of the period. The second book covers the period from the death of Charlemagne to the close of the Fourteenth Century. (814-1300). An authoritative and valuable book.

Saint Francis of Assisi (1182-1226)

"Saint Francis of Assisi, the founder of the Franciscan order, is a part of the Middle Ages that needs no preface to be understood by modern minds. He is one of the most captivating figures of all time. To know him is to see into the heart of mediævalism, and thereby view with understanding both the immaturity of its intellect and the black shadows among its deeds."*

CHESTERTON, GILBERT K.

SAINT FRANCIS OF ASSISI (a)

Doubleday $1.25

A simple, true interpretation of the life and philosophy of Saint Francis, inspired by love and reverence, but with characteristic dogmatic statements.

EGAN, MAURICE

Century $3.50

Illustrated by Boutet de Monvel.

JEWETT, SOPHIE

GOD'S TROUBADOUR

Crowell $2.00

With engraved reproductions of famous paintings and fine photographs of Assisi. We wish this charming book might be the introduction of most children to this medieval saint. And that while they were reading it or, better still, hearing it read aloud, they might have a chance to look at the beautiful picture book of Subercaseaux's listed below.

*From "The White Company," illustrated by James Daugherty.
(Harper Bros.)*

SABATIER, PAUL

THE LIFE OF ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI (a) Scribner $3.00

Translated by L. S. Houghton. If a boy or girl of fourteen years or older wants to read more about St. Francis, this life is considered the finest and most authoritative of all the lives of the saint.

SUBERCASEAUX, PEDRO

SAINT FRANCIS D'ASSISE

Jones $25.00

A picture book of the life of the Saint reproduced from the water colors of a Benedictine monk from the Monastery on the Isle of Wight. He is the son of a wealthy Chilean family, long prominent in diplomatic circles, who has chosen to give himself entirely to the spiritual life.

*WILLIAMS, MICHAEL*LITTLE BROTHER FRANCIS OF ASSISI Macmillan $1.75

Can be read along with God's Troubadour which has greater charm, but not as much detailed description of the time or of the episodes of St. Francis's life. The illustrations are by Boris Artzybasheff.

*FROISSART, SIR JOHN*THE BOY'S FROISSART Scribner $2.00

Being Froissart's Chronicles, edited by Sidney Lanier. "A stirring tale of kings and queens, knights and ladies, sea-fights, land-fights and sieges, written by the Knight Jean Froissart during the reign of Edward III of England and his Queen Philippa of Hainault. Froissart's Chronicles are not only prose accounts of events, but the exhibition in the narration of those events of the characteristics of chivalry." (HENRY VAN DYKE.)

*HALL, JENNIE*VIKING TALES Rand $.65

It was in the Tenth Century that Northmen known as Vikings made themselves dreaded in England, Scotland, France, and many other countries.

SWORDS ON THE SEA (a)Knopf $3.00

Illustrated by Lou Block. Frontispiece in color. Venice of the Thirteenth Century and the building of her Corn Fleet are the keynote of the story. Young Andrea Pisani ventures to Damascus in search of a "novelty" to capture Venetian fancy. After adventures in intrigue, battle, and love in Alexandria, Damascus, and the Arabian desert, he brings his "novelty"—Attar of Roses—from Palestine to Venice.

From "Once in France," illustrated by Germaine Denonain. (Doubleday, Doran & Co.)

HUTCHINSON, HORACE G.THE GREATEST STORY IN THE WORLDAppleton* $1.75

The second period, which covers from dissolution of the Roman Empire through the Middle Ages. (100 A. D.—1500) (See first period, p. 421, and third period, p. 497.)

Joan of Arc

Born in Domremy, "on the eve of Epiphany, or Twelfth-Night, which is January 6, and the year has been fixed as 1412." Died in Rouen, May 30, 1431. On May 16, 1920, the same faith responsible for her burning pronounced her a saint at the great Church of St. Peter's in Rome.

"Joan of Arc—Maid of France! Burned as a heretic and a witch, long regarded as a half-legendary figure, today she lives again, patron saint of her nation's armies, divine d'Alsace," illustrated by Hansi. (Floury.)*

symbol of love and sacrifice, not only in France but throughout Christendom. England, her old enemy, has set up statues of her. America has done the same, and holds her in its heart."

"Across the night of history's blackest pages
One name is scrolled as by a shaft of sun:
Joan of Arc, the glory of the ages,
Who battled hate, and lost—and, 'losing, won.'"¹

BANGS, MARY B.

JEANNE D'ARC, THE MAID OF FRANCE Houghton $2.25

A dramatic, truthful, and well-written life.

BOUTET DE MONVEL, L. M.

JEANNE D'ARC, with French text Plon $4.00

"The France of the fifteenth century in palace and cottage, in camp and cathedral, the dress of the people, the heraldic trappings, the stately ceremonials, the walled cities and methods of warfare"—all are here in what is one of the finest picture books we have.

The same Century $4.00

JOAN OF ARC McKay $1.50

A complete translation into English accompanied by some of the pictures made in America "after" the originals.

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (Mark Twain)

THE PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF JOAN OF ARC (a)

Harper $2.75

The full title reads Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc by the Sieur Louis de Conte (her page and secretary); freely translated out of the ancient French into modern English from the original unpublished manuscript in the national archives of France, by Jean François Alden. Mark Twain first published this book under the name Jean Alden so that his reputation as a humorist should not come between his readers and his serious presentation of the Maid of France. He has told the story as it might have been narrated by Louis de Conte. This was the author's favorite book.

¹Albert Bigelow Paine, The Girl in White Armor, Macmillan

LANG, ANDREW

THE STORY OF JOAN OF ARC (Children's Heroes Series)

Dutton $1.00

"Joan of Arc was perhaps the most wonderful person who ever lived in the world. The story of her life is so strange that we could scarcely believe it to be true if all that happened to her had not been told by people in a court of law and written down by her deadly enemies while she was still alive." (The Author.)

PAINÉ, ALBERT BIGELOW

THE GIRL IN WHITE ARMOR: The True Story of Joan of Arc

Macmillan $2.50

Mr. Paine has said of this book: "Joan's story as here set down is history. Every episode and detail of it is from the sworn testimony taken at her two trials, and from authentic contemporary documents. Nothing is invented. From the first to the last page it is all true." After many years of study of Joan's life, much time spent in the region of France her feet touched, and the writing of a two-volume life, the author has succeeded in writing what seems to us the finest short introductory life of Joan of Arc for the boy or girl of ten or eleven on. The Maid herself lives in the pages.

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD

SAINT JOAN (a)

Brentano $2.50

A fine, moving, and rational presentation of Joan, the Maid of Orleans, with supernatural elements omitted because not believed.

WILMOT-BUXTON, ETHEL M.

LANSING, MARION

MAGIC GOLD: A Story of the Time of Roger Bacon

Little $2.00

Pictures by Frank McIntosh. A good picture of life on a medieval barony and a story that centers about the desire to solve the secret of the philosopher's stone that will turn everything into gold. Roger Bacon, the great scientist of the Middle Ages, comes into the story.

Ginn $.64

Stories of heroes of chivalry from King Arthur to Chevalier Bayard, showing the meaning of Knighthood, its customs and responsibilities.

LOWNSBERY, ELOISE

THE BOY KNIGHT OF REIMS

Houghton $2.50

Jean d'Orbais, descendant and namesake of the great master builder who designed the Cathedral of Reims, lives in the shadow of the cathedral, and his dreams center around the glory and beauty of its architecture. In and out of the story of Jean is woven a vivid picture of Reims of the Fifteenth Century, with its craftsmen making wonderful things in gold and silver, in rich embroideries, in stained glass, and in carvings in wood and stone. Joan of Arc comes into the story.

From "Magic Gold," illustrated by Frank McIntosh. (Little, Brown & Co.)

MACGREGOR, MARY

STORIES OF THE VIKINGS (Told to the Children Series)

Dutton $1.00

"VIK-ings was the name given to those wild sea-rovers from Norway, Sweden and Denmark, because they sought shelter with their boats in one or another of the numerous viks or bays along their coasts." (MARY MACGREGOR.)

Marco Polo, The Venetian Traveler (About 1254-1324)

BROOKS, NOAH

THE STORY OF MARCO POLO¹

Century $1.75

POWER, EILEEN

MEDIEVAL PEOPLE

Houghton $2.00

Illustrated. Map. A series of sketches based on original documents, reconstructing certain medieval characters, a Frankish peasant in the time of Charlemagne, a Venetian traveler of the Thirteenth Century, Chaucer's Prioress, a Paris housewife in the Fourteenth Century, a Merchant of the Staple in the Fifteenth Century, and an Essex clothier in the days of Henry VII.

PYLE, HOWARD

MEN OF IRON

Harper $2.00

Illustrated by the author. Lords who benefited greatly under King Richard II were degraded to their former titles and estates by Henry IV. A group plotted to kill the king and his followers during a great tournament. The plot failed and the conspirators were all captured and executed. Their friends, in some cases men who had had no part in the plot, were ruined too. Such was the situation of the boy hero's father in this story.

OTTO OF THE SILVER HAND

Scribner $2.50

"A tale of the olden days of romance, of robber barons and of deadly feuds." The scene is medieval Germany.

WHITNEY, ELINOR

TOD OF THE FENS

Macmillan $2.25

Illustrated by Warwick Goble. This story is laid in old Boston, England, at the beginning of the Fifteenth Century, when Henry V as "Prince Hal" often traveled in other guise, and when certain able Englishmen were wondering why English wool should not be carried in English ships and the "Merchant Adventurers" were beginning. The book is an exciting story of mystery and romance as well as a complete and lively picture of St. Botolph's Town of that time.

YONGE, CHARLOTTE MARY

THE DOVE IN THE EAGLE'S NEST (Macmillan's Children's Classics)

Macmillan $1.75

Illustrated in color and black and white by Marguerite de Angeli. The heroine is brought up in the cultivated atmosphere of a free German city of the Fifteenth Century, but the Schloss Adlerstein becomes the wild mountain home of her family of robber barons. Her twin brothers, Barons Ebbo and Friedel, resolve not to be treacherous robber outlaws.

THE PRINCE AND THE PAGE (Children's Classics)

Macmillan $1.75

Illustrated by Marguerite de Angeli. A story of the last Crusade, telling how a faithful page, one of the proscribed family of Montfort, gave his life for Prince Edward. Pretty Bessie, the daughter of Blind Hal, the beggar of Bethnal Green, plays an important part in the story.

BEYOND THE GATES OF HERCULES

*From Quennell's "History of Everyday Things in England."
(Charles Scribner's Sons.)*

What is the force that makes these chaps leave England, home and beauty?
Is it their health? The Law perhaps?
or just a sense of duty?
or don't you think that it may be their noble curiosity?

They steer beyond the evening-star, and challenge their own dream to overtake the things that are behind the things that seem, and do not care if death should be the price of curiosity.

But still for heroes there are seas beyond the Gates of Hercules!¹

WORLD EXPLORATION AND DISCOVERY²

ONE of our greatest thrills as a bookseller came one day when we were still in the small tucked-away second-floor shop, and a fifteen-year-old girl came in to see what books we had on explorations, "not children's books." She was building for herself a special collection of books on this subject, and was always on the watch for books she had not seen. Any boy or girl truly interested in these books will want to get as close to the explorers as possible by reading their own books. For that reason many such books are included in this section.

*BRIDGES, T. C.*THE YOUNG FOLKS' BOOK OF DISCOVERY Little $2.00

Illustrated in color and black and white by Stephen Reid and others. In ancient times they had no charts, no compasses. Their ships were driven by oars and could only sail before the wind. There were no lighthouses and no way of knowing where were treacherous rocks and reefs. The people believed, too, in terrible sea monsters that swallowed ships, and in evil spirits of every kind that haunted ships, and in savage peoples on distant shores. But in spite of all these things, the Phœnicians more than 3000 years ago not only sailed up and down the Mediterranean, but reached the Black Sea, explored the Red Sea, and acted as pilots on King Solomon's ships in their three-year voyages to India. The book covers great explorers and travelers from Leif Ericsson down to Scott, Amundsen, and Peary.

*BUCHAN, JOHN*THE LAST SECRETS (a) Houghton $2.50

A record of some of the main achievements of the first two decades of the Twentieth Century, during which many of the great geographical riddles of the world have been solved—the North and South Poles, Mt. Everest, Mt. McKinley, Lhasa, and the Holy Cities of Islam.

*LANSING, MARION*GREAT MOMENTS IN EXPLORATION Doubleday $2.50

Illustrated with photographs. "Exploration has not been limited in its enterprises to geographical discovery. Men have delved into the earth for hidden treasures and forgotten cities; they have searched the floor of the ocean to find its secrets." The book presents forty episodes from the lives of famous explorers.

*SYNGE, MARGARET BERTHA*THE BOOK OF DISCOVERY Putnam $5.00

Fascinating account of the world's famous explorers including the early travelers to the East, the discovery of America, explorations in Africa and Australia and Arctic and Antarctic voyages. Contains reproductions of primitive maps and "Joyous charts" of the Middle Ages, and curious illustrations from old woodcuts, drawings, and miniatures.

EXPLORER-NAVIGATORS

"It is the seamen, above all others, who have enlarged the outlook of the world. It has been suggested that history falls into four periods. The first was a land-and-river period, the early days of Babylonia and Egypt, when the only travel was over the roads and rivers. The second came with Cretans and Phœnicians, as man turned his prow toward the open sea and brought the entire Mediterranean shoreland up over the horizon. But this was a midland sea, as its name exactly states; its shore made a ring of lands within which was all that man knew or cared about. Within this circuit of lands Greece and Rome lived and died. The third period began with the rise of Atlantic seamen, Norsemen, English and Dutch, Portuguese, Spanish and Genoese, and reached its great moment in the discovery of America. The world has ever since been centred about the Atlantic Ocean, which has slowly been converted into another midland sea. (New York and London are much nearer to-day than were ever Thebes and Troy.) The interesting suggestion follows that the world may be to-day passing into a fourth stage in which the Pacific Ocean will be the centre of the world. Each of these great widenings of man's horizon was the work of sailors, the one race of men whose adventure has never halted."¹

BASSETT, SARA WARE

THE STORY OF VASCO DA GAMA

Penn $1.50

A simple account of the Portuguese explorer (1460-1524) whom King Emmanuel commissioned to discover a sea passage to the Indies. He was the first to sail around the Cape of Good Hope to India, reaching Calcutta in 1498.

COLUMBUS, CHRISTOPHER¹

THE JOURNAL OF FIRST VOYAGE TO AMERICA (a)

A. & C. Boni $3.50

¹See also p. 517, United States History.

Introduction by Van Wyck Brooks. "The so-called Journal of Columbus is a simple sailor's record. The narrative is an abstract of the original journal (made by the Admiral's companion Las Casas). "It has the charm of all primitive narratives and it narrates one of the great adventures of history." (Introduction.)

IRVING, WASHINGTON

THE LIFE AND VOYAGES OF CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS (5 vols.)

Putnam $8.75

Irving went to Madrid and had access to several private collections of papers, and to the documents in the Royal Library and the library of the Jesuits' College of San Isidro.

Captain James Cook (1728-1779)

From a cabin boy, Captain Cook came to be Commander of the frigate Mercury, one of a squadron sent to aid General Wolfe in the Siege of Quebec. He studied mathematics and astronomy steadily, and because of his knowledge and skill was sent to explore the Pacific. He was gone three years, sailed round the world, and made many discoveries. He made other voyages to the Pacific and discovered the Hawaiian (originally called the Sandwich) Islands where he was killed.

Dutton $1.00

Sir Francis Drake (1540-1596)

BENSON, EDWARD FREDERICK

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE (The Golden Hind Series) (a)

Harper $4.00

Illustrated. "A delightful biography which gives full value to the glamour and romance of Drake's picturesque career from boyhood to his death. His piratical ventures, the part he played in the destruction of the Spanish Armada and his influence in extending English sea power are stressed. He is painted as the idol of the people, a hot tempered, profane, big-hearted man who did not know what fear meant." (A. L. A. Booklist.)

ROGERS, CAMERON

DRAKE'S QUEST

Doubleday $2.50

Illustrated by James Daugherty. A dramatic telling of the life of England's greatest seaman which young people will like on account of the richness of its incident of daring and courage.

Richard Hakluyt (1553-1616)

Hakluyt was a student, lecturer, and writer, with a special interest in geography. He made no voyages himself, but he wrote accounts of 220 voyages of English navigation.

CHARLES J. FINGER

HEROES FROM HAKLUYT

Holt $4.00

Decorated with woodcuts by Paul Honoré. The editor introduces his selections from Hakluyt interestingly. The book is large and well printed.

IRVING, LAURENCE, Editor

A SELECTION OF THE PRINCIPAL VOYAGES, TRAF-FIQUES AND DISCOVERIES OF THE ENGLISH
NATION FROM HAKLUYT

Knopf $5.00

Eight voyages "which for breathless interest and inspiring heroism rival the most lurid fiction." The spelling and form of the old narratives have been retained. In unusually attractive format. Illustrated by woodcuts (tipped in) and drawings in black and white by H. B. Irving, which beautifully interpret the atmosphere and romance of these old tales.

Henry Hudson (?-1611)

POWYS, LLEWELYN

HENRY HUDSON (Golden Hind Series) (a) Harper $4.00

Illustrated. "An exact and faithful report of Hudson's adventures. He made four voyages, two in search of the North-East and two in search of the North-West passage. During his last voyage his crew mutinied and set him adrift with a few others of the crew in a small boat in which he was last seen sailing to the southward. . . . Mr. Powys gives a translation of a document which has lately been found in the Public Record Office. The years of Hudson's voyages were 1607-1611." (London Times Literary Supplement, April 26, 1928.)

Fernando Magellan

A Portuguese explorer, born in Oporto about 1470. He was killed on one of the Philippine Islands by the natives in 1521.

HILDEBRAND, ARTHUR STURGES

MAGELLAN (a) Harcourt $2.75

Magellan was the first to sail round the world. This biography brings fresh interest to the story of this adventure. It begins with Magellan as a page to the Queen at Lisbon and ends with his death in the Far East. He was the first European to cross the Pacific.

Sir Walter Raleigh (1552-1618)

WALDMAN, MILTON

SIR WALTER RALEIGH (Golden Hind Series) (a)

Harper $4.00

"How Raleigh campaigned in the Netherlands, went to Newfoundland with Gilbert, took active part in 1580 against the Irish rebels, sailed to America, and took first steps to the foundation of Virginia, helped repulse the Armada, engaged in a Panama expedition, annoyed Queen Elizabeth because of his love affair with her maid of honor who became his wife; suffered imprisonment in the Tower; sailed to Guiana and wrote an account of the country; played a great game at Cadiz, incurred the dislike of James I, wrote a history of the world, again went to Guiana, and at last

"Of his boyhood, his exploits in Ireland, his search for new land and gold, and his conquests of the Spaniards."

Captain John Smith

CHATTERTON, E. KEBLE

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH (Golden Hind Series) (a) Harper $4.00

A new and interesting life of the founder of Virginia who was born in Lincolnshire in 1579. He was a noted soldier and was captured and imprisoned by the Turks at one time, and thereby hangs an exciting tale. He escaped from the Turks and sailed to America in 1606 and founded Jamestown, Virginia, in 1607. He did much exploring in the interior, and in 1614 explored the New England Coast. He died in London in 1631.

A simple and extremely interesting account of the great African explorer for younger boys and girls.

HUGHES, THOMAS

DAVID LIVINGSTONE (English Men of Action) (a)
 Macmillan $1.40

A brief, popular sketch with extracts from Livingstone's journals.

David Livingstone was a Scotch traveler and author born near Glasgow, March 19, 1813. As a boy he worked in the cotton mills but spent his evenings in study, and as a young man fitted himself to be a foreign missionary. He went out to Africa in 1840 and spent nine years studying the language and customs of the people and founding schools. In 1849 he began his first exploring journeys, and he was the first European to visit Lake Ngami. He continued his explorations and was lost from 1864 to 1871, when Henry M. Stanley found him. It is unfortunate that both of Sir Henry Stanley's books How I Found Livingstone and In Darkest Africa are now out of print. Stanley was sent out by the New York Herald in 1869 to look for Livingstone, and found him at Ujiji on Lake Tanganyika, May 10, 1871. Stanley did considerable exploring around Lake Victoria Nyanza and was the first white man to sail down the Congo. Boys and girls who are interested can find these books in most public libraries.

SHIPS AND THE SEA

"When Richard Henry Dana and Herman Melville wrote," says Russell, "the commercial sailor of Great Britain and the United States was without representation in literature. . . . Dana and Melville were Americans. They were the first to lift the hatch and show the world what passes in a ship's forecabin; how men live down in that gloomy cave, how and what they eat, and where they sleep; what pleasures they take, what their sorrows and wrongs are; how they are used when they quit their black sea-parlours in response to the boatswain's silver summons to work on deck by day and by night. With these secrets of the deep Dana and Melville created a new world, not by the discovery but by the interpretation of it. They gave us a full view of the life led by tens of thousands of men whose very existence, till these wizards arose, had been vague to the general land intelligence as the shadows of clouds moving under the brightness of the stars."¹

CLARK, ARTHUR H.

THE CLIPPER SHIP ERA (1843-1869) (a)

Putnam $3.50

An epitome of famous American and British clipper ships, their owners, builders, commanders, and crews. Thirty-nine illustrations.

"The Clipper Ship Era began in 1843 as a result of the growing demand for a more rapid delivery of tea from China; continued under the stimulating influence of the discovery of gold in California and Australia in 1848 and 1851, and ended with the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869. . . .

"Many of the clipper ships mentioned in this book, both American and British, were well known to me; some of the most celebrated of the American Clippers were built near my early home in Boston, and as a boy I saw a number of them constructed and launched; later I sailed as an officer in one of the most famous of them, and as a young sea-captain knew many of the men who commanded them."

COLCORD, JOANNA CARVER, Compiler

ROLL AND GO: Songs of American Sailormen Bobbs $5.00

Illustrations show types of American wooden-built, deep-water ships of the last century. The collector of these "work songs of the sea" was "born at sea. . . . She remembers the tunes as she used to hear them on ship-board, as they were actually sung by sailors in the American merchant marine of her day." (Introduction.)

The chanties number eighty-eight and are arranged by kind: "Short-Dray," "Halyard," "Windlass or Capstan," and "Fore-castle," and the music is given.

MEIGS, CORNELIA

RAIN ON THE ROOF Macmillan $2.00

Laid in a seaport town, this story is full of the flavor of ships, the sea, and past days.

CLEARING WEATHER Little $2.00

While we must recommend Rain on the Roof for girls, we will recommend Clearing Weather to anyone with an interest in ships. The story of young Nicholas Drury's struggle to maintain his uncle's shipyard in a Massachusetts town, in the difficult years following the Revolution, and of the building of the beautiful ship Jocasta. Then there is the thrilling story of the Jocasta's voyage, with "clearing weather" at last for the ship, for Nicholas, and for Branscombe. The book reminds one of Conrad's Youth in its pictures of courageous struggle, long sustained. The story marches grandly and is a distinguished piece of work.

Cornelia Meigs' great-grandfather was Commodore John Rodgers, and the Commodore has many descendants still following the sea, but a great-granddaughter may follow the sea as well as a great-grandson, and in other ways than by sailing upon it.

As a little girl Cornelia Meigs lived by a great blue river, and she did not see the ocean until she was nine years old. Long before that she played that the pine trees were rocking masts, and in their branches pretended she was a sailor in a crow's nest, keeping watch for pirate sail. While her sisters

*From "Clearing Weather," illustrated by Frank Dobias.
(Little, Brown & Co.)*

played at games out of Robin Hood she made long games of her own that had to do with ships.

"What she had heard and read of the voyages of the first John Rodgers turned her to the study of the ships in which he sailed, and the vessels he fought and captured. She has spent long hours of intense pleasure in seeking out and identifying the intricacies of ketches, feluccas, and vessels 'poleacre rigged,' of brigs and barques and barquentines, of all the grace and beauty of old ship building."

MELVILLE, HERMAN (1819-1891)

REDBURN (a)

A. & C. Boni $2.00

MOBY DICK (a)

Dodd $3.50

Illustrated by Mead Schaeffer.

The same

A. & C. Boni $2.00

Moby Dick is the name of a fierce white whale which Captain Ahab pursues in vengeful fury because the whale had bitten off his leg. The chase becomes in the story the symbol of the struggle between two opposing spiritual forces. This for grown-ups. For young people it is all the epic pursuit of the great whale, with a wealth of material on whales and the sea.

OMOO (a)

Dodd $3.50

TYPEE (a)

Dodd $3.50

Both books are illustrated by Mead Schaeffer, and are companion volumes to Moby Dick. They may be had in the fine library edition (A. & C. Boni, $2.00). Omoo and Typee are both stories of the Marquesas and are written out of Melville's own sojourn there. "Melville was the first competent literary artist to write about the South Seas. . . . In Typee, Melville undertook to show from first-hand observation the obvious fact that there are two sides both to civilization and to savagery. He was among the earliest of literary travellers to see in barbarians anything but queer folk."¹

It is only in this generation that Melville's greatness has been realized. To one familiar with his writing he comes to be linked with Walt Whitman. There is the same kind of grandeur about them both. We wish that Redburn might be the introduction of most boys and girls to Melville. In this book Melville described his first voyage. And first he tells of the books and maps he pored over as a boy which stirred his sea longings. "But that which perhaps more than anything else converted my vague dreamings and longing into a definite purpose of seeking my fortune on the sea, was an old-fashioned glass ship, about eighteen inches long and of French manufacture." But the whole eventful first voyage of a boy of seventeen, and wonderful weeks at Liverpool while the ship was in dry dock and the boy explored England, lie between the beginning and the end.

If any older boys and girls come to have a curiosity about Herman Melville, they will satisfy it to a degree by reading

Houghton $3.50

Edited by Rex Clements. "Great days, great ships, and great the men who sailed them. Was ever any competition, short of battle, longer or more keenly sustained than the long sea race from Foochow to London Docks? What manner of men were they who withstood the constant strain of a hundred or more days of sea passage with courage enough to luff a cloud of canvas into the wind at the first ominous whistle of a tearing squall? Shewan knows, and reading the life of this quiet-spoken mariner, one can vision the iron heart that made it possible. Chiefly, I admire his restraint. No self obtrudes upon the reader, although the subject matter is autobiography."¹

MODERN TIMES

RISE OF THE EAST

CHINA

"By coincidence the three great dynasties of China corresponded roughly in time with three periods of European history. The Tang dynasty (618-907 A. D.) and the Dark Ages were roughly contemporaneous; the Sung dynasty (960-1279) matched the Middle Ages; the Mings (1358-1644), the Renaissance.

"But in the case of China, the first was unquestionably the greatest. While disorder was at its height in Europe the Chinese reached their most brilliant civilization. Under the Tang rulers, the empire was as successful in its wars as in its arts. Its boundaries were extended from the Caspian Sea to the Pacific. Some of the most beautiful of Chinese paintings, carvings and bronzes were produced, and Chinese poetry reached its highest point. The Sung dynasty showed less vitality, though the list of its poets is long and the landscape painting notable. It was interrupted by the Mongol invasion of Genghis Khan. . . . The period of the Mings showed a cultured eclecticism and a high level of craftsmanship rather than creative imagination. . . . More than a thousand years ago Chinese statesmanship, poetry and art reached their climax. . . . Here is one of the great peoples of the earth, and the Western mind should be slow to doubt its future, considering its enduring successes in the past."¹*

VAN BERGEN, ROBERT

THE STORY OF CHINA

American Book $.76

A good short elementary account of the country, the people, and their history.

Nothing will give boys and girls a vision of the fine civilization and arts of China in the different great dynasties as will visits to museums to see the Chinese pottery, porcelain, embroideries, and other works of art produced in each. Or where museum visits are not possible, to be given an opportunity to look at some of the very beautiful books with their exquisite plates in color.

THE MONGOLIAN CONQUESTS

"China had been periodically invaded from the north and west, and the thirteenth century brought the greatest of the conquerors to Peking. These were the Mongols, dwellers in and around the Gobi Desert. . . . They owed their extraordinary career of victory to the genius of several leaders—

¹Quoted text marked with asterisk is from Geoffrey Parsons, The Stream of History, Charles Scribner's Sons.

Genghis Khan (1162-1227) and his grandsons, of whom Kublai Khan was one.”*

Genghis Khan

“Genghis Khan” (his name is really a title that he assumed meaning “Great Ruler”) was “the mightiest of all the conquerors. He was a great cavalry general and a tolerant patron of learning and religion for all his barbarous treachery and bloody ways. At his death he was the master of the greatest empire ever subjected by one man; his conquests ran from the China Sea on the east to the Indus River on the south and the Dnieper on the west, an area many times the United States in extent. His armies had plundered and slaughtered far into Russia. There is no more picturesque figure in history than this dweller in a tent who by sheer military genius made a small nomad people supreme across a continent.”*

“The Road to Cathay,” mentioned on page 444, has very interesting material on the movement of the Mongols or Tartars and their tent life. We have set down these different periods of history because our “road” map is incomplete without them, and also as a reminder to scholars that we have almost no material for boys and girls on them.

INDIA

“Various waves of barbarian nomads swept into India in the early centuries of the Christian era precisely as Attila rode across Europe. . . . The remains of Hellenic civilization in India were overwhelmed by these wild riders. Of them the White Huns . . . who arrived in the sixth century, deserve separate mention for their incredible cruelty. . . .

“Seven centuries of conquest of a far different type, by Mohammedan peoples, from 1000 to 1750, followed. Thereafter came European subjection which has continued down to the present. . . . Among the adventurous rulers of the Tatar or Mogul period, Akbar (1542-1605) ranks as a great and liberal monarch. This contemporary of Queen Elizabeth brought a magnificent age to India. . . . India entered modern times an incoherent mass of petty states and antagonistic races, less able than even China to resist conquest, and possessing only faint traces of that strong sense of unity which underlay Chinese civilization.

"Already the overseas adventurers from Europe were opening up the Far East to Western commerce. First came the Portuguese, then Dutch, Danes, Spaniards, French and British."*

ROE, SIR THOMAS

THE EMBASSY OF SIR THOMAS ROE TO INDIA,

1615-1619 (a)

Oxford $7.00

As narrated in his journal and correspondence. Edited by Sir William Foster. In Eileen Power's book Boys and Girls of History there is a chapter written as though by the lad who went out from England as page to Sir Thomas Roe. Few boys and girls will have the time and interest to read this book of almost five hundred pages on india paper. But it is an interesting source book, revealing as it does the methods of trade and commerce—the Portuguese were claiming a monopoly of trade by sea between Europe and the East Indies—and life at the court of the Great Mogul.

STEEL, FLORA ANNIE

THE ADVENTURES OF AKBAR

Stokes $2.00

Akbar was a little Indian prince who became Emperor in the Sixteenth Century. Most of the other characters in the book really lived, and the story gives a good picture of life in the India of the 1500's.

exploits of Sivaji the Maratha hero, the fall of the Mongol empire, the invasion of Nadir Shah, the story of Clive, the struggle between the French and the English for dominance in India, the mutiny of 1857-1858, and the passing of the East India Company.

THE ISLANDS OF THE PACIFIC

VAN BERGEN, ROBERT

THE STORY OF JAPAN American Book $.76

A brief interesting account of the country to date.

THE AMERICAS BEFORE 1492

"In historic times Chinese junks blown out to sea have frequently been carried across the Pacific to America. It is clear that Prehistoric Asiatic man spread slowly across the Pacific from island to island, and it is a likely hypothesis that he ultimately reached the South American coast. In addition there was formerly a land bridge where now is Behring Strait, and there is strong evidence that the first Americans came from Asia by this route at a very early date. Therefore, good reason exists for regarding America (before 1492) as the real Orient of the World.*

"The great variety of physical type of the American Indian suggests a long habitation in the widely various climates of the two continents [Asia and America] . . . *

"The North American Indian was largely in the Old Stone Age, as his chipped arrow-heads testify. Yet in Peru, in Mexico, and in Central America, especially in the Yucatan peninsula, a civilization was achieved which is to be ranked with that of Egypt, though following it in point of time by several thousand years. . . .”*

Books on the History of the American Indian will be presented as a part of the history of the United States. As introduction to knowledge of these ancient civilizations of the Americas—Peruvian, Mayan, Aztec—we wish it might be possible for boys and girls to see such impressive books of pictures as the following:

EUROPE

"It is sometimes asserted that printing freed the human spirit by making it possible for every man to do his own thinking. . . . It seems a highly optimistic view of the actual results. Faith in the printed word has in many minds succeeded faith in individual authority. Free minds are still rare, as the story of modern times will make clear. . . . Faith in the letter of the classics succeeded fresh and original thought. . . .

"Freedom of thought burned brightly in Greece without printing to aid. It was extinguished in the Dark Ages, relit during the Renaissance, and again in the last two centuries. It is to be thought of as a condition rarely achieved by many in any period, and maintained in modern times by courage and imagination rather than by any machine."¹

DON ORSINO (a)

CORLEONE: A Sicilian Story Macmillan each $1.75

Four novels—"the annals of a princely house" in Rome in the years from 1865 to 1900—in which the author has presented much Roman social and political history. He was American Ambassador to Italy and knew Italian life.

ELIOT, GEORGE

ROMOLA (2 vols.) (a)

Blackwood $5.00

Illustrated with fine photographs.

The same (Riverside Edition) (2 vols.) Houghton $5.00

The scene of the story is Florence at the time of Lorenzo de' Medici (1492-1509). Savonarola comes into the story. The heroine is a young woman of great spiritual and intellectual strength. Her counterpart is Tito Melema, whose retribution for a grievous wrong is a main theme of the story.

Garibaldi

In the early part of the Nineteenth Century Italian leaders were trying to unite their various states into a single country and free the land from foreign control. Mazzini, the poet and man of letters, organized an association known as "Young Italy" to work for Italian unity. Garibaldi (born at Nice, July 4, 1807) was a follower of Mazzini. He succeeded in winning Sicily and Naples to Italy and strove to annex Rome, but was not successful. However, through Garibaldi and his "Thousand," southern Italy became a part of Italy under Victor Emmanuel as its first king (February, 1861) and after the Franco-Prussian War the unification of Italy was completed. In September, 1870, an Italian army occupied Rome and the Romans voted by a great majority to join the kingdom of Italy in spite of the opposition of Pope Pius IX. Garibaldi in his red shirt embodied the enthusiasm and patriotism of his countrymen.

SEDGWICK, HENRY DWIGHT

A SHORT HISTORY OF ITALY (a) Houghton $3.00

"A popular and attractively written history emphasizing matters of common interest to the states, such as the conflict between the empire and the papacy, the renaissance, and unification."

TREVELYAN, GEORGE MACAULAY

GARIBALDI'S DEFENCE OF THE ROMAN REPUBLIC

(a) Longmans $2.50

The detailed account of the defense and retreat of 1849 is preceded by a delightful and vivid sketch of Garibaldi's life before 1849, his years in South America, his rides over the pampas on wild ponies, his meeting with Anita and their romantic love affair and marriage. This book is followed by Garibaldi and the Thousand, full of the fiery vigor of Italian patriotism and one of "the most romantic episodes in Nineteenth Century history." The last volume, Garibaldi and the Making of Italy, describes the events of June to November, 1860, and gives Garibaldi's history to his death in 1882.

We need a well-written history of Italy for young people and also a history of Germany. Before the war there was Henrietta Marshall's History of Germany, illustrated by A. C. Michael and published by Hodder & Stoughton. That has been out of print now for some time, as has also Florence Aston's Stories from German History (Crowell).

FRANCE

ADAMS, KATHARINE

RED CAPS AND LILIES

Nelson $2.50

Green limp leather. India paper.

The adventures of three guardsmen and their Gascon comrade D'Artagnan in the years 1626-1628. The four are often concerned with affairs of state and the book is filled with court life, political intrigue, fighting and duelling. With the two sequels listed below a rather gorgeous chronicle of the years 1626-1671 is presented, with fairly truthful pictures of historic persons. In the first book the feud between Richelieu and Anne of Austria is an important part of the plot.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER (International Classics)

More adventures of the gallant four against the background of Anne of Austria's regency, the insurrection of the Fronde, and the execution of Charles I of England.

THE VICOMTE DE BRAGELONNE; OR TEN YEARS

LATER (New Century Library) Nelson $2.50

Limp leather. India paper.

The same (Handy Library Edition) (4 vols.) Little $7.00

The closing years in the lives of the four musketeers at the time of Mazarin's ministry and the early days of the Grand Monarque.

Gives a very complete picture of court life and state affairs and the great persons concerned. Mlle. de la Vallière, Madame de Montespan, Fouquet and Colbert, the Man in the Iron Mask, and many others appear among the characters. "Dumas obtained much of the material for this trilogy from a true memoir now translated into English—Memoirs of Monsieur D'Artagnan, Captain Lieutenant of the First Company of the King's Musketeers."¹

The above are the Dumas novels most read by boys and girls, but some will perhaps like to read of an earlier period of French history in the Valois Romances covering the years 1572 to 1585. Henry of Navarre is the hero of this trilogy: Marguerite of Valois, La Dame de Monsoreau, and The Forty-Five.

DURUY, VICTOR

THE HISTORY OF FRANCE (a) Crowell $3.50

Translated by M. W. Cary. New edition revised and continued to 1919 by M. S. C. Smith. "One of the best summaries of French history, by a distinguished French historian. Prepared especially for students, it will be found entertaining and instructive by the general reader."

MOLESWORTH, MRS. MARY LOUISA

EDMÉE: A Story of the French Revolution

Macmillan $1.80*Napoleon*

"The French Revolution began in 1789 and lasted ten years, till Napoleon seized the reins and ended the rule of the people in a dictatorship.

"In November, 1799, Napoleon Bonaparte (1769-1821), a young general of Italian ancestry, a Corsican by birth and a Frenchman by the chance of Corsica's annexation a year before his birth, returned from campaigns in Egypt and Syria, executed a military coup d'état, threw out the legislators at the point of the bayonet, and established himself as the virtual sovereign of France under the form of a consulate. There can be no question that the arrival of Bonaparte was generally welcomed as a deliverance from the blunders of the new democratic rule.

"From 1799, for fifteen years, Napoleon was the despot of France, a threat to all Europe, and the remoulder of much of it. No other political leader, not even Alexander the Great, ever bestrode his time so completely. He is the complete expression of the great man theory of history. . . . From the start his colossal egotism spurred him from one conquest to another. But his dreams of power became more grandiose with the passage of the years, less realizable, more obviously doomed to end in disaster. His military genius, once swift, flexible, and sure, began to overreach itself, to attempt the impossible and apply old formulas to changed conditions. Even his physical appearance changed; from a lean officer, born to command, he became a pompous potentate, seeking to impress. It is easy to admire the vast energy, the complete originality, and the real services of the young Napoleon, become at thirty the master of his country. It is impossible not to be disgusted by the overweening ambitions of the emperor in his last years of arrogance and tyranny. In the beginning he reorganized France, in the rôle of a ruthless but benevolent dictator, and it may be fairly said that this one man put into effect many of the ideals of the Revolution which an inexperienced and incompetent democracy had fumbled."*

In his History in Fiction, Mr. Baker describes this book as "a huge national Saga, bodying forth the fearless spirit of adventure that sent Drake, Raleigh, Hawkins, Grenville, and their compeers to wreck the world empire of Spain in East and West. A passionate narrative of high achievements, culminating in the story of the Armada. Those famous chiefs come on the stage in person; but the principal characters are fictitious, young adventurers from Devon who sail on a fanciful quest to the Spanish Main. Though Kingsley had not been to America, he paints the American scenery magnificently. He idealizes his heroes, who are faultless young men from Cambridge instead of the fierce lawless characters depicted by Elizabethan playwrights. The prose-epic of muscular Christianity."

SCOTLAND

BROSTER, D. K.

THE FLIGHT OF THE HERON

Heinemann $1.50

A splendid story of the Jacobites before and after the Duke of Cumberland defeated the Jacobite forces at Culloden and the Pretender escaped to France. Through Ewan Cameron, the Jacobite hero and his relatives and friends the author explains the loyalty of those fine Highlanders to their lost cause. A sequel, The Gleam of the North (Heinemann, $1.50), shows the conditions of life for Jacobites after the battle of Culloden, while some of them still remained loyal to Prince Charles Edward. The plot to kidnap the Elector, George II, comes into the story, and the scene moves from the western Highlands to London.

DARK, SIDNEY

THE BOOK OF SCOTLAND

Doubleday $2.50

MACLEOD, MARY

THE BOOK OF BALLAD STORIES

Stokes $2.50

With introduction by Edward Dowden. Many pictures. The stories of patient Griselda and of pretty Bessie, the blind beggar's daughter of Bethnal Green; of Robin Hood and his merry men; of the heir of Linn, the jolly harper, and Sir Cauline, and many another romantic tale.

MARSHALL, H. E.

SCOTLAND'S STORY: A Child's History of Scotland

Stokes $5.00

With pictures by J. R. Skelton, John H. Hassall, and J. S. Crompton. Legendary as well as true history. "I wish you would write Scotland's Story for little children like me," a little girl friend said to the author, "and please put more battles in it than in Our Island Story. But you must not say that the Scots were defeated. I don't like it at all when you say 'The Scots and the Picts were driven back.'" That is why Scotland's Story was written, although it was necessary to say at times that 'the Scots were defeated,' but 'defeated' and 'conquered' are words with quite different meanings."

PORTER, JANE

SCOTTISH CHIEFS

Scribner $2.50

Illustrated by N. C. Wyeth. A romance founded on Barbour's poem, "The Brus," with its story of the heroes William Wallace and Robert Bruce. The author had real knowledge of the localities in her story, and the book is sometimes chosen by a book-loving girl on account of its length!

SCOTT, SIR WALTER

THE MONASTERY (Lang Edition)

Page $2.25

Sequel is The Abbot (Page, $2.25). "A romance of the border country in the unsettled period that followed the Scottish defeat at Pinkie. The Monastery of Rennaquhair is Melrose, and the story deals with the fallen fortunes of the house of Avenel, with whose fate is connected the mystic 'White Lady' of the tale."

JOHN AND BETTY'S SCOTCH HISTORY VISIT Lothrop $1.75

Travel history written by an enthusiastic traveler. Illustrated with photographs.

IRELAND

DOWSLEY, W. G.

TRAVELLING MEN

Stokes $2.00

The story of a friendship between the boy George Borrow and a lonely lad of Clonmel and their adventures when they fled the red-coats with Phil Carty. Phil Carty escaped from the Clonmel prison where he had been lodged by the English for having fought with Napoleon. It gives a clear picture of "the white teeth of poverty" in Ireland, the hardship and the persecution of the past, written as literature without any thought of influencing or persuading to a particular conclusion.

*JOYCE, P. W.*AN ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF IRELAND Longmans $2.50

"In writing this book I have generally followed the plan of weaving the narrative round important events and leading personages." It covers legendary and early history down to December, 1918. An older boy or girl could go on and read Stephen Gwynn's History of Ireland (Macmillan, $4.50) and Robert Lynd's Ireland a Nation (Dodd, $2.00). This last book contains chapters on Irish literature and unusually interesting sketches of Irish personalities. Maria Edgeworth's stories "Castle Rackrent," "The Absentee," and "Ormond" give true pictures of Irish life in the years 1782 through the first half of the Nineteenth Century.

*WILLIAMSON, MARGARET*JOHN AND BETTY'S IRISH HISTORY VISIT Lothrop $1.75

Interesting travel history. Illustrated with photographs.

From "The Rise of Civilization," illustrated by

THE UNITED STATES

"Among the movements that have scattered the human race far and wide over the surface of the earth, the English migration to America was in one fundamental respect unique. . . . Instead of natives submissive to servitude, instead of old civilizations ripe for conquest, the English found an immense continent of virgin soil and forest, sparsely settled by primitive peoples who chose death rather than bondage. To this continent the English colonial leaders, like the Greeks in expansion, transported their own people, their own economy, and the culture of the classes from which they sprang, reproducing in a large measure the civilization of the mother country. Unlike the Spaniards and other empire builders, the English succeeded in founding a new state, which became vast in extent, independent in government, and basically European in stock. That achievement is one of the capital facts of world history.¹"

BEARD, CHARLES A., and BAGLEY, WILLIAM C.

THE HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

Macmillan $1.60

Illustrated. A modern textbook carefully revised in 1923. "American history should not be presented as a shadowy record of mysterious personages, far removed from the life and labor of the masses. Such history does not interest or inform the child. Furthermore, it is not true history. America has been made by the labors, sacrifices, and ideals of millions of men, women, and children unhonored and unsung in the ordinary books. That is the essence of democracy." The chapters grouped cover: I-VI: Exploration, Settlement, and Colonization; VII-X: The Struggle for Independence and the Founding of the New Nation; XI-XIV: Political and Territorial Growth; XV-XX: Development of the Nation; XXI-XXIII: The Slavery Problem, the Civil War, Reconstruction and the New South; XXIV-XXX: Fifty Years of Progress; XXXI-XXXIV: Recent Events, Including the World War and Its Aftermath.

BEARD, CHARLES A., and BEARD, MARY

A HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

Macmillan $1.96

The authors complain that the three texts used in the teaching of history in primary, grammar, and high schools are usually simply expansions of the same book, giving fuller accounts of the same events and characters. They feel that "if the study of history cannot be made truly progressive like the study of mathematics, science and languages . . . then history deserves most of the sharp criticism it is receiving from teachers of science, civics and economics."

¹Charles and Mary Beard, The Rise of American Civilization, The Macmillan Co.

In this book the period of exploration has been omitted because it should have been covered in earlier years. The book begins with the Colonial period and is a topical rather than a narrative history, "setting forth the important aspects, problems, and movements of each period," bringing in the narrative rather by way of illustration.

Grown-ups who wish to know more of America's history will find this high school text a stimulating book to read.

ELSON, H. W.

A HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA (a)

Macmillan $3.00

Maps. "A very successful attempt to present in a single volume for the general reader an accurate and interesting narrative of the history of the United States from the earliest times to the present day." The 1923 revised edition contains chapters on the World War and America's part in it, the peace treaty, and the Arms Conference at Washington.

KRAPP, GEORGE PHILIP

AMERICA: THE GREAT ADVENTURE

Knopf $2.50

America's economic story is carried along with its political in seven books: I. The New World and the Old; II. Conquest and Settlement; III. The United States; IV. Expansion and Growth; V. Slavery and Secession; VI. The Fruits of the Earth; VII. History in the Making. Book II explains in a particularly illuminating way the part played in America by Spain, France, the Netherlands, and England. Book IV has chapters on Highways, Steamboats and Railroads, Cities and Citizens. Book VI not only relates the effect upon our history of our wealth in grains, cotton, gold and iron, but also the story of capital and labor as it has followed the development of this great natural wealth.

THE PAGEANT OF AMERICA: A Pictorial History of the United States (15 vols.) Yale University $67.50

A subscription set which aims to present all phases of American life and development. The text of each volume is by well-known scholars, and the numerous illustrations are from original sources.

The First Encounter. From "America," by Hendrik Willem Van Loon. (Horace Liveright & Co.)

School libraries may purchase separate volumes; otherwise they are only obtainable as a set. The volumes now ready are: I. Adventurers in the Wilderness; III. Toilers of Land and Sea; IV. March of Commerce; V. Epic of Industry; VI. Winning of Freedom; VIII. Builders of the Republic; XI. American Spirit in Letters; XII. American Spirit in Art; XIII. American Spirit in Architecture.

PYLE, HOWARD

HOWARD PYLE'S BOOK OF THE AMERICAN SPIRIT

Harper $5.00

The romance of American history; compiled by Merle Johnson, with narrative descriptive text from original sources. Edited by Frances J. Dowd. A collection of pictures in black and white dealing with American scenes and events. "Beyond the technical excellence which has caused artists to treasure proofs of these pictures, beyond the unquestioned accuracy of costumes and setting, is the spiritual something that makes pictures live. Pyle furnished a window into our American past as given by no word historian."

SINGMASTER, ELSIE

THE BOOK OF THE UNITED STATES

Doubleday $2.00

"The history of our country from the time of the early explorers to the present day, told in simple narrative style. A logical connection with geographic facts is made and the outstanding historical events that are graphically described are successfully related to past events. The suggested reading is incorporated in the text at the end of each chapter. Useful with a wide range of ages and simple enough for children of ten." No index.

VAN LOON, HENDRIK W.

AMERICA

Boni $5.00

Scholars may have a real case against Van Loon as a historian but they have not as yet stated it clearly and convincingly. We wish that we might hear from the authors of The Rise of American Civilization. One at least of their books refers students to Van Loon's Story of Mankind. Mr. Van Loon seems to have made the real contribution of helping young people to see history as of the whole world, and with perspective, rather than in disconnected units. Surely boys and girls will have a keener interest in and better understanding of history from the reading of Van Loon's America.

There are many parts of Samuel Eliot Morison's Oxford History of the United States (Oxford, $10) and the Beards' Rise of American Civilization (Macmillan, $12.50), which, if read aloud, would interest boys and girls in a wide range of age. Either book would be a fine present for a boy or girl of the late teens, and a rich family possession.

THE NORTH AMERICAN INDIANS: THEIR HISTORY, NATURE AND ART

"Perhaps you will ask how it happens that the Indians are now aliens and paupers in a land of which they were once the undisputed possessors? It is easy to see how it all came about, but it is a story by no means creditable to the white man. In the first place, the European sovereigns claimed their lands by right of discovery. Precisely as though you should claim another boy's sled because it was the first time you had seen it, and then should wrest it from him because you were the stronger. This is just what the white man did to the Indian: in plain language, robbed him.

"It is true that in some cases lands were bought of the natives, but the Indian had no idea of exclusive ownership in land, and supposed he was giving the white man only an equal privilege in it with himself." (FRANCIS DRAKE, Indian History for Young Folks.)

"The Indian is a true child of the forest and the desert. The wastes and solitudes of nature are his congenial home. His haughty mind is imbued with the spirit of the wilderness, and the light of civilization falls on him with a blighting power. His unruly pride and untamed freedom are in harmony with the lovely mountains, cataracts, and rivers among which he dwells; and primitive America, with her savage scenery and savage men, opens to the imagination a boundless world, unmatched in wild sublimity." (PARKMAN.)

"Our view of the creation allows a soul to all living creatures, and rocks and trees are revered as sharers in the divine. Beyond their simplicity and realism there is always the unexplained, the background of mystery and spirituality." (CHARLES A. EASTMAN (Ohiyesa).)

INDIAN STORIES

ALTSHELER, JOSEPH ALEXANDER

We are glad that Altsheler's name makes him stand first in this list of stories of the Indians, for his books are fine to read along with Drake's Indian History or as an introduction to Parkman. That is what he himself hoped for them. "If the boys like my books, tell them to read the history behind them—above all to read Parkman; he has been my great inspiration; Parkman has meant more to me than any other writer." So Miss Moore quotes him in The Three Owls.

THE HUNTERS OF THE HILLS

Appleton each $1.75

This is the first in the author's series of books on the French and Indian wars. The others in their proper sequence are: Shadow of the North; Rulers of the Lakes; Masters of the Peaks; Lords of the Wild; Sun of Quebec.¹

¹See also author's Opening of the West stories on p. 555.

BAYLISS, C. K.

BRILL, ETHEL C.

THE ISLAND OF YELLOW SANDS

Macrae $2.00

Two boys and an Indian search for a lost island, where treasure is said to be. The island is in Lake Superior and the time is that of Colonial days.

THE SECRET CACHE

Macrae $1.75

Another story of the Lake Superior region, relating the adventures of a Scotch Canadian boy and his Ojibway half brother in finding a cache of furs hidden by their father, who had been murdered, and bringing to justice the Indian who killed him.

CANFIELD, WILLIAM

THE WHITE SENECA

Dutton $2.00

The story of a white boy's life with an Indian tribe of the famous Senecas who were the foremost tribe of the five Iroquois nations.

CANNON, CORNELIA JAMES

THE PUEBLO BOY: A Story of Coronado's search for the Seven Cities of Cibola

Houghton $2.00

Tyami, the twelve-year-old Pueblo boy, who tends turkeys on the mesa of Acoma, warns neighboring tribes of the coming of the white men, meets Coronado on his expedition into New Mexico, and saves his people from attack by the explorers. The customs of the Pueblo Indians and the historical background are true.

CATHERWOOD, MRS. M. H.

THE STORY OF TONTY

McClurg $1.50

Romance of the French exploration under La Salle and his one-armed lieutenant, Tonty, from Montreal to the Mississippi.

THE ROMANCE OF DOLLARD

Century $1.75

Dollard, "the man of courageous heart," saves New France from the Iroquois in 1660.

COOPER, JAMES FENIMORE

"Cooper was a vigorous, ill-tempered man, rough and pompous in his personal bearing and in his literary style. He quarreled with his neighbors, took himself with top-lofty seriousness, and had not a spark of humor. Yet this stormy awkward man, who could not write two pages without doing violence to the English language, has held for a century the imagination of all readers of romance in all countries. He is known in Europe, even in Asia. And is there an American school-boy who has not read The Spy and The Last of the Mohicans?

"It is the story that counts. And Cooper was a story-teller. He had the gift of invention, and he had first-hand knowledge of life on land and at sea which gave him the stuff for thrilling tales of adventure. Central New York State, where he was born, is now a region of thriving cities; but it was in his day almost a wilderness; his red Indians and white pioneers, woodsmen, hunters, and trappers lived near the town that his father founded. He actually knew them or made them up from material which lay within the range of his observation."¹

Cooper wrote five novels—The Leather Stocking Tales—on the career of the great Leather Stocking pioneer, Natty Bumppo, hunter and Indian fighter, a character perhaps suggested by Daniel Boone. They are given in order below.

THE DEERSLAYER; OR THE FIRST WARPATH

THE PIONEERS; OR THE SOURCES OF THE SUSQUEHANNA: A Descriptive Tale (Mohawk Edition) Putnam $2.00

The same (Cabinet Edition) Page $2.25

The fourth of the Leather Stocking series. The hero is now a man of seventy in the region near Lake Otsego known to the author in boyhood. Hawkeye watches the westward push of civilization with deep regret.

THE PRAIRIE (Mohawk Edition) Putnam $2.00

The last novel in the series shows Natty Bumpo, an old man of eighty, making a new home for himself on the prairie, temporarily beyond the frontiers of civilization.

CROWNFIELD, GERTRUDE

ALISON BLAIR Dutton $2.00

Illustrated by George H. Richards. Alison Blair's father died on shipboard on the way from Kent, England, to the colonies. Alison had to travel alone, with all her papers of identification missing, to her uncle's house in the Mohawk Valley. It is the time of the French and Indian wars and Alison is befriended by Captain William Johnson.

GREGOR, ELMER RUSSELL

WHITE OTTER Appleton $1.75

This is the first in a series of stories about the Indians of the West. White Otter is a young war chief of the Sioux. In The War Trail ($1.75) White Otter tries to recover ponies taken by the Blackfeet. In Three Sioux Scouts the young war chief and two friends warn their allies, the Cheyennes, of a hostile attack. The Medicine Buffalo is the last of this series, and in this story White Otter ventures into enemy territory to hunt the white buffalo that has been keeping buffalo herds from their territory.

THE WAR EAGLE Appleton $1.75

This is the first story in the author's series based on the doings of the Indians in the Eastern part of the country. "Running Fox" is the character connecting them all. The second book has his name as its title, and the last two books are The White Wolf and Spotted Deer.

GRINNELL, GEORGE BIRD

JACK AMONG THE INDIANS; OR A BOY'S SUMMER ON
THE BUFFALO PLAINS Stokes $1.75

Stirring boyish adventures and true Indian background. Other books in the same series are: Jack in the Rockies; or a Boy's Adventures with a Pack Train; and Jack, the Young Ranchman; or a Boy's Adventures in the Rockies (each $1.75).

GARLAND, HAMLIN

Grace Moon in telling this story of a little Pueblo Indian girl, her daily life and adventures in the mesa, the canyon, and the desert, is writing of things she has known and seen, and her husband has aided and abetted her with his drawings. The story of Chi-Weé is continued in Chi-Weé and Loki (Doubleday, $2.00).

MOON, GRACE and CARL

LOST INDIAN MAGIC Stokes $2.00

An Indian mystery story in which a brave Indian boy overcomes dangers and difficulties to recover the magic jewel of his tribe.

SCHULTZ, JAMES WILLARD

Mr. Schultz went west in the '70's, joined a tribe of Blackfeet, and lived among them for years. His stories of Indian life and adventure are written from the experience of these years. Two favorite characters, Tom Fox and his Indian friend, Pitamakan, appear in the first five books listed below.

SINOPAH, THE INDIAN BOY

Houghton $1.75

With illustrations by E. B. Smith. True story of a Blackfoot Indian boy, the son of a chief.

*From "Chi-Weé," illustrated by Carl Moon.

THE QUEST OF THE FISH-DOG SKIN

Houghton $1.75

In their quest, Pitamakan and Tom Fox travel from the Missouri to the mouth of the Columbia River and meet with various Indian tribes, hostile or friendly.

ON THE WARPATH

Houghton $1.65

In this book Pitamakan outwits the Assiniboines and the Crows, enemies of the Blackfeet, and becomes the boy chief of the Small Robe band. The Medicine Lodge ceremony is described.

TRAIL OF THE SPANISH HORSE Houghton $1.75

Illustrated by George Varian. Tom Fox's search for his uncle's wonderful horse stolen by the Indians.

RISING WOLF, THE WHITE BLACKFOOT Houghton $1.75

This story of the famous frontiersman, Hugh Monroe, is continued in a later book, Red Crow's Brother ($1.75).

LONE BULL'S MISTAKE Houghton $1.75

A Blackfoot Indian, having broken one of the hunting laws, wanders as an outcast with his family until an opportunity comes to save his people from enemies.

RUNNING EAGLE, THE WARRIOR GIRL Houghton $1.75

Running Eagle is a member of the Blackfoot tribe, as able as a young brave, and is regarded as good luck by the tribe.

WILLIAM JACKSON, INDIAN SCOUT: His True Story

Told by His Friend Houghton $1.75

William Jackson served under General Custer.

Other good Indian stories by the same author are Dreadful River Cave, Gold Cache, In the Great Apache Forest, Rising Wolf, Seizer of Eagles, and Plumed Snake Medicine. (Houghton, each $1.75.)

SKINNER, CONSTANCE LINDSAY

BECKY LANDERS, FRONTIER WARRIOR Macmillan $2.00

Becky is a sturdy girl of fifteen, brave and resourceful. Of Becky Landers Miss Skinner writes: "I have endeavored to make a composite picture of communal and family life in Kentucky, with its forts, its cabins and furnishings, its sports and customs, as well as of the sterner life of its warriors and hunters; and to show the heroic part played by the women and the young girls of the frontier in the troublous years of the Revolution."

ROSELLE OF THE NORTH Macmillan $1.75

Illustrated by Frank Schoonover. A story of the Northwest when the two great fur-trading companies were striving for supremacy there—the Hudson's Bay Company and the Northwest Company.

SILENT SCOT: FRONTIER SCOUT Macmillan $1.75

Andy MacPhail was so called because he could steal so noiselessly through the forest. As a British captive he saw Washington's narrow escape from death at the battle of Brandywine, and later he fought beside John Sevier in the battle of King's Mountain.

Miss Skinner was born and lived through her childhood in a Hudson's Bay Post in Northern British Columbia. Her father was called by the Indians a name which meant "the white man who does not lie." From her father she learned much of the Indians and of forest lore. With this background it is natural that Miss Skinner should have made the North American Indians her life study. She wrote two volumes in The Chronicles of America series: Pioneers of the Old Southwest and Adventures of Oregon.

SMITH, ARTHUR D. H.

THE DOOM TRAIL

Brentano $1.90

An historical novel showing the part played by the Indians during the struggle for supremacy between the French and the English in the fur trade. Suggested here as interesting for older boys and girls.

SMITH, MARY P. WELLS

In her four books known as the Old Deerfield Series, Mrs. Smith is writing, as indeed she is in all her books, out of the traditions of her own family.

The Old Deerfield Series is concerned with the experiences of the captives taken at Deerfield on February 29, 1704, especially those of Stephen Williams, the minister's son, a boy of ten, who lived for more than a year alone with the Indians. The titles are:

THE BOY CAPTIVE OF OLD DEERFIELD Little each $1.75

THE BOY CAPTIVE IN CANADA

THE BOYS OF THE BORDER

THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF SEVENTY-SEVEN

This last volume is concerned with the Revolution and is listed separately and described on p. 553.

The Young Puritans Series tells of the adventurous lives of Colonial men, women, and children. Like the Old Deerfield books, they are written from experiences told to the author's relatives. When children ask her if these stories are true, Mrs. Smith answers, "The incidents are true, but I did not hear the conversations."

THE YOUNG PURITANS OF OLD HADLEY

Little each $1.75

THE YOUNG PURITANS IN KING PHILIP'S WAR

THE YOUNG PURITANS IN CAPTIVITY

THE YOUNG AND OLD PURITANS OF HATFIELD

The last book tells of the attack on Hatfield and Deerfield in 1677, the journey of the captives to Canada and their rescue.

STODDARD, WILLIAM O.

RED MUSTANG

Harper $.75

The red mustang, Dick, saves the life of Cal Evans, captured by Apache Indians.

LITTLE SMOKE

Appleton $1.75

The Custer massacre is the high incident in this story of life among the Sioux Indians.

SULLIVAN, ALAN

BROTHER BLACKFOOT

Century $1.75

John Hartop, Jr., longing for real adventure but bound for Seattle to spend the summer in his uncle's grocery store, drops off the train on the border of the Blackfoot Reservation and spends the summer with Chief Natokina and his grandson Apau.

WHITE, HERVEY

SNAKE GOLD

Macmillan $1.75

A story of the search for treasure in the mountains of Mexico. Old Miguel, the Indian, wore a malachite charm with the mark of the snake upon the gold, the sign of the pledge of ancient Aztec gods to protect the mine where gold is hidden. Decorations by Elizabeth MacKinstry.

EARLY DAYS IN THE COLONIES

HOME LIFE IN COLONIAL DAYS Macmillan $2.50
Illustrated.

FISKE, JOHN

THE BEGINNINGS OF NEW ENGLAND (a) Houghton $2.50

"Aims rather to indicate the principles at work in the history of New England down to 1689 than to supply historic details." (A. L. A. Catalog.)

OLD VIRGINIA AND HER NEIGHBORS (2 vols.) (a)
Houghton $5.00

The history of Virginia, Maryland, Carolina, and Georgia from the first settlements to 1753. Precedes The Beginnings of New England.

THE DUTCH AND QUAKER COLONIES IN AMERICA (a)
(2 vols.) Houghton $5.00

"A social and political history of New York and Pennsylvania, with some consideration of New Jersey and Delaware, in the 17th and 18th centuries." (A. L. A. Catalog.)

NEW FRANCE AND NEW ENGLAND (a) Houghton $2.50

"A work which covers the period from the discovery to 1789. It treats of Canadian development, Salem witchcraft, Norridgewock and Louisburg, and the French and Indian War." (A. L. A. Catalog.)

Someone will perhaps ask why we have put these volumes of John Fiske into this list for boys and girls, and we reply that young people of twelve years old on who have a real interest in the beginnings of this country will find the material they seek in Fiske as in Parkman. We know a nine-year-old girl who has been reading because she has wanted to do so book after book on Washington. She began with children's "Lives" but she has reached a point where she must have more information than they give. No book adventures are more thrilling than just this reading of book after book on the same subject or period, until one's tiny bubble of interest has become an ever-widening circle of background and knowledge.

From "Knickerbocker's History of New York," illustrated by James Daugherty.
(Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc.)

IRVING, WASHINGTON

THE KNICKERBOCKER HISTORY OF NEW YORK

Doubleday $3.00

Edited by Anne Carroll Moore, with many pictures by James Daugherty.

"My main object," the author wrote in his introduction, "had a bearing wide from the sober aim of history, but one which I trust will meet with some indulgence from poetic minds. It was to embody the traditions of our city in an amusing form; to illustrate its local humors, customs and peculiarities; to clothe home scenes and places and familiar names with those imaginative and whimsical associations so seldom met with in our new country, but which live like charms and spells about the cities of the Old World, binding the heart of the native inhabitant to his home."

James Daugherty made the pictures for this book before ever the new edition was planned—just because the book had "taken possession of him"; and this feeling went back to hearing the book read aloud by his mother when he was a boy of ten. When he had a large parcel of pictures he took them to Miss Moore at the New York Public Library, and that is the way the new edition happened. Families who read aloud and who love humor and wit, fun and merriment, all cleverly compounded, will have a grand time with this book.

JOHNSTON, MARY

PRISONERS OF HOPE

Houghton $2.00

The love story of an indentured servant and his Virginia master's daughter.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD

Houghton $2.00

Illustrated by Howard Pyle. A lovely girl, ward of the king, to escape marriage with the king's favorite, embarks on a ship going to Virginia, becomes the wife of a rough, sturdy settler, and many adventures follow.

KNIPE, EMILIE BENSON, and KNIPE, ALDEN

ARTHUR

A CAVALIER MAID

Macmillan $1.75

"A tale of how Mistress Georgiana Haseltyn is persuaded to leave her home to visit the Court, how she is taken prisoner, and sent to sail the seas against her will, how she comes to the Puritan colony, and how she is at last rescued by friends." (Children's Catalogue. St. Louis.)

A FLOWER OF FORTUNE

Century $1.75

Judith Van Tarl, the sixteen-year-old heroine, lives in old Dutch-English New York.

MAID OF OLD MANHATTAN

Macmillan $1.75

Another story of New Amsterdam with a mystery connected with Annetje, the heroine.

LAMPREY, LOUISE

DAYS OF THE COLONISTS (Great Days in American History Series)

Stokes $2.50

Much attention is given to the details of Colonial life in these stories of Indians, witches, pirates, pioneers, and traders from the time of the Jamestown colony to the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

LONGFELLOW, HENRY WADSWORTH

THE COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH Houghton $3.00

Illustrated by N. C. Wyeth.

MEADER, S. W.

BLACK BUCCANEER

Harcourt $1.75

A story of pirates operating along the Atlantic Coast in the early Eighteenth Century.

PERKINS, MRS. LUCY FITCH

THE COLONIAL TWINS OF VIRGINIA

Houghton $1.75

The twins in this story live on a great Virginia plantation one hundred years before the Revolution. The story is concerned with the exciting events of just a few days—their cousin's arrival from England, the discovery of treachery on the part of the overseer, and the defeat of the pirate's plan to steal the tobacco crop.

PRESCOTT, DELLA R.

A DAY IN A COLONIAL HOME

Jones $1.25

PYLE, HOWARD

THE STORY OF JACK BALLISTER'S FORTUNES

Century $2.00

"A faithful study of Colonial customs and conditions. Jack Ballister, the hero, is kidnapped and sold into the service of a Virginia planter whose daughter is captured by the famous pirate captain and finally rescued by the hero himself." (CHARLES D. ABBOTT, Howard Pyle: a Chronicle).

SINGMASTER, ELSIE

THE BOOK OF THE COLONIES

Doubleday $2.00

"The first chapter deals briefly with the first comers to America. The succeeding ones treat each of the thirteen colonies separately, presenting the facts in their history up to the Declaration of Independence in a clear, simple manner. Excellent suggestions for reading are incorporated in the final paragraphs of each chapter."

SUBLETTE, CLIFFORD M.

THE BRIGHT FACE OF DANGER

Little $2.00

A romantic story of pioneer life in Virginia in which are "related the adventures of Captain Francis Havenell, of Hooksett Hundred in Henrico County, Virginia, during the days of Bacon's rebellion (1676)." (Subtitle.)

THE SCARLET COCKEREL

Atlantic $2.00

A tale of the French Huguenots who founded a colony on the St. John's River in Florida, later destroyed by the Spaniards. This story was awarded the Charles Boardman Hawes Prize in 1925.

USHER, ROLAND G.

THE STORY OF THE PILGRIMS FOR CHILDREN

Macmillan $2.25

"The leading historical characters are made to stand out distinctly in the narrative, and the legendary ones are dropped.

"The basis for this account can be found at large in my Pilgrims and Their History. But it has seemed to me that events must be personalized for small children and that the story must be told them directly, with conversation and description, rather than by indirect discourse." (Foreword.) For older children than Pumphrey's Stories of the Pilgrims on p. 159.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION AND THE WAR FOR AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE

BOYD, JAMES

DRUMS

Scribner $2.50

Illustrated by N. C. Wyeth. The story of a North Carolinian lad of Scotch descent, James Fraser, who is sent to England by his Tory father to escape Revolutionary influences. He encounters Paul Jones and comes to take an active part in the war.

CARTER, RUSSELL GORDON

A PATRIOT LAD OF OLD SALEM

Penn $1.50

Laid in Revolutionary times, and Captain John Paul Jones and his "Ranger" figure prominently.

CHURCHILL, WINSTON

RICHARD CARVEL

Macmillan $2.50

A romance of the Revolution in autobiographical form. Story begins in Maryland, but the hero's adventures take him to England, where he meets John Paul Jones, Horace Walpole, George Fox, and others, and wins the girl he loves.

COFFIN, CHARLES

BOYS OF '76: A History of the Battles of the Revolution

Harper $2.50

Attractive new edition of a well-liked book.

COOPER, JAMES FENIMORE

THE SPY: A Tale of a Neutral Ground

Minton $2.50

The same (Mohawk Edition)

Putnam $2.00

The same (Cabinet Edition)

Page $2.25

Illustrated by C. Le Roy Baldridge. Cooper's first novel is a story of the Revolution. The scene is Westchester County, New York, and the hero is a spy in Washington's service. "Quite new scenes and characters, humour and pathos, a picture of America in Washington's time, a surgeon worthy of Smollett or Moore and quite different from any of their various surgeons; and an Irish-woman, Betty Flanagan, incomparable." (MARIA EDGEWORTH.)

CURTIS, ALICE TURNER

A LITTLE MAID OF MASSACHUSETTS COLONY

Penn $1.50

Anne Nelson makes an eventful journey to Boston and helps to capture an English privateer.

A LITTLE MAID OF NARRAGANSETT BAY

Penn $1.50

Penelope Balfour and her brother Ted live on a farm in Rhode Island with their mother while their father is away with Washington's forces. The children play their part in the struggle.

A LITTLE MAID OF PROVINCETOWN Penn $1.50

Another story of Revolutionary times in which Anne Nelson, whose mother has died and whose father has been captured by the British, finds friends and a home in Provincetown.

Mrs. Curtis has written a number of other Little Maids in the early days of the different states. The books have some history and are enjoyed by girls of eight and nine.

FISKE, JOHN

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION (2 vols.) Houghton $5.00

"To an extraordinary degree he has succeeded in his endeavor to make plain the events of the American revolution." He employs "nothing but the simplest narrative of events which are expected to be attractive in themselves and not to need the ornament of elaborate dressing-up." (A. L. A. Catalog.)

THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE Houghton $1.50

"Was the conduct of the British government in driving the Americans into rebellion merely wanton aggression or was it not rather a bungling attempt to solve a political problem which really needed to be solved? Why were New Jersey and the Hudson River so important? Why did the British armies make South Carolina their chief objective after New York? How did Cornwallis happen to be at Yorktown when Washington made such a long leap and pounced upon him there? And so on." (Preface.) These questions are ones the historian answers in this volume for young people.

FORD, PAUL LEICESTER

JANICE MEREDITH Dodd $2.25

Janice, patriot daughter of a Tory father, is in love with an indentured servant who later becomes a general in Washington's army. Washington himself is prominent in the story.

GERWIG, GEORGE WILLIAM

History and explanation of its meaning.

HUTCHINS, FRANK W., and CORTELLE, J.

THE SWORD OF LIBERTY Century $1.75

Story of two revolutions: the American and the French.

*KNIFE, EMILIE BENSON, and KNIFE, ALDEN
ARTHUR*

THE CONTINENTAL DOLLAR Century $1.75

Good picture of 1776. Story tells of the finding of a dollar bill which contains a hidden message to the enemy.

THE LUCKY SIXPENCE Century $1.75

"An English girl's adventures in coming alone to America at the time of the Revolution, her capture and escape from a British man-of-war, and her experiences with British and American notables while the head of her cousin's house in Philadelphia. The heroine's rôle is overdrawn, but the book has some value as a story of adventure and for its historical interest."

The story is continued in Beatrice of Denewood (Century, $1.75) and Peg o' the Ring: a Maid of Denewood (Century, $1.75).

A MAID OF '76 Macmillan $1.75

"A tale of the American Revolution, in which a loyal maid and her brother carry out the plans for which Nathan Hale gives his life."

Lafayette, Marquis de

CROW, MARTHA FOOTE

LAFAYETTE (True Stories of Great Americans)

Macmillan $1.00

A short life, emphasizing particularly Lafayette's service as a boy general in the Revolutionary War, his imprisonment in an Austrian fortress, and the attempted rescue. Also his triumphal journey through the United States in 1824.

NICOLAY, HELEN

THE BOY'S LIFE OF LAFAYETTE Harper $1.75

"Presents Lafayette as a French gentleman and a 'Friend of Liberty,' the friend of Washington and of Napoleon, a man of occasional mistaken judgments but of fine feeling and great vision. Entertainingly written and interesting to older people as well as to boys and girls." (A. L. A. Catalog.)

LAMPREY, L.

DAYS OF THE COMMANDERS Stokes $2.50

Illustrated by Florence Choate and Elizabeth Curtis. Thirty-three stories of historic life in America between 1773 and 1815, as experienced or seen by boys and girls of those days.

Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790)

AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Holt $2.00

Edited by F. W. Pine. Illustrated by E. Boyd Smith. "Gives a picture of the Colonial, Revolutionary, and Constitutional periods of our history such as can be found in no other book, at the same time telling how the foundations of a great life were laid." If an older boy became greatly interested in Franklin's life, he might like to read the complete life edited from original manuscripts and from his printed correspondence and other writings by John Bigelow, three volumes, Lippincott, $10.00. This is a life which has been accepted "for over one hundred years as an English Classic. Not only one of the most widely read and readable books in our language but one which has had the distinction of enriching the literature of nearly every other." (A. L. A. Catalog, 1926.)

A story of a wagon train on its journey to Oregon in '48. Crossing rivers, prairie fires, Indian attacks, and the rivalry of two men for the heroine's love make up the exciting incidents of the book.

Alexander HamiltonNICOLAY, HELEN

THE BOY'S LIFE OF ALEXANDER HAMILTON

Century $2.00

"The story of an eventful and romantic life simply and directly told. The political issues of the early days of our country, the formation of policies which have made a tremendous influence on our history, and the personality of prominent leaders all unite to form an interesting background."

Andrew Jackson

JOHNSON, GERALD W.

ANDREW JACKSON: AN EPIC IN HOMESPUN (a)

Minton $3.50

"Jackson had become legendary before he became president, during his years as frontier military leader. 'He was a great duellist, a great soldier, and a great lover. He was fiery, quixotic, honest and loyal.' A great figure, intensely human, one that readily lends itself to the rôle of popular hero, and one which loses none of its color or force in this interpretation." (A. L. A. Booklist.)

Thomas Jefferson

BOWERS, CLAUDE G.

JEFFERSON AND HAMILTON: THE STRUGGLE FOR DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA (a)

Houghton $5.00

Illustrated. "A section of American history written with meticulous care for its authenticity and fairness, yet having the graphic power of a great drama. One authority characterizes it as 'the most interesting book that has ever been written about the two greatest antagonists this country has produced. If the reader wishes to know the spirit of that stormy age, the fundamental difference of parties, he can nowhere find a better portrait and assessment of them.'"

John Paul Jones

RUSSELL, PHILLIPS

JOHN PAUL JONES: MAN OF ACTION (a) Brentano's $5.00

Drawings by Leon Underwood. "An animated, well-written account of an engaging personality and a picturesque career. It is preëminently as a man of action that Capt. Paul Jones is shown—able, with a touch of genius, yet pursued by an adverse fate which frustrates and disappoints 'every energetic action, every daring plan.' 'He was,' the author writes, 'a compound of Tom Sawyer, Don Quixote, Alexander the Great, and Sandy McPherson.'"

PIONEERS OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS AND THE WEST

Macmillan $.88

Spirited accounts of Lewis and Clark, Frémont, Powell, Parkman, Drake, and Coronado, from source materials.

MEIGS, CORNELIA

AS THE CROW FLIES

Macmillan $1.75

Illustrated by Lester H. Greenwood. The story of a young officer who, sent out to explore the upper reaches of the Mississippi, is the first to go into the region now eastern Iowa. "The story clings very closely indeed to the historical records, only a very few of the characters being imagined. It is an attempt to tell what was going on amongst the Indians while the events which Zebulon Pike put on record were happening to him. Pike himself, the Indians Black Hawk, Wabashah, Petit Corbeau, etc., the traders Cloud and his son, M'Gillis and Grant are all portraits as accurately reproduced as I could manage. The Indian hero and Tauneen, Chichoba, and Sagona, are made up, but that is all." (The Author.)

MELVILLE, HERMAN

ISRAEL POTTER

A. & C. Boni $2.00

"The story of an American prisoner of war in England during the Revolution. Through its pages of rapid events walk John Paul Jones, Benjamin Franklin and Ethan Allen. Even the man-in-the-moon himself appears at the battle between the Bon Homme Richard and the Serapis, 'as much as to say, Gentlemen Warriors, permit me a little to light up this rather gloomy-looking subject.'"¹ This book has been said by Frank J. Mather to contain "the best account of a sea fight in American fiction."

MORROW, MRS. HONORÉ WILLISIE

ON TO OREGON! The Story of a Pioneer Boy

Morrow $1.75

John Sager takes charge of his younger brothers and sisters, after the death of his father and mother, and finishes the cross-country journey bringing them to Oregon at last. Is founded upon a true story.

KIT CARSON, THE HAPPY WARRIOR OF THE OLD

WEST: A Biography (1809-1868) Houghton $3.50

A new life of the frontiersman who was so important in the development of the Southwest, an attempt to give a true picture of the man, against the background out of which his adventures grew and against which they must be seen.

WADE, MARY H.

THE TRAIL BLAZERS

Little $1.65

The story of the Lewis and Clark expedition.

Along with the westward movement, these years before the Civil War (1820 to 1880) saw the development of American railroads and ships. Ships should properly be emphasized in these years, but we have found so much pleasure in treating "Ships and the Sea" as a separate section that we must ask you to look for these books on p. 470.

"America was the first country to make practical use of the steamboat, but lagged behind England in applying steam to the deep-sea merchant marine. The wooden paddle-wheel steamboat was an ideal type for rivers, or for protected tidal waters like Long Island Sound, Hudson River, and Chesapeake Bay; but the ocean steamer was born in the tempestuous waters about the British Isles. American ship builders concentrated their skill and energy on sailing vessels. From 1817 to 1849 the direct carrying trade between England and the United States was on the same level of competition, so far as the laws of the two countries could effect it; and until 1830 British bottoms had the exclusive privilege of the West Indies' triangular trade. Yet by 1824 the freight and passenger traffic from Liverpool to New York and Boston had been captured by the Americans. 'The reason will be evident to anyone who will walk through the docks at Liverpool,' wrote an English traveller in 1824. 'He will see the American ships, long, sharp built, beautifully painted and rigged, and remarkable for their fine appearance and white canvas. He will see the English vessels, short, round and dirty, resembling great black tubs.' The former were the flash packets of the American marine, the famous Swallow-Tail and Black Ball liners, that were driven by their dandy captains, bucko mates, and Liverpool Irish crews, across the Western Ocean, winter and summer, blow high, blow low, in little more than half the average time taken by British vessels. It was a proud seaman in those days who had earned the right to sing:

"I served my time in the Black Ball Line,
 To me way-aye-aye-hurrah!
In the Black Ball Line I served my time,
Hurrah for the Black Ball Line!"¹

THE CIVIL WAR

"If Lincoln was slow to direct the conduct of the war, he never faltered in his conception of the purpose of the war. From Sumter to Appomattox, it was for him a war to preserve the Union. . . . Because Lincoln, ignoring all appeals to hatred, sectionalism, and humanitarianism, raised the standard of Union at the beginning and kept it paramount, the Union was preserved." (Samuel Eliot Morison, The Oxford History of the United States.)

ALTSHELER, JOSEPH A.

THE GUNS OF BULL RUN: A Story of the Civil War's Eve

Appleton $1.75

Begins with the secession of South Carolina and the attack on Fort Sumter and ends with the battle of Bull Run. This is the first in the Civil War Series. The second volume is The Guns of Shiloh: a story of the great Western campaign. Author says in his foreword to this volume: "In The Guns of Bull Run the Civil War and its beginnings are seen through the eyes of Harry Kenton, who is on the Southern side. In The Guns of Shiloh the mighty struggle takes its color from the view of Dick Mason, who fights for the North and who is with Grant in his first great campaign." The other volumes in the series in their order are: III. Scouts of Stonewall: The Story of the Great Valley Campaign; IV. Sword of Antietam: A Story of the Nation's Crisis; V. Star of Gettysburg: a Story of Southern High Tide; VI. Rock of Chickamauga; VII. Shades of the Wilderness: A Story of Lee's Great Stand; VIII. Tree of Appomattox.

The mental experience of a soldier at the Battle of Chancellorsville.

FOX, JOHN

THE LITTLE SHEPHERD OF KINGDOM COME

Scribner $2.00

Illustrated by F. C. Yohn. The story of a little Kentucky mountain waif, Chad Buford. In the Civil War he joins the Union army and so for a time alienates himself from the girl he loves. In the end there is a reconciliation.

Ulysses S. Grant (1822-1885)

HILL, FREDERICK TREVOR

ON THE TRAIL OF GRANT AND LEE

Appleton $2.00

Illustrated. "A sympathetic, unbiased and occasionally dramatic account of the careers of the two great generals of the Civil War. The arrangement of the book gives a clear understanding of the campaigns in which the two commanders were opposed."

NICOLAY, HELEN

THE BOYS' LIFE OF ULYSSES S. GRANT Century $1.75

Based on Grant's Personal Memoirs, supplemented by other standard biographies, this is probably the best life for children. The style is simple, direct, and eloquent.

STEVENS, WILLIAM O.

THE BOYS' LIFE OF U. S. GRANT

Harper $1.75

An unusually readable and well-balanced life of a national and military hero. There is no undue glorification of war. The author has emphasized those traits of character worthy of emulation, his honesty, his devotion to a cause, his self-effacement, but at the same time has not ignored his faults. An absorbing and stimulating book for young people or grown-ups.

Robert E. Lee (1807-1870)

"Lee was a great and simple person like George Washington, with a character so pure and well-rounded as to offer no flaw or protuberance for the historian's scalpel. His traditions, and those of his family, were nationalist. Light-Horse Harry Lee, his grandfather, had been a companion of Washington, and a Federalist. His wife was a descendant of Martha Washington. Lee abhorred the methods of abolitionists, but agreed with them that slavery was wrong, and emancipated his few inherited slaves. He did not believe in the constitutional right of secession, and severely criticized the action of the cotton states. . . . To a cousin . . . he wrote, 'I have been unable to make up my mind to raise my hand against my native State, my relatives, my children and my home.' With deep regret Colonel Lee resigned his commission in the United States army; only a sense of duty induced him to accept a commission in the cause of which he was the main prop."¹

HAMILTON, J. G. DE ROULHAC, and THOMP-SON, MARY

THE LIFE OF ROBERT E. LEE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Houghton $1.75

"A dignified account which emphasizes the man as a great American, a hero for the North as well as for the South."

Abraham Lincoln (Feb. 12, 1809-Apr. 14, 1865)

"With malice toward none, with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."²

We have searched for words to express him briefly and have not found them. We can only refer our readers to lives of this great man. All the lives there are merely add to the wonder of him. He does indeed "belong to the ages."

ELLA: A LITTLE SCHOOL GIRL OF THE SIXTIES

Houghton $1.75

A little girl's schooldays, which gives a picture of New England life and education in the '60's.

IN THE YEARS SINCE THE CIVIL WAR

THE SOUTH AFTER THE WAR

The condition of the people in the South after the war was terrible, "far worse than that of the central Europeans in 1919. Where Sherman and Sheridan had passed, the whole machinery of civilized life had been destroyed. There were few young men, no schools; it was, in fact, 'a country without government, without capital, without currency, and without labor.' 'Pretty much the whole of life has been merely not dying,' wrote a Southern poet, Sidney Lanier.

"Reconstruction left deep scars upon the South. Politics were forced into an unnatural racial groove. Even to this day the 'solid South' votes for Democratic candidates on whatever political issue. Race relations were poisoned, as the annual though diminishing crop of lynchings attests. Negroes were retarded at least a generation in their progress towards responsible citizenship; white men exhausted their energy in efforts to keep the negroes down. Southern society remained static, immune to modern movements of education and social regeneration, and in the twentieth century was almost as unprepared to meet the industrial invasion as England had been a century before."¹

The following books present varied pictures of life of the South in these years.

GLASGOW, ELLEN

BARREN GROUND (a)

Doubleday $2.50

The story of a run-down farming community in Virginia to-day and of a girl who takes hold of her father's farm and pulls it to success. A mature novel which will interest some older girls.

JOHNSON, JAMES WELDON

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN EX-COLOURED MAN (a)

Knopf $3.00

A quiet, simply, but excellently written story which gives incidentally a clear picture for young or old of the negro's position to-day in the South as seen by one of his most intelligent and cultured representatives.

KEPHART, HORACE

OUR SOUTHERN HIGHLANDERS (a)

Macmillan $2.50

Brought up to date to show results of prohibition. Three new chapters added. Thorough study of the people of the Carolina Mountains, their characteristics, their way of living. CATHER, WILLA S.

MY ANTONÍA

Houghton $2.50

"The beautiful, simply told story of a Bohemian immigrant girl, related reminiscently by a New York lawyer who had been her playmate. Gives a vivid picture of the pioneer life in Nebraska."

The Cowboy

"In 1866 a chance discovery proved that beeves could winter on the Great Plains as well as the buffalo, and come out fat and sleek in the spring. . . . It was this new industry of fattening cattle on the Great Plains that produced the last phase of the Wild West, and the highest and most picturesque development of the ancient art of cattle-droving. . . . Texan borderers who learned their horsemanship and 'cow punching' from the Mexican vaqueros were the first and best 'bucaroos' or cowboys. Every spring they rounded up the herds in designated areas, all the way from central Texas to Wyoming and Dakota. . . . The clownish posturing of film heroes has obscured the authentic cowboy; spare of frame and pithy in speech, reserved and courteous as the true gentleman he was, yet with the eternal horseman's swagger: alert with the sort of courage needed to fight Indians and bad men, to break bronchos and rope steers, or deal with stampedes and prairie fires: enduring and uncomplaining, asking no better end than to die with his boots on. Finest of our frontier types, he flourished for a brief score of years, and faded into legend with the passing of the open range."¹

STORM FIGHTERS

Bobbs $2.00

True stories of the heroism and skill of the Coast Guards.

From "The Stream of History," illustrated by James Daugherty. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

THE WORLD WAR

"Considering the population and vast wealth of the United States, our sacrifices in men and goods were slight compared with what the European belligerents suffered; but these sacrifices were terrible enough to make plain to us the unutterable horrors of war and the absolute necessity of coöperating with the rest of the world in preventing the recurrence of another such stupendous catastrophe.

"We continue to talk of independent nations, but only a few isolated, squalid savage tribes can be said any longer to be independent of other peoples. In an ever-increasing degree America and Europe have become interdependent, and their fate and fortunes tend to merge into the history of the whole world." . . . "The world of to-day . . . has become so small—the nations have been brought so close together and are so dependent upon one another"—surely boys and girls of the future will as men and women work for a reasonable government of world states.¹

Louisa May Alcott was born in Germantown, Pennsylvania, November 29, 1832. She herself writes in this way of her childhood, first of the days in Boston and later in Concord, where her home came to be:

"I never went to school except to my father or such governesses as from time to time came into the family. Schools then were not what they are now; so we had lessons each morning in the study. And very happy hours they were to us, for my father taught in the wise way which unfolds what lies in the child's nature, as a flower blooms, rather than crammed it, like a Strassburg goose, with more than it could digest. I never liked arithmetic nor grammar, and dodged these branches on all occasions; but reading, writing, composition, history, and geography I enjoyed, as well as the stories read to us with a skill peculiarly his own.

"Pilgrim's Progress, Krummacher's Parables, Miss Edgeworth, and the best of the dear old fairy tales made the reading hour the pleasantest in our day."

"Those Concord days were the happiest of my life, for we had charming playmates in the little Emersons, Channings, Hawthornes, and Goodwins, with the illustrious parents and their friends to enjoy our pranks and share our excursions.

"Plays in the barn were a favorite amusement, and we dramatized the fairy tales in great style. Our giant came tumbling off a loft when Jack cut down the squash-vine running up a ladder to represent the immortal bean. Cinderella rolled away in a vast pumpkin, and a long black pudding was lowered by invisible hands to fasten itself on the nose of the woman who wasted her three wishes."

Louisa Alcott's life was not an easy one. From a very youthful age she assumed many of the responsibilities of the family, and her early life was devoted to earning money in every possible way to pay off the heavy family debts. Her aim was "to pay all the debts, fix the house, send May to Italy, and keep the old folks cosey." At first she sought to do this by teaching, nursing, sewing, and writing short stories and poems for newspapers and periodicals. Once she even went into domestic service for a short time. As soon as her literary work became recognized she did all and more than she had set for herself. Her first stories were sensational and had little of the homelike simplicity and charm that made her late work live. She was thirty-six years old when Little Women appeared, and she writes in her diary August 26, 1868:

"Proof of whole book came. It reads better than I expected. Not a bit sensational, but simple and true, for we really lived most of it; and if it succeeds that will be the reason of it. ∴ ∴"

And then later is this entry:

"Paid all the debts, thank the Lord!—every penny that money can pay,—and now I feel as if I could die in peace. My dream is beginning to come true; and if my head holds out I'll do all I once hoped to do."

Mrs. Cheney in her Louisa May Alcott, Life, Letters, and Journals, says:

"Much as Miss Alcott loved literature, it was not an end in itself to her, but a means. Her heart was so bound up in her family,—she felt it so fully to be her sacred mission to provide for their wants,—that she sacrificed to it all ambitious dreams, health, leisure,—everything but her integrity of soul."

A delightful and well-written story of life in Holland.

From "Lady Green Satin and Her Maid Rosette," illustrated by Winifred Bromhall. (The Macmil- lan Co.)

Mary Mapes was born on January 26, 1831. Her father, Professor James J. Mapes, was noted as a scholar, scientist, inventor, and author. He was also a man of wide social acquaintance, and such leading men of the day as Horace Greeley and William Cullen Bryant were his friends. The Mapes home was the center for literary and scientific gatherings. In this atmosphere Mary Mapes was brought up and enjoyed a happy childhood. She married, when very young, William Dodge, a prominent lawyer of New York. He died in a few years, and Mrs. Dodge moved with her two young sons to the homestead, a large country house near Newark, New Jersey.

It was to provide the means for her sons' education that she began to write, and from the very first her stories were successful. In 1864 her first collection of short stories was published, and at this time she began on a longer and more difficult piece of work. From Motley's History of the Dutch Republic and other stories of Holland Mrs. Dodge had become greatly interested in that country, which, in spite of its enemies, the mighty powers of Europe and the sea, had held its own with heroism and enduring courage. Although at this time she had never seen Holland she began weaving in and out through all she could gather of its history, daily life, and customs a story which still holds its own as a classic of children's literature, Hans Brinker, or The Silver Skates. It was an immediate success and was soon translated into many languages. It was accepted in Holland as the best and most faithful picture of childhood there that had ever been written.

In 1870 she accepted the position of editor of the household and juvenile department of Hearth and Home, for which Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe and Mr. Donald G. Mitchell were responsible. It was her work on this magazine that resulted in the founding of St. Nicholas, an Illustrated Magazine for Young Folks, for Mr. J. G. Holland and Mr. Roswell Smith, directors of the company which now publishes the Century Magazine, became interested in her work and believed that such a magazine would be a success under her management.

The magazine was started in December, 1873. Through Mrs. Dodge's own inventive genius and literary skill and through the faculty she had in drawing from others the best they had to give the magazine received cordial recognition from the start. A glance at its contributors shows at once that many famous names are among them. Trowbridge, Alcott, Kipling, Tennyson, Stockton, Longfellow, Bryant, Burroughs, Whittier, Burnett, etc., etc. It has been said that with the advent of St. Nicholas the Children's Age began, and it was recognized that this was entirely due to Mary Mapes Dodge and her understanding of the needs and joys of childhood.

EDGEWORTH, MARIA (1767-1849)

TALES

Stokes $2.50

With an introduction by Austin Dobson and illustrations by Hugh Thomson. The following stories selected from The Parent's Assistant: "The Orphans"; "Lazy Lawrence"; "The False Key"; "Simple Susan"; "The White Pigeon"; "Forgive and Forget"; "Waste Not, Want Not"; "The Mimic"; "The Barring Out"; "The Little Merchants"; "Tarlton"; "The Basket-Woman."

Maria Edgeworth started a new school of writing. Her stories for children are different from those which went before in their good characterization, their delightful scenes of country life, and their well-rounded story. Her novels were to have great influence, for she was the first writer to take the people about her—the Irish peasant and the gentry and nobility of Ireland and England—as she saw them and put them into her books. It was her novels that moved Sir Walter Scott to try if he could not do the same thing for life in Scotland, as he himself has written. And it was her novels which Turgenev has said influenced him to write about Russian peasant life as he has done. It is true that she wrote her children's stories to a very definite pattern, but she could not help putting into them at the same time her story-teller's gift and her skill at presenting pictures of country and people.

She began her writing of "wee wee stories" on a slate as instruction and amusement for her brothers and sisters—and there were twenty-two children in the Edgeworth family. Maria Edgeworth had three stepmothers and was devoted to every one of them, and each was a person of unusual intelligence and talent. Her father was, however, the great passion of her life. It is impossible to write about her even in so short a sketch as this without writing about him. He was a man of tremendous physical and intellectual energy, strength, and originality, with humor, too, and a great interest in people. He was in advance of his times both in educational theories and the management of his estate. He had started his university career at Dublin, but wasting his time there in idleness and pleasure had been transferred by his father to Oxford. There he had worked hard, but had found time, too, to enjoy himself in society. He rode to hounds, sang, was an unusually fine dancer, and liked much the society of clever women. After college he came to devote himself to his natural gift for mechanics. After he had settled down on his family estate in Ireland he invented wheels, curricles, semaphore telegraphs, early plans for tunneling the Menai Strait, and roads; in fact, some authorities consider that we should say "tarred edgeworth" these days instead of "tarred macadam."

All the vitality of these many interests he brought into the midst of his household where he was himself educating his children. Added to the mechanical interests were the manifold avenues of his management of his estate—reclaiming boglands, farming, building community roads, improving the homes of his tenantry, dealing directly with them and encouraging in every way his tenants' interests in the property held. He made these interests clear to the children because it was part of his educational belief that their free association with grown-ups and opportunity to understand what was under way were the greatest stimuli and aid in educational process.

They lived in a beautiful place. The house was of stone set in the midst of a broad park rich in beeches, oaks, cypresses, sycamores, pines, and hawthorns. At one side of the house were a huge kitchen garden and fruit orchard enclosed in seven miles of wall, and beyond kitchen garden and park were wide meadows. The place was Edgeworthstown, in the County Longford. The house itself seems to have been fascinating with its "ways going upstairs and downstairs by winding passages and side gates," "with its pretty domed staircase starting from the central hall," its long book-filled library—the family room—looking out upon the gardens and the park.

The days when Maria was busy with the stories in The Parent's Assistant—"Simple Susan," "Lazy Lawrence," "The Purple Jar"—were troubled days, for the French had invaded Ireland, and the nobility and gentry had formed themselves into a corps to defend the country, but Maria writes to her aunt: "I am going on in the old way, writing stories. I cannot be a captain of dragoons, and sitting with my hands before me would not make any of us one degree safer."

It was at this time, too, that Practical Education was about to be published. This was the book on which she collaborated with her father and in which were presented their own educational theories arrived at by actual trial and record in their own family. There is much in this book sufficiently modern to appear in the Progressive Education Quarterly to-day.

Perhaps Maria Edgeworth's father had a bad influence upon her work, as some writers have suggested, making the moral and didactic burden of her tales heavier than it would otherwise have been. But we cannot agree with this theory. She had her talent. She used the materials immediately at hand, and she made her important contribution to literature. Her talent did not lie in fairy ways, for she was by nature very practical, prudent, and orderly. These traits were combined with bright fancy, cheerfulness, never-failing wit, generosity, and knowledge. It would seem to us that her father gave her encouragement and help in all the ways an artist needs assistance, and we have been interested to find our point of view held by persons better qualified to judge and stated in a recent book.¹

It is true that she was attempting in her children's stories to teach the virtues of honesty, industry, care, orderliness, thrift, but she was doing this, not by long, heavy moral dissertations but by clever, unforgettable stories filled with fields and meadows, flower-covered cottages, and interesting people.

Just the other day (in July, 1928) a mother whose lively boys and girls are lovers of books, in mentioning some of their favorite books, said, "and Miss Edgeworth's stories." We believe that many other children would enjoy "The Basket Woman," "Lazy Lawrence," "Waste Not, Want Not," "Rosanna," "The Limerick Gloves," and "The Will." Surely boys and girls, too, who enjoy Jane Austen and Trollope would also enjoy Castle Rackrent, The Absentee, and Ormond. The stories are good, they are true pictures of Irish life and character at that time, and they are rich in the humor of their setting and people.

Illustrated by Edna Cooke. A gift edition containing "Jack-anapes"; "Mary's Meadow"; "A Very Ill-Tempered Family"; "Lob-Lie-by-the-Fire"; "The Story of a Short Life"; "So-So"; "The Peace Egg"; "Daddy Darwin's Dovecot"; "Dandelion Clocks"; "Old Father Christmas"; "The Kyrkegrim Turned Preacher."

Horatia K. F. Gatty, in her Juliana Horatia Ewing and Her Books, says that in the story of Madam Liberality, her sister, Mrs. Ewing drew a picture of her own character that can never be surpassed. She was far from strong and at various times in her life endured much actual suffering. Here is an account of her childhood trials:

"Madam Liberality was accustomed to disappointment.

"From her earliest years it had been a family joke that poor Madam Liberality was always in ill-luck's way. . . .

"If the pigs or hens got into the garden, Madam Liberality's bed was sure to be laid waste before anyone came to the rescue. When a picnic or a tea party was in store, if Madam Liberality did not catch cold, so as to hinder her from going, she was pretty sure to have a quinsy from fatigue or wet feet afterwards. When she had a treat she paid for the pleasurable excitement by a headache, just as when she ate sweet things they gave her toothache.

"But if her luck was less than other people's, her courage and good spirits were more than common. She could think with pleasure about the treat when she had forgotten the headache. . . .

"In the intervals of wringing out hot flannels for her quinsy she would amuse herself by devising a desert island expedition, on a larger and possibly a damper scale than hitherto, against the time when she should be out again."

Juliana Horatia Ewing was born at Ecclesfield, Yorkshire, August 3, 1841. At a very early age she became the nursery story-teller and was called "Aunt Judy." When in 1866 Mrs. Gatty, her mother, started a magazine it was called Aunt Judy's Magazine for Children, because of this family nickname. "Mrs. Overtheway's Remembrances" was Juliana's contribution to the first number of this magazine, and her stories continued to appear serially until 1885.

Her marriage to Major Alexander Ewing took place in 1867, and after it she lived for two years in Fredericton, New Brunswick, where her husband was stationed. There are many incidents of army life woven into her stories. In the years after their return to England and of their residence at Aldershot three of her longest books were written—A Flatiron for a Farthing, Six to Sixteen, and Jan of the Windmill. Of these only Six to Sixteen reflects anything of military associations. Jackanapes, written in 1879, is of course her great story of soldierly honor, and is often referred to as her best literary work. It was in June of this same year that Mrs. Ewing first made the acquaintance of Randolph Caldecott, for whose illustrations and toy books she had unbounded admiration. He undertook at that time to illustrate Jackanapes and later also made pictures for "Daddy Darwin's Dovecot."

In all of her books there is to be found a great appreciation of the English countryside. She was fond of sketching, and the picturesque had a strong appeal for her. Windmills were especially pleasing to her, and some of her notebooks are filled with drawings of them. In fact, in her writing she applied many of the principles she learned from Ruskin's Elements of Drawing. She claimed that the great mass of English fiction failed not from lack of stories to be told but from lack of an artistic way of telling them.

Animals, birds, and flowers were all delights to Mrs. Ewing, and her books are rich in her understanding knowledge of them. She has been especially fortunate in depicting dogs in all their faithfulness, spontaneity, and charm. She always befriended stray dogs whenever opportunity came, and one favorite of hers was a pink-nosed bulldog whom she taught to play at having his fortune told. With cards spread out in front of him, the four Queens, instead of standing for four ladies of different complexion, were four of his favorite dishes, namely, Welsh Rabbit, Blueberry Pudding, Buckwheat Pancakes and Molasses, and Pork Sausages. The "fortune" decided which of these he should have for his supper.

HALE, LUCRETIA

PETERKIN PAPERS (Riverside Bookshelf) Houghton $2.00

Continued in Last of the Peterkins ($1.75). The Peterkin family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Peterkin, Solomon John, Agamemnon, Elizabeth Eliza, and the two little boys in India rubber boots. How they celebrated Fourth of July, went on a picnic, were snowed in, and had various normal things happen to them with surprising and amusing results is a masterpiece of nonsense.

Miss Eliza Orne White writes,

"Lucretia P. Hale, the author of the Peterkin Papers, was a lifelong friend of my mother, their acquaintance having begun when Margaret Harding was a little girl of six, at Miss Elizabeth Peabody's school, in Boston, and her bright and imaginative friend was two years and a half older.

"She always used to make us a visit of a fortnight in June, and it was on one of these memorable occasions that she told me the story of 'Mrs. Peterkin Wishes to Go to Drive.' It was founded on something that happened to us. We were starting ourselves for a drive, but the horse refused to go, even although the whip was applied, and finally we discovered that he was fastened to the hitching-post. This small incident was the slender thread on which the story hung and is a good illustration of the way in which Miss Hale wrote her stories. Indeed, there is so much human nature in the Peterkins that, in spite of the amusing exaggerations, we feel, as a witty person said, that 'one touch of Peter makes the whole world kin.'"

From the simple white country house in which Johanna Spyri was born one can look over dark fir forests to the water of Lake Zürich, for it stands seven miles distant, in Hirzel, and looks off to the shining heights of the Bernese Oberland. Johanna was born on July 12, 1827, and was the fourth child in the family. Her childhood was a happy one except for the sadness brought into it by contact with her father's patients, for he was the doctor of the community and often brought sufferers into his own household to care for them. Much of the joy of her early years came from the outdoors, for she and her brothers and sisters watched for the wildflowers, played beside the rushing mountain streams, and visited the friendly old cowherd in his little hut on the mountain side. He gave them bread spread thickly with golden yellow butter, and fresh bits of cheese. All these things are to be found in her books.

"Heidi went running hither and thither and shouting with delight, for here were whole patches of delicate red primrose, and there the blue gleam of the lovely gentian, while above them all laughed and nodded the tender-leaved golden cistus. Enchanted with all this waving field of brightly-colored flowers, Heidi forgot even Peter and the goats. She ran on in front and then off to the side, tempted first one way and then the other, as she caught sight of some bright spot of glowing red or yellow. And all the while she was plucking whole handfuls of the flowers which she put into her little apron, for she wanted to take them all home and stick them in the hay, so that she might have her bedroom look just like the meadows outside. Peter had therefore to be on the alert, and his round eyes, which did not move very quickly, had more work than they could well manage, for the goats were as lively as Heidi; they ran in all directions, and Peter had to follow whistling and calling and swinging his stick to get all the runaways together again."

Johanna Spyri's books were written in German, and Heidi, which first appeared in 1880, ran through thirteen editions by 1890. One of the best translations into English is that made by Helen B. Dole and published by Ginn & Company.

TWAIN, MARK
THE ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN Harper $2.50
 Illustrated by Worth Brehm.

THE ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER Harper $2.50
 Illustrated by Worth Brehm.

The same (Uniform Edition) Harper $2.25

Classics of American boyhood. The first tells of Huck Finn, his dog, and friend Negro Jim, and their adventures on the Mississippi. The second is the story of Tom Sawyer's pranks and adventures, much of which is supposed to be autobiographical.

"Huck's story was hailed as a classic and will probably always rank as the best of Mark Twain's purely fictional writings. The tale of Huck and Nigger Jim drifting down a mighty river on a raft, cross-sectioning the various primitive aspects of human existence, is one of the most impressive examples of vagabond narrative in any language. Robert Louis Stevenson once wrote, 'It is a book I have read four times and am ready to begin again to-morrow.' Andrew Lang called it 'the great American novel.'"

Mark Twain began work on The Adventures of Tom Sawyer in 1874.

"The new house [in Hartford] was coming along well, but would not be ready before autumn. Leaving it once more in the hands of the builders, the owners went to Quarry Farm, and in a cozy little study which Mrs. Crane had built for him on the hillside Mark Twain began a story which he had been planning for some time, The Adventures of Tom Sawyer. The book was published in December, 1876. He wrote Mr. Howells that he did not consider the book a boy's book, to which Mr. Howells replied:

"It is altogether the best story I ever read. It will be an immense success, but I think you ought to treat it explicitly as a boy's story; grown-ups will enjoy it just as much if you do, and if you should put it forth as a study of a boy character from the grown-up point of view you give the wrong key to it." (ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE, A Short Life of Mark Twain.)

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM (Riverside Bookshelf)

Houghton $2.00

Illustrated by Helen Mason Grose.

"Last comes Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, which the world doubtless supposes to be the darling of my heart. I am not in the least a psychic person, but Rebecca's origin was peculiar to herself. I was recovering from a long illness, and very early one morning I lay in a sort of waking dream. I saw an old-fashioned stage-coach rumbling along a dusty country road lined with maple and elm trees. A kind, rosy-faced man held the reins that guided two lean horses and from the little window of the coach leaned a dark-haired gypsy of a child. I was instantly attracted by her long braids floating in the breeze and by the beauty of the eyes in her mischievous face. She pushed back a funny little hat with an impatient gesture, straightened it on her head with a thump, and, with some wriggling, managed to secure the attention of the driver by poking him with a tiny frilled parasol. That was all. The picture came, and went, and returned, and finally faded away, but it haunted me, and I could recall every detail of it at will. Too weak to write, I wondered who the child was, and whither she was traveling, and whence she came. I could not content myself until I had created answers to my questions and the final answer was, indeed, the book itself. The child even named herself, for the moment I visualized her mother it seemed to me that a romantic novel-reading woman might have so loved the two heroines of Ivanhoe that she called her baby after both of them.

"'Rebecca Rowena' came to me precisely in that fashion, by a sort of lightning express. My nurse's name was Randall, and, as she was very much a part of my waking dreams just then, she somehow became further entangled in them." (KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN, A Garden of Memories.)

OCCUPATIONS AND HANDICRAFTS

(What could you do for yourself if shipwrecked on a desert isle?)

"This time I found much employment, (and very suitable also to the time, for I found great occasion of many things which I had no way to furnish myself with, but by hard labour and constant application; particularly I tried many ways to make myself a basket, but all the twigs I could get for the purpose proved so brittle that they would do nothing. It proved of excellent advantage to me now, that when I was a boy, I used to take great delight in standing at a basket-maker's, in the town where my father lived, to see them make their wicker-ware; and being, as boys usually are, a great observer of the manner how they worked those things, and sometimes lending a hand, I had by this means full knowledge of the methods of it, that I wanted nothing but the materials; . . ."1

THE MAKING OF PERSONALITY

Is reform needed? Is it through you?

The greater the reform needed, the greater the personality you need to accomplish it.

You! do you not see how it would serve to have eyes, blood, complexion, clean and sweet?

Do you not see how it would serve to have such a Body and Soul that when you enter the crowd, an atmosphere of desire and command enters with you, and everyone is impressed with your personality?

O the magnet! the flesh over and over!

Go, dear friend! if need be, give up all else, and commence to-day to inure yourself to pluck, reality, self-esteem, definiteness, elevatedness;

Rest not, till you rivet and publish yourself of your own personality.

—WALT WHITMAN.

SOME BOOKS OF VIVID PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

AKSAKOV, SERGIEI TIMOFIEEVICH

THE CHRONICLES OF A RUSSIAN FAMILY (Broadway Translations) (a) Dutton $5.00

Translated by M. C. Beverley. This is a classic in Russia and is read by every student of high-school age. It describes the home and school life of a Russian Squire's family at the end of the Eighteenth and the first half of the Nineteenth Century. It was written by Aksakov when he was sixty years old, feeble and almost blind, but he seems to have retained almost a photographic memory of his childhood. You see the country, come to know the weather and the people intimately. The travels between one estate and another, by sleigh in winter and coach in summer—journeys lasting weeks—the daily life on the lonely places—all is fascinating. May also be had in World's Classics, three volumes, Years of Childhood, Russian Schoolboy, Russian Gentleman (Oxford, each $.80).

ANTIN, MARY

THE PROMISED LAND Houghton $2.50

The autobiography of an intense, idealistic, and aspiring Russian child who came to Boston, lived in poverty and made use of all opportunities America offered.

BRESHKOVSKY, CATHERINE

THE LITTLE GRANDMOTHER OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION Little $2.00

Edited by A. D. Blackwell. The reminiscences and letters of this woman of aristocratic birth who has given her whole life to the struggle for political freedom and education of the Russian people and has spent years in prison and Siberian exile, will give boys and girls to-day an idea of much that lies back of the present conditions in Russia.

KRASINSKA, COUNTESS FRANÇOISE

COUNTESS KRASINSKA'S JOURNAL McClurg $1.50

The Countess Krasinska and the Countess Potocka, whose famous portrait is so well-known, were belles of Warsaw at the same time. Countess Krasinska later became the great-grandmother of Victor Emanuel. She began her journal just after Christmas the year she was fourteen and describes the Christmas festival and life at the Polish castle which was her home. The entries take her to the time of her marriage to Duke Charles, and are full of sparkle and naïveté. Delightful to read aloud.

MUKERJI, DHAN GOPAL

CASTE AND OUTCAST

Dutton $2.00

Describes the home life of a young Hindu Brahman in a village near Calcutta, his initiation into the priesthood at the age of fourteen, and his novitiate years as a beggar. Then his years in America while he is putting himself through the University of California

RAVAGE, MARCUS ELI

SUGIMOTO, ETSU INAGAKI

A DAUGHTER OF THE SAMURAI

Doubleday $3.00

In short chapters, beautifully written, Mrs. Sugimoto has told of her childhood and upbringing in the mountainous region of western Japan; of her coming to America to marry a young Japanese merchant as arranged by her elders; and of her return to Japan, a widow, with her two children, Taro and Hana. This is a book to read aloud in the family of an evening. A girl in her teens would enjoy it by herself.

HEALTH AND CHARACTER

DE SCHWEINITZ, KARL

GROWING UP

Macmillan $1.75

The story of how we become alive, are born and grow up. "It is a story that has happened to everybody, to your neighbors next door, to your mother, and to your father, and to you. We are all interested in it. We have all been babies and we have all been born, so, of course, we want to know how we came into the world. It is to tell boys and girls this story that I have written Growing Up." The best brief book we have seen—with clear pictures.

WHAT MEN LIVE BY

Houghton $2.50

"‘Real Life,’ then, if it is to mean the nourishing, sustaining and developing of existence, demands work, play and love, and so much of the material and spiritual conditions of existence as make these possible."

JAMES, WILLIAM

TALKS TO TEACHERS ON PSYCHOLOGY: AND TO STUDENTS ON SOME OF LIFE'S IDEALS

Holt $2.00

"We all intend when young to be all that may become a man, before the destroyer cuts us down. We wish and expect to enjoy poetry always, to grow more and more intelligent about pictures and music, to keep in touch with spiritual and religious ideals, and even not to let the greater philosophic thoughts of our time develop quite beyond our own. We mean all this in youth, I say; and yet in how many middle-aged men and women is such an honest and sanguine expectation fulfilled? . . . We forget that every good that is worth possessing must be paid for in strokes of daily effort. We postpone and postpone until those smiling possibilities are dead. Whereas ten minutes a day of poetry, of spiritual reading or meditation, and an hour or two a week at music, pictures, or philosophy, provided we began now and suffer no remission, would infallibly give us in due time the fulness of all we desire."

JONES, RUFUS M.

FINDING THE TRAIL OF LIFE

Macmillan $1.75

"These chapters will, however, be in vain if they fail to indicate how difficult is the task of discovering what goes on within the boy or if they fail to show what delicate treatment is required to bring him through his budding periods and his shifting ideals to a clear and well-defined life purpose."

MANNERS

"Beware of little foxes which may creep in and destroy the vines of good manners."

CLARK, MARY E., and QUIGLEY, MARGERY CLOSEY
ETIQUETTE, JR. Doubleday $2.00

Drawings by Erick Berry. Manners at home and away from home are discussed sensibly, and there is no doubt that young people will gain in social ease if they follow the principles here set forth under the guiding thought of

"Not to think meanly of ourselves,
Not to think meanly of others."

THE GREAT GATES OF THE MOUNTAIN

From "Puck in Pasture," illustrated by Elizabeth MacKinstry. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc.)

Oh, the great gates of the mountain have opened once again,
And the sound of song and dancing falls upon the ears of men,
And the Land of Youth lies gleaming, flushed with rainbow light and mirth,
And the old enchantment lingers in the honey-heart of earth.

LITERATURE

"He [the "Gentle Reader"] is looking for the book in which the inner meanings of nature and life are translated into language of distinction and charm, touched with the human personality of the author, and embodied in forms of permanent interest and power. This is literature. And the reader who sets his affections on these things enters the world of books as one made free of a city of wonders, a garden of fair delights." Scribner $2.00

The love story of a young Presbyterian minister and fascinating Babbie, the wild gypsy girl. "The Little Minister ought to have ended badly," Stevenson wrote. "We all know it did; and we are infinitely grateful to you for the grace and good feeling with which you lied about it."

MARGARET OGILVY

Scribner $1.75

A charming picture of Barrie's mother. In one of his works he states "the love of mother and son has written everything of mine that is of any worth."

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS, and Other Plays,

Vol. I

Scribner $2.50

Contains:

What Every Woman Knows

Maggie: You'll miss the prettiest thing in the world, and all owing to me.

John: What's that?

Maggie: Romance.

John: Poof.

Maggie: All's cold and grey without it, John. They that have had it have slipped in and out of heaven.

John: You're exaggerating, Maggie.

Quality Street

"Here we have for the first time a turning-back to the far country of lost dreams and good memories that Barrie had taught the world to think of so wistfully as 'The Never-Never-Land.'"

Miss Susan: Phœbe, how can you be so cruel?

Phœbe: Because he has taken from her the one glory that is in a woman's life. Not a man's love—she can do without that—but her own dear, sweet love of him.

Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire

"It's summer done, autumn begun. Farewell, summer, we don't know you any more. My girl and I are like the little figures in the weather-house; when Amy comes out, Alice goes in. Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire henceforth. The moon is full to-night, Robert, but it isn't looking for me any more. Taxis farewell—advance four-wheelers. I had a beautiful husband once, black as the raven was his hair . . ."

A Kiss for Cinderella

The dream of a little cockney servant girl in wartime London.

Policeman: For my amazing romantical mind said to me that, instead of popping a ring on the finger of his dear, a true love would pop a pair of slippers on her darling feet!

Cinderella: David, you're a poet!

Policeman (not denying it): It's what you've made me—and proud I would be of, for the honour of the Force. I set this new fashion in engagement rings. (He reveals the glass slippers.)

THE ADMIRABLE CRICHTON, and Other Plays, Vol.

II

Scribner $2.50

Contains:

The Admirable Crichton

Crichton at thirty has realized his ambition: "My lady, I am the son of a butler and a lady's maid—perhaps the happiest of all combinations, and to me the most beautiful thing in the world is a haughty, aristocratic English house, with everyone kept in his place." When on a yachting trip, and the family are wrecked, he finds that circumstances alter cases, and "the same person might not be the master, the same persons might not be the servants."

Dear Brutus

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, But in ourselves, that we are underlings." (Julius Caesar.) Each member of a summer house party has an opportunity of the "second chance" in a magical forest that has sprung up one midsummer night.

Mary Rose

"The call is again heard, but there is in it now no unholy sound. It is a celestial music that is calling for Mary Rose, first in whispers and soon so loudly that for one who can hear it, it is the only sound in the world. 'Mary Rose, Mary Rose.' As it wraps her around, the weary little ghost knows her day is done. Her face is shining. The smallest star shoots down as if it were her star sent for her, and with her arms stretched forth to it trustingly she walks out through the window into the empyrean. . . ."

The famous story written by a Spaniard in 1605. It relates the adventures of a gentleman of birth whose constant reading of old books of knighthood so turned his head that at fifty years of age he decided to become himself a Knight Errant and took to the road on his poor old horse, Rosinante.

*CHAUCEER, GEOFFREY*THE TALES OF THE CANTERBURY PILGRIMS Stokes $3.50Retold from Chaucer by F. J. Harvey Darton. Illustrated by Maria L. Kirk.

"It happened that one day in the spring, as I was resting at the Tabard Inn, in Southwark, ready to go on my devout pilgrimage to Canterbury, there arrived towards night at the Inn a large company of all sorts of people—nine-and-twenty of them: they had met by chance, all being pilgrims to Canterbury. . . . We all agreed to rise up early and pursue our journey together.

"It was their host—'a thoroughly good fellow and very merry' who made this suggestion: 'I say that each of you shall tell the rest four stories—two on the way to Canterbury, and two on the way home. For you know it is small fun riding along as dumb as a stone. And whichever in the party tells the best story, shall have a supper at this inn at the cost of the rest when you come back.'"

THE CANTERBURY TALES: A Golden Key Scribner $2.25

PICKWICK PAPERS

Macrae $2.00

Forty-one original illustrations by "Phiz." Hablot Knight Browne was born about 1812. He early displayed a marked talent for drawing, particularly of caricature. As "Phiz" he is known as the designer of the illustrations of the novels of Dickens, Ainsworth, Lever, Scott, the Abbotsford Edition of the Waverley Novels, etc. His first drawings made for Dickens were in 1836 of Pickwick. He died in 1882.

"Between the first and second numbers of Pickwick, the artist, Mr. Seymour, died by his own hands. There was at first a little difficulty in replacing him, and for a single number Mr. Buss was interposed. But before the fourth number a choice had been made which, as time went on, was so thoroughly justified that through the greater part of the wonderful career which was then beginning the connection was kept up, and Mr. Hablot Browne's name is not unworthily associated with the masterpieces of Dickens's genius." (FORSTER, Life of Dickens, Vol. I, chap. V.)

Another name associated with Dickens is George Cruikshank. Born in London (1792-1878). Son of an English caricaturist. He received no instruction in art. His first work was a series of political caricatures, but a few years later his illustrations for Pierce Egan's Life in London and Grimm's Fairy Tales brought him recognition. He illustrated Dickens's Sketches by Boz and Oliver Twist. Thackeray, writing of him in 1840, in the Westminster Review, said: "He has told a thousand truths in as many strange and fantastic ways; he has given a thousand new and pleasant thoughts to millions of people; he has never used his art dishonestly; he has never in the exuberance of his frolicsome humor caused a single painful or guilty blush; how little do we think of the extraordinary power of this man, and how ungrateful we are to him! . . . Look at one of Mr. Cruikshank's works, and we pronounce him an excellent humorist. Look at all: his reputation is increased by a kind of geometrical progression as a whole diamond is an hundred times more valuable than the hundred splinters into which it might be broken would be. A fine, rough English diamond is this. . . ."

"He was the best beloved of all English novelists after Scott. At the age of twenty-five he leaped into fame and prosperity with the Pickwick Papers, which contains all the elements, some of them never better exemplified, of his later novels—the drollery, the farce, the animal high spirits, the pathos, the sense of action and scene. He captured the public and dumbfounded the critics. He proceeded through novel after novel to create fantastic characters, which are yet true to life, and to invent disorderly plots, which through interminable pages hold the reader captive. . . . He loved life, he loved to write (he wrote enough intimate letters to fill the life of an ordinary man) and he hugely enjoyed his characters and believed in them. They are a great and populous company, whom our fathers and grandfathers knew intimately. Does the younger generation know them?—Weller, Pecksniff, Snodgrass, Bumble, Swiveller, Pegotty, Podsnap, Cuttle, Sykes, Nancy, Nell, Emily, and all the rest?" GASKELL, MRS. ELIZABETH CLEGHORN

CRANFORD (Queen's Treasures Series)

Harcourt $2.00

The same (Cranford Edition)

Macmillan $2.40

Illustrated by Hugh Thomson. Life in a little old-fashioned country town where "it was impossible to live a month . . . and not know the daily habits of each resident," and which was inhabited almost entirely by genteel spinsters. "If a married couple came to settle in the town, somehow the gentleman disappears. . . .

"The Cranford ladies have only an occasional little quarrel, spurted out in a few peppery words and angry jerks of the head; just enough to prevent the even tenor of their ways from becoming too flat. Their dress is very independent of fashion; as they observe, 'What does it signify how we dress here at Cranford, where everybody knows us?' And if they go from home, their reason is equally cogent, 'What does it signify how we dress here, where nobody knows us?'"

Hugh Thomson, the illustrator of the Cranford Series, at the age of twenty-one, appeared in the world of illustrating. His first work was published in the English Illustrated Maga- zine. His first illustrative work was Days with Sir Roger de Coverley, which appeared in 1886. All of the Coverley Series came out in the English Illustrated. The Vicar of Wakefield was the next undertaking. It came out in 1890, having occupied him for nearly two years. From the first introductory procession of the Primrose family to the merriment of the two Misses Flamborough at the close, there is scarcely a page which has not some stroke of quiet fun. His illustrations for Cranford are delightful and absolutely in keeping with the characters. "It almost illustrated itself," he told an interviewer, "the characters were so exquisitely and distinctly realized." Other books followed in the Cranford Series, among them Evelina, Henry Esmond, and Silas Marner, Old Christmas, Tom Brown, etc., etc.

From "Cranford," illustrated by Hugh Thomson.
(The Macmillan Co.)

Thomson's illustrations leave you with a great store of pleasant memories. As Austin Dobson puts it, to whose article we are indebted for all this material, "You have been among 'blown fields' and 'flowerful clover'; you have passed quaint roadside inns and picturesque cottages; you are familiar with the cheery, ever-changing idyll of the highway and the bustle of animal life; with horses that really gallop, and dogs that really bark; with charming male and female figures in the most attractive old-world attire; with happy laughter and artless waggeries; with a hundred intimate details of English domesticity that are pushed just far enough back to lose the hardness of their outline in a softening haze of retrospect. There has been nothing more tragic in your travels than a sprained ankle, or an interrupted affair of honour; nothing more blood-curdling than a dream of a dragoon officer knocked out of his saddle by a brickbat. Your flesh has never been made to creep; but the cockles of your heart have been warmed."

UNA AND THE RED CROSS KNIGHT, and Other
Tales from Spenser's Faëry Queene Dutton $3.00

Retold by N. G. Royde-Smith. Illustrated by T. H. Robinson.
Tells of the quest of the Red Cross Knight, and the adventures of Sir Guyon in his search for the Bower of Bliss.

"The Faërie Queen is not only an epic but a double allegory, for the many characters represent both abstract virtues and the noted people of Spenser's time. For instance, the poem opens with description of the court of Gloriana, who impersonates Elizabeth and is the champion of Protestantism. Various knights went forth from the court to do adventures, and each knight represented one of the twelve virtues.

“A gentle Knight was pricking on the plain,
 Y clad in mightie arms and silver shield,
 Wherein old dints of deep wounds did remain,
 The cruel marks of many a bloody field;
 Yet arms till that time did he never wield;
 His angry steed did chide his foaming bit,
 As much disdainig to the curb to yield;
 Full jolly knight he seemed, and fair did set,
 As one for knightly jousts and fierce encounters fit.”

“Spenser gathered the freshness of Chaucer, the dignity of Virgil, the elaborate colour of Petrarch and Ariosto, and blended them all into a poetic language that was firm and musical and lovely. . . . He took old English metres and stanzas and showed that these could be handled superbly. He made happy experiments with new rhyme schemes and refrains, and in his epic he used a stanza form entirely his own which reflected the embroidered half-chivalric beauty of the Renaissance world. The ‘Spenserian stanza’ has been used since by other poets in the making of great English poetry.”¹

Spenser was born in London in 1552. He wrote The Faërie Queene in Dublin where he was clerk to the court of Chancery, dedicating it to Queen Elizabeth.

LIFE OF CHARLOTTE BRONTË

Harper $2.25

Haworth Edition, illustrated with photographs.

"Years and years ago, when I was a child, hunting forlornly in my father's bookshelves, I came upon a small shabby volume, bound in yellow linen. The title-page was adorned with one bad wood-cut that showed a grim, plain house standing obliquely to a churchyard packed with tombstones, tombstones upright and flat, and slanting at all angles. In the foreground was a haycock, where the grave grass had been mown. I do not know how the artist, whose resources were of the slenderest, contrived to get his overwhelming but fascinating effect of moorland solitude, of black-grey nakedness and abiding gloom. But he certainly got it and gave it. . . .

"I remember I lingered somewhat long over the school-days at Cowan Bridge and that I found the Brussels period dull; M. Heger struck me as a tiresome pedant, and I wondered how Charlotte could ever have put up with him. There was a great deal about Branwell that I could not understand at all, and so forgot. And I skipped all the London part, and Charlotte's literary letters. I had a very vague idea of Charlotte apart from Haworth and the moors, from the Parsonage and the tombstones, from Tabby and Martha and the little black cat that died, from the garden where she picked the currants, and the quiet rooms where she wrote her wonderful, wonderful books.

"But, for all that skipping and forgetting, there stood out a vivid and ineffaceable idea of Emily; Emily who was tall and strong and unconquerable; Emily who loved animals, and loved the moors; Emily and Keeper, that marvellous dog; Emily kneading bread with her book propped before her; Emily who was Ellis Bell, listening contemptuously to the reviews of Wuthering Heights; Emily stitching at the long seam with dying fingers; and Emily dead, carried down the long, flagged path, with Keeper following in the mourner's train.

And, all through, an invisible, intangible presence, something mysterious, but omnipotently alive; something that excited these three sisters; something that atoned, that not only consoled for suffering and solitude and bereavement, but that drew its strength from these things; something that moved in this book like the soul of it; something that they called 'genius.'"¹

A CHILD'S JOURNEY WITH DICKENS Houghton $1.25

The author met Dickens on a railroad train when she was a little girl and talked with him.

"I came from Hollis, Maine, and I'm going to Charlestown to visit my uncle. My mother and her cousin went to your reading last night, but of course three couldn't go from the same family, it was so expensive, so I stayed at home. Nora, that's my little sister, is left behind in Hollis. She's too small to go on a journey, but she wanted to go to the reading dreadfully. There was a lady there who had never heard of Betsey Trotwood, and had only read two of your books!"

"Well, upon my word," he said; "you do not mean to say that you have read them!"

"Of course!" I replied; "Every one of them but the two that we are going to buy in Boston, and some of them six times."

"Bless my soul!" he ejaculated again. "Those long thick books, and you such a slip of a thing."

"Of course," I explained conscientiously, "I do skip some of the very dull parts once in a while; not the short dull parts, but the long ones."

ADVENTURES IN READING

Stokes $2.00

"The best books for young people have this quality; you can not only read them but re-read them again and again and find that they have grown with your growth. Of course I don't expect you to read only books that will last. It doesn't do to be so calculating about the good you are going to get out of a book, when you are quite young. In the food we eat there is a certain amount of 'roughage and bulk' and we eat some things just because we like the taste. If you live on nothing but this you would soon starve, but if you lived on nothing but condensed food tablets you would not enjoy your meals. And this book, though it will help you to nourish your mind, is intended especially to show you some ways of getting enjoyment out of reading, ways that I can recommend because I have tried them myself and they work."

This is a fine book full of enthusiasm and stimulation. Some of the chapters are: "Reading for Companionship"; "Some Books with Friends in Them"; "On a Journey"; "Some Experiences with Books on a Walk"; "Out of the Dumps"; "Books as Gloom Dispellers," etc.

MACY, JOHN

THE STORY OF THE WORLD'S LITERATURE Boni $5.00

From the beginning of book making to the close of the Nineteenth Century this outline covers the great writers and the great books of the world.

"Our journey through time and space has been too short and too long. Too short because a few words, a few pages, cannot tell the story of centuries of thought and thousands of writers. Too long because in our swift passage we have loitered and lost our bearings in the mists of wonder, in the fogs of ignorance, in the blinding blaze of genius as far beyond us as our friendly sun or the uttermost suns. But there is one consoling thought in time and space about such a journey as we have driven through the clouds and the mists and the sunlight and the immeasurable starlight: We can always go back." (Postscript.)

MARSHALL, H. E.

ENGLISH LITERATURE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS Stokes $5.00

Illustrated with twenty drawings in colors by J. R. Skelton. "My desire has been to produce a book which a boy or girl will read not as a task, but as a pleasure." From Caedmon (670) to Carlyle, Tennyson, Dickens, Thackeray (1851-1900). "No attempt has been made to include even all the great names."

MOORE, ANNE CARROLL

ROADS TO CHILDHOOD Doubleday $1.50

A delightful book on children's reading followed by New Roads to Childhood ($2.00) and Crossroads to Childhood ($2.00). The papers which make up these books were the first really serious reviewing of children's books in this country provided regularly by a magazine for adults. They appeared in The Bookman.

THE THREE OWLS: A Book About Children's Books Macmillan $2.50

THE THREE OWLS: Contemporary Criticism of Children's Books Coward $3.00

Miss Moore is editor of the first regular newspaper sheet devoted to the reviewing of children's books initiated by the New York Herald Tribune in its special weekly section "Books." Miss Moore's page is called "The Three Owls," and the book is made up of papers from it.

Miss Moore has been for many years Supervisor of Work with Children for the New York Public Library. A visit to the Central Children's Room on Forty-second Street and to the Children's Rooms in the branch libraries throughout the city is a quickening experience. All these rooms have an atmosphere of genuine, genial friendliness, with the books displayed in delightful and unusual ways. It is Miss Moore who gave the initial stimulus to the creation of these rooms and who has continued to give the necessary constructive encouragement.

The three books listed above will be a delight to all lovers of books, but Crossroads to Childhood is the favorite of these editors, for it seems to have the most of Miss Moore herself in it. She states her fears as those "of being dull or commonplace, of boring or being bored, of missing the point, of being earnest or facetious, condescending, theoretical, academic, or artificial."

"A frank determination to know all that can happen to human beings in books or in life is quite different from a prurient curiosity. Feeling under the obligation myself, I have never been shocked to find other boys and girls similarly impelled to find out all they can. Tragedy lies, I think, not in knowing too much, but rather in not knowing enough to think things through."

"Not by propaganda, nor by speeches, nor by clever new educational devices do children grow wiser and more tolerant; but by the slow and silent and ineradicable influences of art in books, in pictures, in buildings and statues, and by the rarer art of wise leadership and companionship in carrying on the business of life without growing bored."

These few bits only suggest why one can read Crossroads to Childhood again and again. The influence of its author upon the writing, reading, and presentation of books for young people is very wide indeed and, like other fine things, impossible to measure.

OLCOTT, FRANCES JENKINS

THE CHILDREN'S READING

Houghton $1.75

"A trustworthy guide for parents, teachers, and librarians which discusses ways of guiding children's reading. It presents the different classes of literature for children and the principles to be observed in selection." (A. L. A. Booklist.)

CHILDREN'S READING

Appleton $2.00

"A discussion of the reading habit, children's literature, what children like and dislike and why, which gives advice on the subject of cultivating good taste through an intelligent knowledge of children and books. It includes well annotated lists of books with reading age indicated." (A. L. A. Booklist.)

WHITCOMB, IDA PRENTICE

YOUNG PEOPLE'S STORY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE

Dodd $2.50

A survey from early Colonial chronicles to present-day authors and poets. Not uniformly good, but with some interesting chapters.

THE GREAT GATES OF THE MOUNTAIN

From "The Winged Horse," illustrated by Paul Honoré. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc.)

POETRY

"Poetry listens to no argument and opens her heart to no strangers. A thousand years in her sight are but as yesterday, and her home is among things that are very old, old as the battle of man against fate, old as love and death and honour, and the kiss of Helen and the dancing of the daffodils."¹

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH, and HILL, FRANK ERNEST
THE WINGED HORSE: The Story of Poetry and the Poets Doubleday $3.50

Decorations by Paul Honoré. From the beginning man has been busily building a glorious castle of magnificent images which all of us may enjoy if we will. And not only enjoy, but find in its manifold rooms the food which our heart most needs. This castle is the castle of poetry built by poets who are prophets and teachers, as well as musicians, and we in America have much to learn of them.

The work of the masters on this castle from the very earliest times down through the Anglo-Saxon world to the present poet-builders, the authors of The Winged Horse have described in their book. They have shown how some poets chose to decorate the room of a previous builder; how others felt dissatisfied with the form already standing and wrought in a new way, but always one was related in some way to another, and so the entire edifice has unity.

The Winged Horse makes the castle stand forth in all its richness and beauty; makes clear why Shakespeare builded his way; what type of man he was; and what he tried for and accomplished.

¹Gilbert Murray, The Classical Tradition in Poetry.

And the same with each great name, whether it be Homer, Virgil, or Euripides; Chaucer, Spenser, or Milton; Wordsworth, Coleridge, or Byron; Burns, Scott, or Tennyson; Keats, Shelley, Arnold, Rossetti, or Morris; Yeats, Masfield, or Kipling; we see them at work in their own time and place, and their contribution stands clear. The book, moreover, is beautifully written, as a book on poetry should be, and has itself what a poet's work has—"the best merits of fortifying and encouraging."

BLAKE, WILLIAM

SONGS OF INNOCENCE

Minton $5.00

A facsimile reproduction, with color, of that first completely hand-made edition created by Blake and his wife in 1789 when no publisher would print it. Beautifully printed and bound.

"Sweet and clear as the voices of children are the poems of this volume. Indeed, Blake tells in his Introduction how "Piping down the valleys wild,

Piping songs of pleasant glee
On a cloud I saw a child."

And how the child said to him,

"Piper, sit thee down and write
In a book, that all may read,'
So he vanished from my sight,
And I plucked a hollow reed,
And I made a rural pen,
And I stained the water clear
And I wrote my happy songs
Every child may joy to hear."

DE LA MARE, WALTER

FLORA

Lippincott $6.00

A book of drawings by Pamela Bianco with illustrative poems by Walter de la Mare. This volume grew out of an exhibition of the pictures of Pamela Bianco—a child of twelve years old—which was held in the Leicester Galleries, London, during the spring of 1919. A selection of the drawings there shown is here reproduced. They are accompanied by the exquisite poems that Mr. De la Mare was inspired by them to write.

"My mistress dreams—and me forgot;
For parlour silk I cannot care;
Abroad she will not roam.
But birds invite to sandy grot;
Good warren folk await me there;
So I go home."

SONGS FOR YOUTH Doubleday $2.50

Mr. Kipling has chosen these poems from his collections with young people in mind.

"Here we go in a flung festoon,
Half-way up to the jealous moon!
Don't you enjoy our pranceful bands?
Don't you wish you had extra hands?
Wouldn't you like if your tails were—so—
Curved in the shape of a Cupid's bow?
Now you're angry, but—never mind,
Brother, thy tail hangs down behind!"

MACKINSTRY, ELIZABETH

PUCK IN PASTURE Doubleday $2.00

"Far off the Fairy Horns are blowing
Through the morning, through the dew,
The trees of emerald green, the blue,
The windy clouds all white and new,
Oh, come-all-ye-Gypsies!"

MASEFIELD, JOHN

POEMS (2 vols.)

Macmillan each $3.00

"The sailor, the stoker of steamers, the man with the clout,
 The chanteyman bent at the halliards putting a tune to the shout,
 The drowsy man at the wheel and the tired lookout.
 Others may sing of the wine and the wealth and the mirth
 The portly presence of potentates goodly in girth;—
 Mine be the dirt and the dross, the dust and the scum of the earth! . . .
 Of the maimed, of the halt and the blind in the rain and the cold—
 Of these shall my songs be fashioned, my tale be told. Amen."

"A wind's in the heart of me, a fire's in my heels,
 I am tired of brick and stone and rumbling wagon wheels;
 I hunger for the sea's edge, the limits of the land,
 When the wild old Atlantic is shouting on the sand!"

From "Puck in Pasture," illustrated by Elizabeth MacKinsty. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc.)

Macmillan $1.75

A long poem full of the breathless suspense of a steeplechase.

"Up the street of the green race-course they strained for the prize, While the stands blurred with waving and the air shook with cries:

'Now, Sir Lopez!' 'Come, Soyland!' 'Now, Sir Lopez! Now, Now!'
Then Charles judged his secret, but he could not tell how.

"But a glory of sureness leaped from horse into man,
And the man said, 'Now, beauty,' and the horse said, 'I can.'
And the leg-weary Royal made an effort the more,
Though his heart jumped like drumbeats as he went to the fore."

Thy woods, this autumn day, that ache and sag
And all but cry with colour!"

NOYES, ALFRED

COLLECTED POEMS (3 vols.) Stokes $8.25

"And still of a winter's night, they say, when the wind is in the trees,
When the moon is a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas,
When the road is a ribbon of moonlight over the purple moor.
A highwayman comes riding—
Riding—riding
A highwayman comes riding, up to the old inn-door."

POETS IN THE MAKING

GRAVES, FREDERICK W., Compiler

A BOOK OF HILL SCHOOL VERSE (1920-1926)

Macmillan $2.00

Verse written by boys between the ages of fifteen and eighteen.
"All schoolboy verse, no matter how good, contains more of promise than fulfillment." The introduction is by Howard Bement who points out wisely the great and fundamental reasons why boys and girls should be encouraged to write verse.

MEARNS, HUGHES

CREATIVE YOUTH

Doubleday $2.50

How a school environment set free the creative spirit, with an anthology of high-school verse.

An account of five years of experience of helping high-school students at the Lincoln School of Teachers College to a rich and full appreciation and enjoyment of poetry through their own creative experiences.

SUNRISE

I've never seen the great sun rise,
For then I am in bed;
The sands of slumber in my eyes
Hold down my drowsy head.
I think the sun climbs up the sky
And throws the clouds away,
Then girds her flaming tunic high
And strides to meet the day.
Soft-touched by birds' wings in her head;
Her feet caressed by trees;
She turns their leaves to gold and red
And stoops to drink the seas.

-KATHARINE KOSMAK.

THE BIBLE

We know that no finer literature exists, that poetry and pathos, grandeur and tender beauty, all the thoughts of the human heart and the glory of earth and heaven are expressed in language matchlessly vivid and simple. Will anyone give a good reason why this language should be turned into commonplace English for children who particularly delight in rhythmical, poetic sound? Only the tiny children need the Bible simplified, except by omission.

—C. W. HUNT.

Parents will find Chapter IX, "Stories from the Bible," in Felix Adler's Moral Instruction of Children, most suggestive and helpful.

Bibles may be purchased in many editions and at almost any price. Is it not possible that the traditional form in which the Bible is published—black leather or black cloth binding, with double-columns to a page of close-set lines—make the book seem formidable to young people? We suggest that effort be made to have the Bible in as interesting type-form as possible, and that it be rebound wherever possible in an attractive color of cloth or leather.

OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT STORIES

BAIKIE, REV. JAMES

THE BIBLE STORY

Macmillan $5.00

Fifty full-page illustrations in color. A connected narrative retold from Holy Scripture. "The story is told from stage to stage in the order in which its events actually occurred, so that the reader may follow it with uninterrupted attention and be spared alike the trouble of disentangling the incidents from the somewhat bewildering setting in which they are imbedded, and the toil of piecing out the partial narrative of one book with the equally partial narrative of another." (Introduction.)

A section, not strictly Biblical, has been added in which the course of history between the closing of the Old Testament Story and the beginning of the New is briefly traced.

BIBLE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE*Century* $3.50

Arranged from the King James Version, with full-page illustrations from old masters. Stories are told in Bible language but are grouped into subjects so as to give the complete stories, thus: Book I—The Beginnings; Book II—Abraham and Isaac; Book III—Jacob and Joseph; Book IV—Moses and the Deliverance from Egypt; Book V—Israel in the Wilderness. The New Testament is handled in the same way. Verse divisions are omitted and new chapter headings are used.

JONES, RUFUS M.

THE BOY JESUS AND HIS COMPANIONS Macmillan $1.25

"These stories of mine which follow have been written to help young people to see Him as He grew up in His home town, as He walked and talked, as He worked and healed and preached,—see Him and His little group of friends. If any boy or girl to-day really sees Him, and is awakened with the appeal of interest that is sure to come as soon as He is truly seen, it will then be perfectly easy to love Him and to follow Him—easy because it will be the most natural thing in the world." (Foreword.)

ST. PAUL THE HERO

Macmillan $1.25

The story of Paul of Tarsus from his boyhood until his trial in Rome, emphasizing the dramatic events of his years of preaching and building up churches through Asia Minor and Europe.

Fire; the Captivity of Israel; the Feast of Belshazzar; the Story of Esther.

HALL, NEWTON MARSHALL

TALES OF CAPTAINS AND CONQUESTS	Ginn $.84
TALES OF FAR-OFF DAYS	Ginn $.84
TALES OF PIONEERS AND KINGS	Ginn $.84

"The series of books called 'Stories of the Commonwealth of Israel' give to the boys and girls of America an edition of their own, of the most popular and fascinating tales in the world's literature. . . . The stories are really moving pictures of the life of a great people, in tent and palace, on the march and on the field of battle." Illustrated with many photographs of Egypt and Palestine. The text is for the most part taken directly from the Old Testament, but explanatory paragraphs and literary allusions are added.

Nisbet $5.00

Illustrated by Cayley Robinson. Stories of St. Christopher, St. Denis, St. Helena, and seventeen other saints told in charming style, with interesting colored pictures.

CHRISTMAS AND OTHER HOLIDAYS IN POETRY AND PROSE

"It is clear, however, that in Manhattan, by a gradual consolidation of the two old festivals, Christmas became pre-eminently a children's festival presided over by the children's saint whose modern name, Santa Claus, is a variant of the Dutch St. Nicolaes or San Claas. In all European countries Christmas still means simply the day of Christ's nativity; for the 'Old Christmas' whom we meet in English ballads of earlier times, the 'Father Christmas' of Charles Dickens, and the 'Père Noël' of the French are abstractly mythical figures in no way related to St. Nicholas. But anywhere in our America the domestic observance of Christmas centres around Santa Claus with his burden of gifts. The stockings that our children hang on Christmas Eve were once the shoes that the children of Amsterdam and New Amsterdam set in the chimney corners on the eve of December 6; and the reindeer whose hoofs our children hear represent the horse, descended from Woden's horse Sleipner, upon whose back St. Nicholas still makes his rounds in Holland. The Christmas tree is not Dutch but German; about the middle of the nineteenth century we acquired it from our German immigrants. But even this the American child accepts at the hands of Santa Claus, not of the Christ Child as does the little German. 'Kriss Kringle,' it may be added, a name now often mistakenly used as though it were a synonym of Santa Claus, is a corruption of the German Christkindlein (Christ Child)."¹

"St. Nicholas is the patron saint of the children of France, to whom he brings bonbons for the good, but a cane for the naughty child. In Germany he acts as an advance courier examining into the conduct of the children, distributing goodies, and promises to those with good records a further reward which the Christ Child brings at Christmas time.

"A legend relates that on every Christmas Eve the little Christ-child wanders all over the world bearing on its shoulders a bundle of evergreens. Through city streets and lonely lanes, up and down hill, to proudest castle and lowliest hovel, through cold and storm and sleet and ice, this holy child travels, to be welcomed or rejected at the doors at which he pleads for succor. Those who would invite him and long for his coming set a lighted candle in the window to guide him on his way hither. They also believe he comes to them in the guise of any alms-craving, wandering person who knocks humbly at their door for sustenance, thus testing their benevolence. In many places the aid rendered the beggar is looked upon as hospitality shown to Christ."¹

THE CHIMES

Dutton $2.00

Illustrated in color by C. E. Brock. A goblin story of some bells that rang an old year out and a New Year in.

“‘Seem to, my Pet,’ said Trotty, falling to with great vigour. ‘And where’s the difference? If I hear ’em, what does it matter whether they speak it or not?’

“‘Why, bless you, my dear,’ said Toby, pointing at the tower with his fork, and becoming more animated under the influence of dinner, ‘how often have I heard them bells say, “Toby Veck, Toby Veck, keep a good heart, Toby!” A million times? More!’”

THE CRICKET ON THE HEARTH

Dutton $2.00

Illustrated by C. E. Brock.

The same

Harper $2.50

Illustrated by Francis D. Bedford. A fairy tale of home, in which good John Peerybingle, Carrier, listened to the chirp of the Cricket on the Hearth, and passion and distrust left him.

“Well, if you’ll believe me, they have not been dancing five minutes, when the Carrier flings his pipe away, takes Dot round the waist, dashes out into the room, and starts off with her, toe and heel, quite wonderfully. Tackleton no sooner sees this, than he skims across to Mrs. Fielding, takes her round the waist, and follows suit. Old Dot no sooner sees this, than up he is, all alive, whisks off Mrs. Dot in the middle of the dance, and is the foremost there. Caleb, no sooner sees this, than he clutches Tilly Slowboy by both hands and goes off at score; Miss Slowboy, firm in the belief that diving hotly in among other couples, and effecting any number of concussions with them, is your only principle of footing it.

“Hark! how the Cricket joins the music with its chirp, chirp, chirp!; and how the kettle hums!”

Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott. Contents: "Christmas"; "The Stage Coach"; "Christmas Eve"; "Christmas Day"; "The Christmas Dinner." Taken from The Sketch Book. Describes how Christmas was celebrated at Bracebridge Hall.

"Master Simon led the van as 'Ancient Christmas,' quaintly appareled in a ruff, a short cloak, which had very much the aspect of one of the old housekeeper's petticoats, and a hat that might have served for a village steeple, and must indubitably have figured in the days of the Covenanters. From under this, his nose curved boldly forth, flushed with a frost bitten bloom that seemed the very trophy of a December blast. He was accompanied by the blue-eyed romp, dished up as 'Dame Mince-Pie,' in the venerable magnificence of faded brocade, long stomacher, peaked hat, and high-heeled shoes."

A visit from St. Nicholas, with pictures by J. W. Smith.

"Your little red book tells the story of St. Nicholas' visit just as Clement Moore wrote it down as a present for his own little girls that Christmas Eve, never dreaming that he was writing our American Christmas poem. The children liked their father's present so much that they showed it to some of the many visitors who were always coming to stay at Chelsea. One of them copied it into her album, and when she went home (she lived in Troy,

New York) gave it to the editor of the Troy Sentinel, who published it with an old wood-cut of St. Nicholas the very next Christmas (December 23, 1823).

"Other newspapers copied it, and the boys and girls all over the country soon knew the poem by heart and have been repeating it on Christmas Eve ever since."¹

THIS WRITING WORLD OF JUNIOR BOOKS

WHAT we want in books for young people is what we want in books for ourselves—life in all its infinite variations and art in all its manifold forms. Books are to their readers extensions of life. Not long ago Paul Valery questioned whether books might not some time cease to be. And it is true that movies, automobiles, and radios do seem sometimes like destroyers of books—until we take deliberate account of the forces at work for books.

First of all there are the writers themselves who definitely have the urge to create something fine and sincere or the gift of setting down adequately their rich and vital experiences. We have shown in this book list the long and gay procession of their books, and we have tried to give some idea of the degree of talent and genius that have created them. As Charles Lamb, Kingsley, and Hawthorne made important contributions to children's literature by retellings of the old classics in such forms as to count again as literature, so Padraic Colum is to-day using his gifts as poet and writer in the same way. He has enriched the field with such notable volumes as The Children's Homer, The Children of Odin, and The Island of the Mighty. There are two books which grew in different ways out of the World War: The Story of Dr. Do-little, by Hugh Lofting, and Elizabeth Cleveland Miller's Children of the Mountain Eagle. Then there are Roses of the Winds and A Daughter of the Samurai. In each a woman of another country, living now in America, has told of life in her homeland. Mrs. Lustig's Roses of the Winds is fiction, but it rests upon family history of several generations in Russia. Mrs. Sugimoto's book tells of her childhood and girlhood in Japan and has the quality expressed by the word "art." Dhan Mukerji's stories have their roots in his native land. Mr. Mukerji was brought up in India as a Brahmin priest. His Kari the Elephant, Hari the Jungle Boy, Jungle Beasts and Men, and Gay Neck all incorporate the childhood and boyhood life he knew there. Cornelia Meigs, in speaking of her own work in this field, has used two words which seem important, too, in the making of this literature—"intense pleasure." Art in children's books, then, would seem to be the creative expression of material upon which the imagination has dwelt with such intense pleasure, joy of the spirit, as to fertilize it in the subconscious mind like a seed in the earth.

So we have the creative force itself working for literature for young people, and stimulating and encouraging it we have other forces of great importance. Since 1850 public libraries have come to play an increasingly important part in the educational and pleasure life of American cities and towns. Along with the general library have developed the children's departments, intelligently and actively presenting their stock of carefully chosen books. Then, too, a quiet revolution is going on in schools. Teachers concern themselves more and more with the children's reading of other than school books of the old order for these new books have the depth and richness that make them educationally valuable. The demand for books from the libraries together with the work of schools has had its effect upon parents and other people who like to buy books for children. All these influences together have wrought upon bookstores. Where children's books were once a seasonal business these books are now stocked, displayed, and sold the year through.

The first publisher responded to this new order of things ten years ago when an important New York house established a separate children's department and appointed as its head a young woman properly qualified in personality, background, and training. Since that time to this date, eight other New York firms and one house in Boston have followed this lead. In these houses books for boys and girls have become the sole interest of one able person, with special vision and ability. She has time for those contacts with authors and illustrators, which are so rich in results. She has time for adventurous outside contacts which are steadily producing books from people with unusual experience and special ability, people who had perhaps not thought of combining the two in a book for children or young people. These women are making books of real beauty, in form as well as in substance. A book which is planned as a unit—to express its text in size, type, manner of illustration—has a very different appearance from a book planned in parts by different people. Another natural and gratifying tendency is to publish books of greater maturity and depth. In other words, books which ten years ago would certainly never have been considered for juvenile publication are now so published.

Lastly, in this consideration of these new tendencies and accomplishments in junior books we have the boys and girls themselves to consider. They are becoming more and more discriminating and more unconsciously critical and are reading in a far wider range of subjects than ever before. The time is coming when any book that lacks sincerity, vigor, and reality will be neglected on the shelf for they will have none of it.

It is not surprising, then, that at last has begun—largely through the vision of Miss Anne Carroll Moore of the New York Public Library—adequate reviewing of these fine books for young people. At present all newspapers give increasing space to them, and the Herald Tribune, in its "Three Owls" page, and the Saturday Review in its "Children's Bookshop," each devote regular space to boys' and girls' reading. Then too there is our own Horn Book, The Bookshop quarterly, which for the past four years has spread the gospel of good books for young people to an increasingly large number of subscribers.

To-day, then, it is worth while for writers of talent and indeed genius to devote their best efforts to junior books. Their audience is large and fine. Their books will have a long life. They will add more trees to the slopes of the sacred mountain, making joyous paths to Parnassus.
